OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Jumping an Oil Claim

By ALAN HINSDALE

It is hard to tell just how a man will act when called upon to display nerve and resource. Sometimes one who has been accustomed to a rough life, under such circumstances, will fail, while another will succeed.

Henderson had been a hardworking man all his life, most of the time on the frontier, where if any one trait is developed it is courage. When Henderson was fifty he found himself in possession of some wild land that was not worth a dollar an acre, and his title to that was imperfect for the want of a certain name on the deed.

One day somebody struck oil in the neighborhood of Henderson's property. About that time Ernest Deering, a young recent graduate of a mining school, came along on his way to investigate some property for parties in the east. He stayed overnight at Henderson's house and was about to proceed in the morning when Henderson told him of his oil land. Deering had inherited some money a year before, and Henderson offered him a half interest in his land if he would furnish a boring outfit with which to dig for oil. Deering concluded to invest in the enterprise, provided Henderson would get the missing signature to his title.

Henderson sent his daughter Margaret off to hunt for the party and secure the signature. Deering attended to the work he had come west to do and returned to Henderson's. Margaret wrote that she was on the track of the party and expected surely to succeed in perfecting the title to the land. Meanwhile Henderson had ordered the boring outfit on credit.

One day a man rode up to where the work was going on and claimed the property, producing an old deed that had been superseded by the one Henderson held. Henderson ordered him off the premises. He went away, threatening to return with a force sufficiently strong to drive away what he called the jumpers of his property.

The force engaged was Henderson, Deering and three hired men. They were absolutely without arms, and if attacked the person who proposed to dispossess them would be well provided with weapons. And there was no doubt that the attempt would be made. The ownership to the property depended on Margaret Henderson securing the missing signature. Meanwhile everything depended upon holding the well and especially the machinery used in boring it.

Owing to the lack of arms Henderson saw no possibility of holding the property. He told Deering that if the jumpers came down on them in sufficient force and well armed he saw no way but for them to surrender. The hired men looked upon Henderson as able, if any one was, to assume the leadership and were not anxious to be shot down in defense of property belonging to others. Deering was a delicate little fellow, and no one thought of him in the matter of defense, though he had indorsed Henderson's notes for the machinery, and if it passed into other hands he would be the loser.

But in that delicate body were both courage and resource, and these go far to make up a natural leadership. He told Henderson that he was going to make a defense. Henderson refused to consent to a defense under the circumstances, but he would not desert the others. Deering offered the men a goodly reward if they would put themselves under his command and outlined his plan of defense to them. They agreed to stand by him.

Deering ordered them to throw up the earth in a circle surrounding the boiler that produced the power for the drilling. They made an embankment five feet high in a circle about twenty feet in diameter. This having been accomplished, what wood and iron articles as were at hand were piled on the parapet in such fashion as to form apertures here and there in two of loop holes. This was all the preparation that was made for defense, and when it was completed the boring recommenced.

The next day half a dozen men were seen approaching the well. Some of them had guns, while the others were armed with revolvers. Steering told Henderson and the men that since there was only one weapon for defense and he could handle that himself, they were at liberty to retreat if they liked. They chose to remain, asserting that it might be necessary for one or more of them to take his place.

When the approaching party saw the earthworks they stopped for a conference, then advanced again, and one of them called out a demand for a surrender. Deering replied that he was hard of hearing and asked them to come nearer. At this every man lower ed his rifle from his shoulder or drew his revolver, and they advanced in a body. When they had reached a point to suit Deering he directed a man at the steam cock to turn on steam. Deering holding the nozzle of a hose connected with the boiler. A jet of steam struck the foremost man in the face. A panic followed. Several shots were fired. Deering could have perforated every man of them, but refrained from doing so, pointing the steam jet aside. The man he had hit was in a terrible condition, and the others took him up and carried him off.

That was the end of the claim jumping. Margaret Henderson a few days later procured the signature she had been sent for, oil was struck in large quantities, and all were made rich.

MAKING CHAMPAGNE WITHIN RANGE OF BIG GERMAN GUNS

How France is keeping up her commercial activities despite the war, and the wonderful efforts that the civilian population is making, was the keynote of an interview given to the Herald yesterday by the Marquis de Polignac, who has come over here in charge of the government's exhibit at the Allied Bazaar to be held in Grand Central Palace. The Marquis related as an instance how the workmen in the Pommery champagne cellars at Rheims, only nine kilometre from the German lines ply their labors daily.

"Their spirit is wonderful," said the Marquis. "There are more than three hundred of them, and they go and come to and from work to their humble dwellings absolutely unmindful of the German bombardment. Sometimes they may be a bit late, if the cannonading is very heavy, but they would consider it a dishonor if they did not appear. Of course, while they are at work in the cellars they are absolutely sheltered, but going to and fro they have no protection.

"Then, too, in carrying out the gathering of the grapes our people show themselves to great advantage. The work is, of course done only by fits and starts. When it is possible to obtain some old vehicle or to get a railway car the gathering is made."

The Marquis, who is stopping at the Biltmore Hotel, said that France was sincerely grateful to the United States for the great services rendered and that she is only too ready to show her appreciation.

"That is why," he went on "when Mr. Harjes mentioned to the authorities that he would like to obtain an exhibit from the French government the wheels were at once put in motion, and in eight days, mind you—a very short time under the present conditions—guns were assembled, uniforms rushed through, and all sorts of war materials gathered, 120 tons in all, and ready for shipment. France was glad to be of service to the American people.

"You must remember, too, that France is grateful not alone for the big gifts that prominent persons have showered upon us, but also for the little gifts, the anonymous offerings that have reached us in such great quantities, and of which no mention has been made in the newspapers, but which have been of such aid to our soldiers and to our poor people in their need. France thanks the United States.

The Marquis is one of the best known sportsmen in France at the present time. A pioneer in aviation, it was due to his efforts that the first international aviation tournament was held at Rheims, his home town, and he is the donor of the Pommery Cup. He is one of the three men representing France on the international Olympic committee and is prominently identified with the Auto club, the Automobile club, the Academie des Sports. He was the founder in 1913 of France's first school of physical culture, the College des Athletes.

One would never believe to see this quiet, gentlemanly man that this same gentleman has fought as a private of line infantry under the tricolor of France from the first offensive movement that ended at Charleroi, through the retreat, the battle of the Marne and along the fighting line in France, until a month ago, when he was detailed in charge of the French exhibit.

The Marquis, who is a very wealthy man, and head of the Pommery champagne works, went with his men at the first call of mobilization, marched for months as a private in the ranks, as so many other Frenchmen did, in the "most democratic army in the world", and then having arrived at the rank of sergeant was detached to the aviation service, where he has done good work.

"Yes, I expect to go back into the service when I return. I do not believe the war will be over by then," he said. "And let me tell you something; the war will not be over until France and her allies are victorious. It may take, it probably will take, a long time; but France is resolved. She will fight to the very end. Do not be misled by peace propositions which emanate from Berlin. Peace will come when Germany meets the terms of the Allies and not before.

"I would like to say a word," he announced, "for the American flying squadron. I did not have the pleasure of seeing them when I came back, but I know that they are daring and brilliant aviators, and that, they will live up to the reputation that your Americans held in all lines of sport."

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast for awhile will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a scarcely twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment

SERBIA'S BRAVE BOYS FIND HELL ON EARTH

Leaderless Lads Starved by Wayside as They Tramped From Desolated Homeland—Terrible Tragedy

An Italian war correspondent, who accompanied the Serbian army on its flight to the Adriatic says: "Future generations when they read of the Serbian drama, will refuse to believe this fearful story of suffering and misery. I witnessed the entrance of the Austrians into Belgrade and the bloody street fights which took place in the Serbian capital, and I saw the retreat to the Morava and the desperation of the Shumadija Division. I saw the exodus of a whole nation amid the silence of death, the long trains of wagons driven by women and the sad long struggle in the wandering capital at Nish and in the hotel where the Skupshtina met I heard the last pronouncements of the dying nation. But this suffering was overshadowed by what I saw later.

"More tragic than Belgrade and the Morava, than Mitrovitza and Kossovo Vilo—a piece of hell on the enchanted isle of Corfu—lies in Serbia's path of sorrow. While Serbia was dying the recruiting drum was beaten in the Old Serbian provinces to summon the boys of seventeen, sixteen and fifteen years. These boys who might have been strong enough to shoulder a gun in a year or two were called to arms because the government was informed by the allies that the war would never be given up and might last for years. About 30,000 of these youthful recruits were collected, but only a small part of them reached the sea and Corfu. The regular troops on their retreat through the Albanian mountains had at least guides and leaders and they possessed some food, but the boy recruits were leaderless and had nothing to still their hunger.

The March of Death

"On the Albanian frontier they were met by a Serbian officer who pointed to the west and said: 'March straight ahead. In a month you will reach the sea and there you will find ships to take you to a place of safety.' The officer returned to his regiment and the recruits marched on to the west through many long weeks. Hundreds of the boys dropped from exhaustion, hunger and cold and their camp sites were always marked by the bodies of troops of young fellows who had laid themselves down to sleep, never to awake again.

"The bark of trees and grass formed their only nourishment. When the column reached the Adriatic only 15,000 of the boys were left and many died on the shore before they could be embarked. Less than 9,000 of the fugitives reached the steamers and all of these were living corpses. Twenty-four hours later the ships cast anchor before Corfu, but on the short sea voyage several hundred more of the boys died. The rest of the recruits was landed at Vido, among olive and orange trees in one of the most beautiful spots of God's earth. Many weeks passed since, but still the boys are dying and in a short time nothing will be left of them. Many might have been saved, but there were no hospitals, no beds and no nurses for them on Corfu. A single physician had to take care of all. Later a few more doctors arrived, but death continued its fearful harvest.

Too Late!

"The fugitives now have beds, food and good care, but still they die. Their emaciated bodies are no longer able to assimilate the nourishment given to them and the southern sun does not warm them. Silently, ghastly pale and racked with fever they lie under their tents awaiting death. Vido is a hell surrounded by a garden of roses. On the shore the ship San Francesco d'Assisi receives a cargo of dead bodies day after day to take them out to sea where the unfortunate boys find their last resting place.

HOLLAND'S CHANCES

Rasmaekers Convinced Germany Wants War—The Spies Overrun

Of Holland's danger Louis Rasmaekers, the artist, says: "In my country I think there are a quarter of a million Germans. There are many thousands of them in Amsterdam and almost every German is a spy. I estimate that there are also thousands of military spies. The Germans know all our weaknesses and our strength. Near Limburg, in a district where there are quite unimportant villages, they have built numerous railways. The grass has been growing between the rails for thirty-five years, and there were no trains running when I was there, and I have spent ten years in the neighborhood. We shall see whether the Germans consider themselves strong enough to 'hack a way' through.

The concentration of their troops on our frontier was surely part of a carefully laid plan, the development of which we shall soon witness. It was as deliberate as the sinking of the Tubantia and the Palembang. I should imagine that the sinking of these vessels was done with the avowed object of provoking a sharp note from the Dutch Government and such an outburst of feeling in Holland as would give the Germans a pretext for declaring war and making an attempt at securing the mouth of the Rhine, which they have so long coveted. I am so convinced that my views are correct that, although forty-seven years of age, I have decided to volunteer for service in the Dutch army.

The German armies will meet with a warm reception when they do cross the frontier, but it is idle to underestimate the power of the invaders. It is well known that as a last resort we have a powerful means of defence in the flooding of vast areas of the country between our frontiers and the principal towns. But the Germans are perfectly well aware of this plan and know very much more about it than the average Dutchman. It must be remembered, too, in calculating our chances that our guns were made in Germany, and Krupp's agents know a good deal of our whole defensive lore."

AUTO RECIPROCITY IS POPULAR AT THE BORDER

WINDSOR, May 30.—Ferry boats Sunday carried the greatest number of automobiles between Windsor and Detroit that have ever been called upon to handle except during the summer race meetings. It was the first Sunday since the new agreement between Michigan and Ontario on the interchange of automobile licenses became effective, and car-owners on both sides of the lines were quick to take advantage of it. The streets and country roads leading out of Windsor were a panorama of American machines all afternoon.

Limbs Amputated With Penknives

Butcher Knives Also Used in Operations on Sussex Survivors.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Arms and legs of maimed survivors of the torpedoed Sussex were amputated with pen knives and butcher knives from the cook's galley wielded by inexperienced fellow passengers as the rescuing British destroyer bore them to Dover from the scene of the disaster. There were no anaesthetics available.

Edward Marshall, who was among the saved passengers of the Sussex, arrived yesterday on the Lapland, and told the shocking details of the Sussex tragedy. As a war correspondent in Cuba during the Spanish War, Mr. Marshall was wounded and suffered the loss of a leg. Some knowledge of army surgery and first-aid made his services valuable to the maimed survivors of the Sussex. He used his sharp pocket knife upon shattered limbs, bandaged wounds, placed tourniquets and bathed the wounds of his less fortunate fellow passengers. But some of them were past saving and died before or soon after they were landed on English soil.

"There were no surgeons," said Mr. Marshall, "either aboard the Sussex or the destroyer, and the badly injured men, about seven of them, I think, were moaning for aid, and something had to be done for them. There was nothing in the shape of an anaesthetic, no surgeon's tools, and we had to act quickly. Those who had sharp knives used them. Other implements were obtained from the cook, and we did what we could.

"During one of the operations on a man who had both legs badly shattered the destroyer turned on her zig-zag course to avoid an oncoming torpedo, and the man was thrown against us and off the table. He bled to death before we could stop the flow of blood."

J. J. HILL

Railway magnate, known as the "empire builder of the American North West," who has died at St. Paul, Minn. At his death he was president of the Great Northern Railway. He is a Canadian, having been born at Rockford, Ontario.

Romantic Biography of The Late James J. Hill

James Jerome Hill, one of the greatest and most successful railway builders and organisers and one of the most remarkable financial geniuses of his time, was born on a backwoods farm in the vicinity of Rockwood, Wellington County, Province of Ontario, on September 16, 1839. His father was one of the early settlers of that region, coming from the north of Ireland. His mother was a Dunbar, descended from the famous Scottish family of that name, who trace their lineage to the Stuarts in direct line. The Dunbars, however, were driven from their native country and were compelled to seek refuge in the New World. It is somewhat remarkable that, in spite of the fact that his father was an Orangeman, and his mother a victim of old-time Catholic enmity, Mr. Hill imbibed no religious prejudices. He gave convincing evidence of that fact by donating in all nearly $1,000,000 for founding and endowing a Roman Catholic institution, the St. Thomas Seminary and College at St. Paul.

Although descended from a long line of hard-working tillers of the soil and in spite of the example set to him by his thrifty father, young Hill never liked manual work of any kind. Particularly did he dislike farm work. Neither threats nor persuasion could induce him to turn from his beloved books to the necessary work in the fields. Every moment of his spare time he devoted to reading. From his books he not only gained an invaluable education, but habits of industry and application as well, and as his reading was selected judiciously with a view to ultimate benefit, it became an instrument to aid success which might have been impossible without it.

When his father, after many abortive attempts at persuasion and coercion, came to the conclusion that Jim could not be induced to do farm work, he decided to send him to school and make of him a Presbyterian minister. Young Hill was sent to the Rockwood academy, where he devoted himself for ten years to his task of acquiring a classical education. When the boy had reached his eighteenth year he came to the conclusion that he was not cut out for the pulpit. He abandoned his studies and obtained a position as clerk in a local general store.

Young Hill performed his duties so conscientiously and well that his employer soon placed him in sole charge of a branch establishment in the neighbouring city of Gueph. His ambition, however, was too great to be satisfied with success in such a small way. Soon he gave up his position and started on a trip of observation through the country. First he travelled through the eastern States of the Union, but later he turned toward the west, and in due time reached St. Paul, at that time a town of only about 5,000 inhabitants.

When He Reached St. Paul.

At that time St. Paul had no railroad, but it was, nevertheless, full of life and activity, being the terminal of a number of steamship lines, connecting the head of the river with the prosperous towns and districts on the middle and lower Mississippi. Young Hill soon found employment as a levee clerk with J. W. Bass and Company, agents of the Dubuque and St. Paul Packet Company, at a salary of fifty cents a day. A year later he transferred his services to the firm of Brownson, Lewis and White, with whom he remained about three years. Next in turn he worked one year for Temple and Beaupre, and still later four years for Borup and Champlin, agents of the Galena Packet Company, and the Davidson line of steamers.

When the war broke out Hill became infected with the excitement then so prevalent, and, together with E. F. Shelley, organized a company of cavalry, which he offered to the State. Minnesota did not want any cavalry at that time, however, and Captain Shelley, with the majority of the company, crossed the line into Iowa, and entered the service of that State. Hill returned to his regular employment and made no further effort of a warlike nature.

During the many years spent in the employ of river transportation companies, Hill thoroughly mastered every detail of the important business, which enabled him to advance a step. He obtained the St. Paul agency of the Northwestern Packet Company and retained until the line was consolidated with the Davidson line of river steamers in 1867. In the same year he became the agent for the St. Paul and Pacific Railway Company (the nucleus of the present great Hill system), receiving and transferring freight to and from steamboats, and he built a large warehouse on the river bank, which stood until a few years ago. In the meantime he had also entered the fuel business in a small way, and in the year 1865 he entered into partnership with Chauncey W. Griggs, George Armstrong, E. N. Saunders and George S. Acker, under the firm name of Hill, Griggs and Company, in the fuel business, and this firm brought in the first coal used in St. Paul.

His connection with the firm of Hill, Griggs & Co., lasted until 1875. In the meantime, in 1870, Hill embarked in the first of those ventures, which later made him famous, by founding the Red River Transportation Company, operating boats on the Red River of the North, connecting at the end of the St. Paul and Pacific, and running to the city of Winnipeg. It was a big undertaking for a man of no greater wealth than Hill possessed at that time. He paid $20,000 for his first steamer and other expenses were numerous and heavy. The result justified his judgment, however, and his first year was profitable. In the autumn of 1871 he effected a consolidation with the competing line owned by Norman W. Mittson, operating between Moorehead, Minn., and Winnipeg, Manitoba. Mr. Mittson at that time was agent for the Hudson Bay Company, and associated with him and Hill was Donald A. Smith, afterwards Lord Strathcona, chief-commissioner of the Hudson Bay Company.

The people of Minnesota had in the meantime became infected with the railway fever. Back in the '50's, the territorial legislature had made a grant of land to the St. Paul and Pacific Company, but nothing came of it and the action was rescinded. In 1857 the Minesota and Pacific was incorporated and the old St. Paul and Pacific grant was turned over to it. This also proved a failure. Work on it was begun, but soon abandoned owing to the panic which swept over the country and made it impossible to obtain funds for carrying on the enterprise. Not until several years later was the proposed line built, but it did not prove a paying investment and in 1873 went into the hands of a receiver.

HIS FIRST GREAT COUP.

Hill, who in the meantime had accumulated a fortune of about $100,000, and who was convinced that the road offered great possibilities under proper management, interested a number of British and Canadian capitalists in his plans and formed a stock company, which purchased the securities of the railroad company at a very low rate. When the mortgage was foreclosed, Hill and his associates bid in the property. The company was reorganized as the St. Paul Minneapolis and Manitoba Railroad Company, with Lord Mount Stephen then just plain George Stephen, as president, and Mr. Hill as general manager.

When the new Company took control of the road it comprised 427 miles of track, and the additions immediately made amounted to 220 miles, making a total of 667 miles. This was capitalised at $31,000,000. At the end of their first year the equipment consisted of 65 locomotives, 60 passenger, baggage and express cars and 1,523 freight and other cars of all sorts and description. The marvellous success of the enterprise was due in a large measure to the skilful management by Mr. Hill who had shown himself not only a man of remarkable foresight but a financier of unusual ability.

In 1883 the Great Northern Railway was formally opened and there was great enthusiasm throughout Minnesota. It ran from Duluth to the ocean and Hill was its president. The event was celebrated in St. Paul by great festivities and so determined were the citizens to do honour to Mr. Hill, that they insisted upon these festivities, notwithstanding the offer of Mr. Hill to donate for the erection of a public library an amount equal to any amount which the city might appropriate for that purpose instead of spending the money for parades, floats, fireworks etc.

After Mr. Hill had realised his dream of an independent line to the Pacific Coast and trains were running daily over his road between St. Paul and Tacoma and Seattle, he began to extend his system. He started a line of magnificent steamers between Seattle and Japan, and established a fine line of steamers plying between Buffalo and Duluth giving him an outlet to the Atlantic Coast. In addition to that he built numerous feeders, throughout the great grain belt of the Northwest and a string of grain elevators for storing and distributing the golden harvests of the tributory regions.

Although always an extremely busy man, and occupied with matters of great importance to the Commonwealth, Mr. Hill found time to lead a model home life. He was always fond of books and a great lover of art. In his magnificent residence in St. Paul he had one of the finest private collections of paintings in the country, containing many priceless masterpieces of older masters. Eight miles north of St. Paul he had a fine farm of more than 4,000 acres, called "North Oaks," where he devoted himself to scientific farming and stock breeding. He did not derive any profit from his farm, however as he sold the young stock to farmers and breeders along his railroad lines for prices ordinarily demanded for common, unimproved stock.

PROMISED TO AID BELGIUM.

Belgium, in addition to the trunk lines of railway passing through, had a system of light railways bringing practically every part of the kingdom in touch with the large centres. When the Germans devastated the country the whole railway system was wrecked. King Albert invited Mr. James J. Hill to prepare plans and direct the work of reconstruction when the war was over, a task which the Railway King immediately accepted.

He was also summoned to New York as one of the leading spirits when a conference of the country's financiers was summoned to meet the Anglo-French Commission visiting the United States to float a loan of many millions for the Allies.

Mr. Hill was a regular visitor to Montreal, coming here in his steam yacht every summer, with a large party of his friends to go down the St. Lawrence on a fishing trip. He would have the catch boxed up in ice and sent all over the United States to his numerous business and personal friends. This was one of the relaxations he felt he must take, although his business duties frequently compelled him to cut short his vacation and return to the United States leaving his friends to come back in the yacht later.

From a world viewpoint it would be hard to say whether his staunch support of the Belgian people, following the invasion of the Germans, or the part he played in the negotiations for the $500,000,000 loan to the Allied governments, is the more important.

From the time the work of succouring the Belgians began Mr. Hill took a prominent part. It probably will never be known how much money he sent to King Albert, an old personal friend, and how much he induced others to send.

His place as an international figure was never more prominently displayed than when the representatives of the Allies came to New York in quest of a huge loan. One of the first men to be sent for by J. P. Morgan was Mr. Hill, and his assurance that he and the people of the Northwest were prepared to do their share in taking up the foreign bonds is believed to have contributed largely to the success of the negotiations.

His claim to being the original advocate of livestock development in the Northwest is unquestioned, and since the retirement of A. B. Stickney he has been the most ardent exponent of the upbuilding of the industry, a work which has been taken up by his son, Louis W. Hill.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

This creation in a dressy waist expresses the newest note in fashion with a large cape collar that is part and parcel of the waist itself. There is a frill following its edges, a trimming feature that is also introduced on the fancy cuff of the short sleeve. The fronts of the waist turn back in revers on the cape collar and show decoration with embroidered dots. The cape collar, covering as it does the entire waist front, gives emphasis to the fulness and the surplice style of closing is in the very best taste for this model. It may be developed in silk, lawn, batiste, crepe or organdie—any material that will be soft and lend itself to frills or ruffles. Long sleeves may be used as a substitute for the short sleeve design; in using long sleeves a frill alone for a cuff on each will properly finish them.

This pattern is cut in sizes 34-42 inches bust measure. To copy the design in size 38 you will need 2¼ yards of material 36 inches wide.

To obtain the pattern send only 10 cents in stamps or coin to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

CALLS FOR RUSSIAN UNITY

Burtzef Says Solid Front to Foes Alone Will Win the War

Russians of all degrees are again called upon to present a solid front to the enemy in order to save the cause of democracy in Europe, by Vladimir Burtzef in an article written for the Birgewja Wjendomosty of Petrograd and reprinted in part by the Berliner Tageblatt of April 18. Burtzef, who is popularly known as the "Sherlock Holmes of the Russian Revolution," because of his work in uncovering Azef and many other agents of the secret police, is labouring with a will for the triumph of the Russian arms, and, according to a report sent out from Vienna some four months ago, has joined the aviation service.

In the course of his article Burtzef says:

"At the beginning of the war, we (the members of the Extreme Left), recognized the fact that it was our sacred duty to devote all our strength to one object, that of aiding our army in its difficult task. Thus we drew a distinction between purposes and opinions. For no matter how earnest we are in our work for the army, we have not renounced forever the political struggle that we were carrying on up to the beginning of the war. We did not suddenly honour what we had scorned, nor did we scorn that which we had honoured. No, we merely put aside what might have proved a handicap in the present struggle. Thus the political truce was created, that temporary agreement between the Right and Left which was made historic by the memorable Duma session of July, 1914.

"Russia's sole chance of victory consists in adhering to the slogan of 'Everything for the war.' When the war broke out I was far from Russia—in France. I saw the efforts our friends were making for the war and I discussed the resolutions adopted by the Duma at the war session of July with Prince Krapotkin and Plechanof. We asked each other if it were true that Russia, the Russian Government, really was in earnest and meant to make the watchword of 'Everything for the war' a fact. Today I repeat the question if everything really has happened that could have happened and that ought to have happened. With a heavy heart I must answer myself with 'No; it hasn't happened.' It is the duty of us all to recognize this openly and in a way intelligible to all.

"But, then, don't we know that? I recently had the good fortune to listen attentively for days to what was being debated in the Taurian Palace, to what has been said there with so much self-torment. But there were many things that should have been said there that were not mentioned, and the tone of the discussion was not what I thought necessary there. While some were honourably serving their country, undeterred by any sacrifices, there were others who proceeded to exploit their advantageous position and to count upon those who did not consider a settlement at present timely.

"We must have the courage to see, however, that we are opposed by a powerful enemy that is well organized and that is a unit in adhering to the slogan of 'Everything for the war.' We must learn from him what this motto signifies, and how it is to be translated into deeds. Germany places itself heart and soul in the service of the war. All discordances and oppositions between political opponents have been set aside. Everything responds to the common initiative, which has given the Government confidence in victory. We lack that in Russia. If we love our homes we, too, must know no parties as long as the war lasts. We must stake everything upon filling the people's soul with inspiration and avoid everything that may hinder the organization of our forces for the war."

Burtzef, in pointing out what he and his party expect following a victorious war, says:

"This assembling of the joint forces of the people should also give the signal for the watchword that must be the guide of Russian life in the future. If Russia wins Europe is saved and democracy is guided to victory. If we have a democratic Germany and Austria as neighbours, the ground is plowed for the favourable development of the political life of Russia also."

What Is Uric Acid?

THE CAUSE OF BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, GRAVEL AND SUDDEN DEATH.

Ever since the discovery of uric acid in the blood by Scheele, in 1775, and the bad effect it had upon the body, scientists and physicians have striven to rid the tissues and the blood of this poison. Because of its overabundance in the system it causes backache, pains here and there, rheumatism, gout, gravel, neuralgia and sciatica. It was Dr. Pierce who discovered a new agent, called "Anuric," which will throw out and completely eradicate this uric acid from the system. "Anuric" has proved to be 37 times more potent than lithia, and consequently you need no longer fear muscular or articular rheumatism or gout, or many other diseases which are dependent on an accumulation of uric acid within the body. Send to Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., for a pamphlet on "Anuric," or send 10 cents for a trial package of "Anuric Tablets." If you feel that tired, worn-out feeling, backache, neuralgia, or if your sleep is disturbed by too frequent urination, go to your best drug store and ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. They are put up in 50-cent packages.

Doctor Pierce's reputation is back of this medicine and you know that his "Golden Medical Discovery" for the blood and his "Favorite Prescription" for the ills of women have had a splendid reputation for the past fifty years.

Doctor Pierce's Pellets are unequaled as a Liver Pill. One tiny Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

To polish oilcloth add a tablespoonful of parafin to the water used for washing it, and it will look as if polished with beeswax.

THE VERDUN BATTLE MORE FURIOUS THAN EVER

Two More Peterborough Soldiers Are Dead

Counter Attacks By the French Regain Most of the Lost Ground

Most Violent Battle Yet Fought on the Northwestern Front of Verdun is Continuing Without Cessation---French Evacuate First Line Trench South of Camettes Wood ---Germans Launch Attack After Attack on a Narrow Front and Are Repulsed With Heavy Loss.

WHOLE REGIMENTS OF FOE ANNIHILATED

PARIS (French Official Communique), May 31. — The French troops were compelled to evacuate the first line trench south of Caurettes Woods, and to retire south of Cumieres village, in the direction of Chattancourt station under most violent German attacks, the War Office announced to-day.

By a counter attack last night the French regained the lost ground south of Cumieres.

The Germans meanwhile treated the French positions to a terrific artillery fire. A first line trench south of Caurettes Woods was completely levelled by German fire, and was of necessity abandoned.

South of Cumieres village the German attack became so violent that the French relinquished their hold on the works west of the Meuse, and fell back along the railway leading to Chattancourt station, half a mile east of Chattancourt village. The fighting continued along the railway throughout the afternoon. In the evening a brilliant counter attack drove the Germans back to their former positions near the village. One German detachment which had managed to reach the Meuse was completely annihilated by French fire.

In Upper Alsace the Germans following intense artillery preparation captured a few elements of trenches east of Heffors.

They were immediately driven out by a counter attack.

Throughout yesterday the most violent battle yet fought on the northwestern front of Verdun continued without cessation.

The struggle grew more furious toward nightfall and was continuing early to-day.

Between the Meuse and Dead Mans Hill the Germans launched attack after attack on a two and one-half-mile front.

These attacks for the most part were completely repulsed by the French time and again, beating back the German assaults until the front was literally covered with dead and wounded.

While regiments of Germans were probably annihilated.

LONDON, May 31.—In a series of powerful attacks the Crown Prince had driven southward to within six miles of the northwestern gates of Verdun, the nearest approach of the Germans on the west bank of the Meuse since the titanic struggle for the fortress began 100 days ago. The Germans, however, were unable to hold their gains, and were swept back upon Cumieres village by a French counter attack. One German column pressing forward in pursuit of the retreating Frenchmen, was pinched against the bank of the Meuse by the counter attack and wiped out.

SAYS ALLISON WAS WITHIN RIGHTS TO TAKE COMMISSION

Sir Sam Hughes Takes That View But Says That He Himself Had(No Monetary Interests in the Transactions

SAYS PAPERS WERE STOLEN

OTTAWA, May 31.—Although Commissioner Justice Duff and Opposition lawyers disapproved, Chairman Chief Justice Sir Wm. Meredith today ruled that Sir Sam Hughes might give evidence as to money saved Britain by Col. Allison. Sir Sam then testified that he employed Allison, but had no monetary interests in the transactions himself either directly or indirectly.

Mr. Hellmuth asked Sir Sam if he did not feel himself free to barter and trade himself. If I had been out of a job, said Sir Sam, I could have gone out and made millions.

At the same time he thought Col. Allison was quite within his rights to make commissions on the deals.

During his cross examination this afternoon Sir Sam Hughes said that his offices had been broken into to get paper. We have found, said he, that some gentlemen in this room have gone to New York and hired men to steal papers and generally carry on the campaign. We have affidavits to that effect. These men were associated with Mr. Carvell and Mr. Markle.

Sir Wm. Meredith said this was a serious statement and should be investigated. Mr. Johnston and Mr. Carvell said that some papers had come through the mails to them anonymously.

Sir Wm. said this was a very satisfactory statement and he was glad to hear it.

Have Your Rags Ready For the Collectors

The rags will be collected to-night between 5.30 and 8.30 from all the streets on and north of Edinburgh street, and on and west of Benson. Mrs. Young will be in charge to-night and some of the older boys from that district have kindly offered their assistance. All the housekeepers are asked to have their rags, papers and old rubbers ready. Thursday night between the same hours the collection will be made from all the streets east of Benson and north of Smith; also Dublin street and all the streets intersecting Dublin street for one block each way.

All members are specially requested to attend. Any visiting brethren will be cordially welcome.

ALL ATTACKS SO FAR HAVE BEEN REPULSED BY ITALIAN TROOPS

LONDON, May 31.—The official statement issued last night by the War Office at Rome admits that the Austrians have renewed their offensive in the Posina region, but claims that all attacks so far have been repulsed. This is in direct contradiction of the Austrian reports of a large success.

The Austrian communication further reports the capture of another of the chain of armoured forts which guard the Italian railways south of the Asiago-Arsiero line. This work known as Punta Gorbin, fell into the hands of the Austrians Monday.

Great activity in both the Sugana and Lagarina Valleys is reported by Rome.

ENEMY NEARING ASIAGO.

Last night the Austrians were reported to be within three miles of Asiago, while an official statement from Vienna announced a fresh advance against Arsiero. The Austrian big guns, which have been brought to the front, are reported to be demolishing both Asiago and Arsiero.

The number of Italians taken prisoner has been increased to 30,000.

SITUATION IMPROVING.

The position of the Italian defensive lines is continually improving. The Austrian attack on the centre has come to a standstill because of the disastrous failure of the offensives on both wings.

More than 60,000 wounded have been removed during the last fortnight by Austrian trains.

ITALIANS RETAIN POSITIONS.

To-day's Italian official report says:

"The situation is generally unchanged along the whole front, with the exception of the Posina zone and the upper Astico, where there has been a renewal of the enemy offensive.

"In the Lagarina Valley and in the Pasubio sector there has been an intense artillery duel and great activity. Enemy convoys were disturbed by our fire.

"South of Posina the enemy, following a violent artillery preparation, attacked in the direction of Soglia di Campiglia and Mount Priafera. After a desperate struggle our troops retain these positions.

"On the Asiago Plateau and in the Sugana Valley reconnoitring detachments have been active. Enemy artillery has begun the bombardment of Ospedaletto.

"In the Tofana zone we repulsed a small infantry attack.

"On the northern slopes of Monte San Michele we exploded a powerful mine, breaching a considerable extent of enemy trenches."

Kitchener Strongly Criticized By Churchill

LONDON, May 31.—Lord Kitchener, head of the British War Office, was made the target for the harshest criticism heard in the Commons since the beginning of the war this afternoon, when Col. Winston Churchill, the former First Lord of the Admiralty, rose to discuss the motion to reduce Kitchener's salary.

Churchill charged the War Office with "grave mismanagement inefficiency, and defective organization."

For every six soldiers in the British army we have but one rifle levelled at the enemy, declared the former Admiralty chief.

Churchill scored the War Office for breaking up seasoned battalions by sending them into slaughter while they had thousands of troops behind the lines.

He cited the case of the Ninth Scottish, which lost 4,000 out of 9,000 infantrymen in the bloody struggle at Loos.

Under-Secretary for War Tennant, replying to Churchill's criticism, said steps had been taken to send freshly drilled recruits to the fighting line, but that from a military standpoint it would be poor policy to oppose the Germans with forces of which were comparatively "green."

THE 93rd BATTALION MADE FINE IMPRESSION ON ARRIVAL IN CAMP

Reached Barriefield at 5 O'clock in Heavy Shower of Rain Amid Conditions That Could Not Have Been Beaten By Mud-Covered Plains of Salisbury Camp---Were Given a Warm Welcome and Are Being Complimented By All Says a Kingston Despatch to the Examiner --To-day's Military News.

Special to the Examiner:

BARRIEFIELD WAR CAMP, May 31.—The 93rd Battalion of Peterborough marched into the big war camp at Barriefield yesterday afternoon at five o'clock in command of Lieut.-Col. Johnston. It had been raining for most of the day, and the entire camp grounds were covered with mud and pools of water. A heavy shower of rain began to fall just as the Peterborough Battalion paraded before headquarters, but neither rain, mud, nor pools of water seemed to affect this splendid overseas unit.

The Peterborough Battalion is made up of a very fine type of men and officers, and will suffer nothing in comparison with the best battalions in this camp. The 93rd have a fine band and a good bugle band, and these were heard long before the battalion could be seen coming over the crest of the hill which shuts off a view of the city from the camp grounds.

Colonel Johnston and his men had no complaints to make on arrival in camp, although the conditions could not have been beaten by the mud covered plains of Salisbury Camp, which was the first overseas home of the First Canadian Contingent. Peterborough soldiers and officers took the conditions as a part of a soldier's life and duty, and they just smiled and pitched in to make themselves at home.

The 93rd were given a warm welcome by Colonel Hemming and the camp staff, and are being complimented by all on their appearance. They occupy the extreme western section of the camp grounds at Barriefield, directly opposite headquarters, and when things are properly arranged, will have the best site of any unit in camp. This morning the officers and men of the battalion were out on the camp grounds just as jovial as a peak of school boys. They sang and whistled and made things merry. Peterborough can well be proud of the 93rd Battalion, and Barriefield can understand how reluctant the people of Peterborough would be to part with such a splendid military aggregation.

Mr. J. Worboy, 507 Aylmer street has received the following letter of condolence from Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence. The letter follows:—

Dear Mr. Worboy,—"Will you kindly accept my sincere sympathy and condolence in the decease of that worthy citizen and heroic soldier, your son, Private Fred Worboy.

While one cannot too deeply mourn the loss of such a brave comrade, there is a consolation in knowing that he did his duty fearlessly and well, and gave his life for the cause of liberty and the upbuilding of the Empire.

Again extending to you my heartfelt sympathy.

Faithfully,

SAM HUGHES

Major General, Minister of Militia and Defence.

For some time there has been a discussion in local military circles in regard to the formation of a new Battalion in this district. The telegram received a few days ago from Col. Hemming, the officer commanding No. 3 district indicates that no further steps will be taken in regard to a new Battalion until the 93rd Battalion is at full strength. The 93rd has on its roll at the present time 1,000 men, so that it will require 80 men to complete (the base company has been eliminated from the establishment of overseas units) or allowing for wastage probably 100 men are still needed by the 93rd. This will require at least a month so that unless headquarters changes the plans there will be nothing definite about the new unit for some time yet.

Recruiting for the 93rd Battalion will be continued here until further orders and many young men who wish to join the fine unit which left yesterday will find the process an easy one. Lieut. Ketchum or any of the recruiting staff can supply all the necessary information. The recruits will be examined here and transported to Kingston furarshed.

The 93rd Battalion can use half a dozen or more good ball players. The Peterborough Battalion intend to cut a wide swath in sports at Barriefield camp. They have it finely equipped with sporting accessories and would welcome some of last year's city league players. A number are already with the battalion, including Capt. J. E. R. Munro of last year's Thistles, Corp. Stan Anderson, Pte. A. Frost and Pte. Gus Rose of the classics. A few more of the same calibre would give the 93rd a ball team that would make them all step to time. With them battalions at Barriefield sporting events will be a big feature of the summer camp and the Peterborough Battalion expects to hold its own with any of them. Lieut. J. Ketchum at the recruiting rooms who himself plays all the athletic games invented can put some of the local athletes at present in mufti in the play of good summer fun at Barriefield.

A bulletin in front of the Examiner yesterday seems to have been misread by many citizens. The paragraph in question was dated, Truro, Nova Scotia and referred to an officer from that city who had been cashiered for self inflicted wounds. Hastily reading the bulletin a number of citizens apparently missed the date line and concluded that the officer mentioned was from Peterborough. The eagerness with which the story was circulated made it seem as if some people were happy to think that some fellow citizen was in disgrace. Just to make it clear the statement is repeated that the officer mentioned was from Nova Scotia not from Peterborough.

The Kingston Standard says: On Saturday evening a gang of members of one of the local field artillery units, which leaves to-day for Petawawa, started out to do up places of business on Princess street. They marched up and down the street, entering different places of business, and taking complete possession. Not satisfied with possession, they started in to smash up valuable property, and carry away anything they could get their hands on conveniently. Wash basins in hotels were smashed, fruit stands were raided and fruit stolen, and one shop window smashed. One store was entered and over $40 worth of canes, cigars and magazines were carried away. Singing college songs, and giving vent to college yells, this battery kept possession of the main street until a picket was called, and the rowdies stopped in their mad and vicious career.

Last evening some of these same batterymen entered a local restaurant and ordered the best meals on the bill of fare and then rushed headlong out of the establishment without paying for what they had eaten. Much indignaiton was expressed by citizens to think that such rowdyism could prevail on the main street so long without interference. The attention of the military authorities has been drawn to the affair, and an investigation will no doubt be conducted and the guilty parties punished.

An announcement made by Col. Hemming at Barriefield the other day will be of interest. Speaking to the Lindsay Battalion in welcoming them to camp he said:—

"The battalion that will leave this camp first for the front, will not be the battalion that can boast of numbers, but the battalion that can boast of its efficiency and its good conduct."

Cecil Brown, son of Mr. E. Brown, the local hardware merchant, has enlisted at Edmonton with the University Corps. He is the third son of Mr. Brown to enlist and gave up a lucrative position in Molson's Bank to join the colours. He is a brother of Sergt. Elmer and Pte. Ken Brown who left with the 93rd Battalion for Barriefield, yesterday.

Peterborough was hit hard by the war this morning when news was received of the death of two of her soldiers, and the wounding of a third. Both of the men whose deaths were reported to-day were Peterborough citizens in every sense of the word, as they were born here, and both are well known.

PTE. JOHN BURNS.

Word was received this morning that No. 412404 Pte. John Burns, son of Mr. John Burns, 341 McDonnel Street, had died of wounds on May 29th. Pte. Jack Burns was born in Peterborough and lived practically all his life in this city, where he was widely known. He enlisted here with the 39th Battalion, third contingent, as it was known then, and went to England with the 39th. He was with the Battalion for some time and a few months ago went to the front with a draft for another battalion. Now he has given his life for the Empire, and added another to the long list of Peterborough men who have died in the cause of liberty. Pte. Burns is survived by his father and four sisters, all residing in Peterborough. The sisters, Miss Agnes and Miss Margaret, residing at home and Mrs. Jas. Derocher and Mrs. W. Whaley of this city. The family will have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

PTE. HERB. SWEENEY.

Word was received this morning that Pte. Herbert Sweney, who left Peterborough with the draft for the 39th Battalion a year ago, has been killed in action on May 23rd. Pte. Sweeney, who was born in Peterborough, was the son of Pte. John Sweeney, now in Barriefield with the 93rd Battalion. The young soldier was well known in Peterborough, and the news of his death will bring grief to many friends.

PTE. REED WOUNDED

Mrs. Elizabeth Reed, 126 Park St., was officially notified this morning that her husband, Pte. Geo. Ezra Reed of the Mounted Rifles had been admitted to hospital on May 19th, suffering from shell shock. Pte. Reed who was employed by Mr. Wm. Lytle before he enlisted was born in Canada. He became a member of B squadron 8th. C.M.R., early in 1915 and went overseas with that unit. His wife and family reside here.

CHEESE BOARD MAY ADOPT THE "SELECTION" SYSTEM

Two Thousand and Eighty-eight Boxes of Cheese Boarded This Morning—Top Price Was 16 7-16 Cents

BIDDING BRISK

Two thousand and eighty-eight boxes of cheese were boarded on the Peterborough Cheese Board this morning. The top price was sixteen and seven sixteenth cents. The low price paid for a few of the factories was sixteen and five sixteenth cents. This represents a decrease in price of nearly three cents from the maximum price paid at the last meeting two weeks ago.

Some of the buyers and salesman discussed the advantages that would accrue to the Board by the adoption of the "selection" system of buying instead of the "call" system which is now in use. This would enable buyers to purchase as low as three hundred boxes, whereas the present minimum rate is five hundred boxes. Three hundred boxes constitute a carload. Mr. Kerr said the call system was all right where a large quantity of cheese was boarded.

Mr. Flavelle of Lindsay, thought that the proposed changes possessed many advantages. Mr. Cook was of the opinion that a larger number of buyers would attend the Board if the "selection" system was adopted. This system gives each buyer a reasonable opportunity to buy a quantity of cheese to the partial elimination of the buyer who would sweep the Board. The salesmen decided to look into the possibilities of the new scheme and if satisfactory it will be adopted at a subsequent meeting of the Board.

The Factories.

The following factories boarded cheese:

Name of Factory	No. of Boxes
Keene	60
Warminster	110
Shearer	140
Selwyn	100
Villiers	60
Warsaw	176
Westwood	195
Oakdale	95
Daisy D	65
Myrtle	50
Ormonde	135
Young's Point	120
Lang	135
Indian River	110
East Emily	70
Trewern	95
Norwood	180
Fleetwood	75
Killarney	98
Total	2088

Bidding Was Brisk.

The bidding which was unusually brisk, was opened by Mr. Kerr at 14 1-2, Cook 15, Flavelle 15 1-4, Gillespie 15 1-2 Flavelle 15 5-8, Gillespie 15 11-16 Cook 15 3-4, Flavelle 15 7-8, Gillespie 16, Flavelle 15 1-4, Gillespie 16 1-8, Cook 16 1-4, Gillespie 16 5-16, Cook 16 3-8, Gillespie 16 7-16.

At 16 7-16 Mr. Gillespie secured Keene, Shearer, Villiers, Westwood and Indian River.

At the same price Mr. Flavelle secured Warminster, Selwyn, Warsaw, Myrtle, Ormonde, Norwood and Fleetwood.

Mr. Gillespie took the balance of the Board at 16 5-16.

The Board will meet again on Wednesday, June 21st.

"Peterborough Possibilities Unsurpassed"

WEDNESDAY, MAY 31, 1916

A CANADIAN'S SUCCESS.

Among the names of the great men Canada has given to the United States, the name of J. J. Hill, the millionaire railway promoter, is prominent for "success," as the unthinking world looks at success. He was a poor boy, born on a farm near Guelph and as a lad he went to the United States and worked his way up till he achieved what is called success, and died a millionaire. In his great railway building and consolidating movements, he amassed money, and according to the standard of the world achieved brilliant success. But after all the greater success he achieved was that with all his gaining and achieving, he gained and kept a large share of popular good will. In gaining money he did not lose the esteem of his fellow men This was the big side of his success in life, and will count more in the court where human deeds and qualities are righteously appraised, than the piling up of useless millions stained with tears of unfairly rewarded toil. Making money is not the highest success as God and good men regard success. There are better things than makin gmoney, which seldom brings happiness; and these consist in our helping create happiness in ourselves by a course of deeds that are factors in making our fellows happier and better. This is the true success. The other is too often and nearly always like Dead sea fruit—apples to the taste.

THE PENALTY OF HUMANITY.

To a French Canadian falls the first and greatest honours, for sacrifices made in this war. Dr. Beland, who has been a prisoner of war in Germany, has been released and is leaving Germany for France via Holland. Dr. Beland, who was Postmaster-General of Canada under the Laurier government, at the outbreak of the war, was found in Antwerp when the German raid was first made. Undaunted by the German approach, he remained attending refugees and wounded till the city fell. He was at the last moment given a chance to leave the city, but considered that he could do more good in his professional capacity by remaining. He was a non-combatant and a minister of healing and mercy. The Germans refused to release him, in spite of the representations of neutral ambassadors and he was carried a prisoner to Germany, where he has suffered the great hardships that German "Kultur" inflicts upon prisoners, especially any associated with the British. Dr. Beland owes all his sufferings and ill-treatment to his high sense of duty, in refusing to leave his post before the Huns got their hands upon him. Sacrifice and heroism are not confined to the trenches. The sacrifice and heroism of a man like Dr. Beland, as well as the self-denying and devoted work of women in their homes and in the hospitals, are as heroic and useful in their place and deserve praise as much as the storming of a trench by a professional soldier. The heroic acts, whether done in a corner of the home or the city or beside the fone wounded on the field, and outside the range of battle, count as much on the scroll of honour as the deeds of soldiers, with their blood up, in the fighting lines Dr. Beland in his two years of imprisonment in Germany, in the sufferings and ill treatment he received, has paid the price of humanity. By sticking to the post of duty, to do deeds of humanity, he was made prisoner. In refusing to leave those who needed his medical ministrations, he performed an act of heroism, he showed a heroism worth remembering, worth emulating.

THE CRUCIBLE OF WAR.

This war, with its initiative inspiration, awful as it is, has already done good; it has created a new national and popular sense of right and a truceless intolerance of outrage, of crookedness, of false dealing and of greed and graft." This has already found expression, in the condemnation at the ballot box of political and governmental disregard of responsibility and of raids on the public treasury, of waste and theft of the people's money for political or party purposes and often for purposes of personal aggrandisement. This condemnation has been uttered loudly in Manitoba and British Columbia and concretely in Peel. Yesterday its voice was again loudly heard in Westmoreland, New Brunswick, where the minister designate of a moribund government guilty through its late head of raids on the public treasury and many other revealed acts of corruption, was found wanting. Mr. F. G. Mahoney, who replaced Hon. John Morrisey as Catholic representative, went up for the approval of the people, and he as a representative of the government had a party majority of over 500, turned into a substantial minority by the Liberal candidate, who thus swells the Liberal contingent in the Legislature to three. The tide has turned. In 1914 one of the two Liberal members of the opposition brought charges against the then Premier, of extorting $100,000 from timber limit holders, and since that sickening revelations of political corruption have been made. Premier Flemming was driven out of public life and Premier Clarke succeeded him; but the trail of the serpent is over the government's record, and at the first opportunity, the people have voiced their condemnation. The people have come to political sanity and have shown, when there was a chance for expression, that there is hereafter to be no quarter given to political crookedness and graft. Graft has been discredited to the hilt, and has sought a last refuge in the citadel of the shell commission's defence in the investigation now going on. War and its waste and woe are awful prices to pay for an awakened public conscience; it is an heroic but effective remedy. When peace comes it will find a new world with new ideals and new aspirations. The crucible has been heated seven fold, but the true gold, refined and purified, will come out bright.

SANITARY INSPECTOR.

Peterborough is today without one of the most important civic officials on its salary list. The city council though aware of the coming vacancy in the sanitary inspectorship for some time, did not practically move till the last minute. It is true that tenders were invited, and twenty-one applications were sent in in consequence Without any reference whatever to the names sent in, the means adopted for getting a sanitary inspector are not perhaps the best. A bank manager or a family physician is not selected in so haphazard a way. The choice of such officials is the result of careful inquiry and as full knowledge of the qualifications of the person chosen as possible. In such a matter as a sanitary inspector there are sure to be many applicants that are unfitted for the position, do not appreciate the extent and importance of the duties involved. This is shown by the fact of the ridiculously low price some of them place upon their qualifications and services. There were twenty-one applicants to be considered by the city council, or at least to be dealt with, by the city council on Monday night. The way of dealing with them was not perhaps the wisest, many of the applications being rejected with confessed lack of knowledge of their qualifications. The attempt to select an inspector by ballot was not dealing with an important appointment with the seriousness and degree of consideration it deserved. It would have been better perhaps, to have appointed a competent committee to investigate the claims to consideration of all the applicants. By the haphazard way of eliminating undesirables, the elimination was blindly done; a mere name, representing an individuality was dropped, and perhaps not one of the aldermen marking ballots had a clear idea of the qualifications of any of the applicants. It is possible that in this way the best men may have been counted out. The committee of investigation, to which the names, resulting from the weeding out, were referred, need not have its work confined to the names sent in. Their business have been consulted, and his estishould have been to find out the best fitted man for the position, and when they found him they should have fixed the salary at the figure of remuneration that would secure a qualified man. As Alderman Duncan, chairman of the Board of Health, suggested, the Medical Health Officer should have been consulted, and his estimate of the qualifications of a competent sanitary inspector taken into account, and his knowledge, gained by pratical contact with practical sanitary work, should have been taken advantage of. It is unnecessary to argue that the selection of a sanitary inspector is more important than that of any other civic official. If a street inspector, chosen at random or through pull, does bad or ineffective work, there is only money loss; but if a sanitary inspector does bad work, gives ineffective service, there is not only money loss but loss of health and perhaps loss of life. The wisest thing the aldermen did was to submit two names to a sub-committee for investigation. It would, however, be still better if the committee were instructed to not confine their investigation to two or three names, but to make independent search in order to secure the best possible man for the position, which might be one of the two names in question. There is less urgency in filling the position by somebody, anyway, than there is for getting a competent man. The choice of a man not thoroughly qualified in every way, is hard to overcome if the choice made, comparatively at random, happens to be an unfortunate one. It is to be hoped that the Council as a whole, will come to a recognition of the importance of the course they are called upon to take, in a matter that involves the health and the life of citizens.

WHY ECONOMY IS NECESSARY.

Mr. White now admits that the war will raise the national debt to a thousand millions or more. That it may be 1,500 millions, if the burden of the railways is not evaded, is now a reasonable anticipation. In view of the lower estimate, the Government ought to cut its domestic expenditures unsparingly. Like the new Liberals, however, it shrinks from displeasing those now holding the balance of political power, who require the state to maintain them.—Weekly Sun.

LIBERALS NO STATUES OF BUDDHA.

That the Liberal Opposition ought to have abandoned all criticism of Government administration, because of the war, is an argument appearing again and again in the Conservative press. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statement on this point may be commended to them. In closing the debate on April 4, on his motion for full investigation of the shell charges, Sir Wilfrid said: "I must protest against the interpretation given by the other side of the House to our attitude, an attitude which, if accepted by us, would have reduced constitutional government to a mockery, which would have made of this free Parliament a Chinese pagoda where the representatives of the people would have had to sit like statues of Buddha, mute and motionless, never to utter a word, never to lift a finger, unless it were to approve the action and the words of the Government."—Montreal Herald.

THE WAR MAP.

There is an element of pathos in the way the German chancellor calls on the Entente Allies to look at the war map of Europe, realize that they are beaten and sue for peace. He has publicly stated twice, the chancellor continues, "that his government is prepared to discuss the termination of the war upon a basis that guarantees Germany against further attack by her enemies," and his distress is evident and great that they have not admitted their defeat and asked for peace.

The war map of Europe does certainly show that Germany has pushed on one side into Russia and on the other into Belgium and France. It also shows Serbia overrun, ruined and starving to death. But it shows other things as well. It shows Turkey cut in two facing revolution and reduced to extremities. It shows Bulgaria trying to make a separate peace. It shows a food dictator doling out food by ounces to the German people It shows the Prussian autocracy on its last legs It shows no German colony upon the globe, no German flag on all the earth-embracing seas. It may be that after the general allied offensive on all the fronts which is considered a probability of the early future the war map will look so different as to brighten a little the prospect of peace.—Rochester Post.

President Wilson's Utterances Compared With Themselves

President Wilson's latest speech, delivered Saturday evening at the closing session of the League to Enforce Peace which has been meeting at Washington, assures the world that the United States is willing to join a coalition of nations "to maintain the freedom of the seas, protect small states from aggression, and stop wars begun in violation of treaties, or begun without giving the world an opportunity to pass upon the causes." Such, at least, is the summary of his speech brought by the American Associated Press.

"Let us look back at what President Wilson has done since the present war began.

Belgium, a small state, fell a victim to the aggression of Germany President Wilson subsequently sent a testimonial to Germany of his admiration of Germany's principles.

Germany attacked Belgium in violation of treaties. President Wilson subsequently sent a telegram to the Kaiser of congratulation on his birth day. By the way, the President skipped the next birthday.

Germany began the war without giving the world or anybody an opportunity to pass on the causes. Wilson advised his people to maintain an absolute silence.

It was nearly a year after Germany invaded Belgium, that the Lusitania was sunk by a German submarine, May 7, 1915. Over a thousand non-combatants, men, women, and children, including 114 Americans were sent to the bottom of the sea. President Wilson addressed a note about this to the German government in which the following certificates of character were presented to Germany by him on behalf of the United States:

"Recalling the humanity and enlightened attitude hitherto assumed by the Imperial German Government in matters of International right . . .

"Having learned to recognise the German views and the German influence in the field of International obligation as always engaged upon the side of justice and humanity . . .

"Long acquainted as this Government has been with the character of the Imperial German Government and with the high principles of equity by which they have in the past been actuated and guided . . .

Remember that these compliments to Germany were sent nearly a year after Germany had rejected every proposition for a conference of nations to prevent war; nearly a year after Germany had invaded Belgium in violation of solemn treaty; long after the massacre of Belgium by ruthless militarism which followed invasion; long after Teutonic vandalism in France; and after illegal destruction of American ships prior to the sinking of the Lusitania. Yet now, after another year of Europe's bloody sweat, President Wilson, with [illegible] all these things when the United States could have really done something worth while by a protest; President Wilson, who even in the black Lusitania day ignored these things; President Wilson, who even in the black Lusitania day could work off fulsome compliments to the debased assassins of his fellow-Americans, comes before the world, after another year of Europe's bloody sweat, with orotund promulgation of the great importance the United States attaches to the protection of small nations and the solemn maintenance of treaties, and how the United States is going to help look after these things in future. What has brought this wonderful illumination? Does he mean anything, and if he does what did he mean when he sent his laudations to the Germans last year? Is it pleasant to hear this assumption of the virtue of fine ideals only after millions of lives have been spent by the people of other nations to vindicate these ideals and to check the violation of them by that German government whom President Wilson highly complimented long after it had horribly violated the principles of which he now proclaims the United States an intending champion? How much more respectable to have felt that way at the start! One doesn't need to criticise lack of sand, but one sickens of lack of sand accompanied by endless pompous verbosity. Even the Lusitania isn't settled for yet. If the coming presidential election shows that a majority of the American people are satisfied with the sort of sawdust Mr. Wilson keeps pouring out, we shall be surprised.—Ottawa Journal.

ALASKA GLACIER MOVING.

Fifteen years ago a member of the United States Geological Survey, says a bulletin of the survey, mapped the front of the Barry glacier, which is in the northwest corner of Prince William Sound, Alaska. In 1910 it was found that the face of the glacier had gone back about three miles from the position it occupied in 1909. B. L. Johnson, of the Geological Survey, examined the front of the Barry glacier in the autumn of 1914 and determined that the total retreat of the glacier between 1910 and 1914 appeared to be about 8,200 feet, a retreat of four and a half miles in fifteen years.

HON. J. H. HOWDEN — SIR RODMUND ROBLIN — CONTRACTOR T. KELLY — HON. G. R. COLDWELL

CANADA'S GREATEST CRIMINAL TRIAL—The Manitoba Parliament Buildings Graft Cases—The trial before Mr. Justice Prendergast and a jury at the Winnipeg Assizes, commences this week, of three ex-Mins ters of the Manitoba Cabinet, Contractor Kelly, and Lt.-Col. (Dr.) R. M. Simpson, (who is not in the above group), on charges of conspiracy to defraud Manitoba, in connection with the construction of the new Parliament Buildings in Winnipeg. The charges are that Contractor Kelly "over-classified" his work in the Parliament Buildings to the extent of several thousand dollars, and the ex-Ministers are charged with conspiracy to defraud. When the charges were brought up the Roblin Goverament resigned. Contractor Kelly awaited trial in jail, and the ex-Ministers were out on $50,000 bail each. Hon. Mr. Coldwell is now paymaster of a Brandon Overseas Battalion, and Dr. Simpson, who will be tried at an other court at the same time, is now Chief Medical Officer at Camp Hughes. Hon. Dr. Montague, who was also a member of the Roblin Goverum ent, has died since the charges were laid.

Germany Nearing Crisis, Brought By Food Shortage

Germany must win a great victory soon or sue for peace to prevent a revolt of the civilian population being driven desperate by hunger, according to Mr. E. F. R. Delanoy, general agent for the Holland-America line in Chicago and formerly Consul from the Netherlands there.

The information which came to Mr. Delanoy from a Dutch official at Dusseldorf, indicates the plight of the German government is reaching an extreme stage and that their only hope of continuing the war is to win some great victory and thereby placate the growing rage of the people.

The civilian population is underfed, and the aged, ill and weak, are dying by thousands because they cannot obtain the necessary sustenance. Food riots are of daily occurrence everywhere in Germany and in Dusseldorf men and women repeatedly have rioted, to be beaten back by armed soldiers and many cases severely wounded.

"Every ounce of food which enters Germany, and but little is going in, is distributed from Berlin," he said yesterday, at the McAlpin Hotel.

"The most rigorous censorship is maintained to keep the true state of affairs from the world, but in Holland the general knowledge of exact conditions is becoming known, and my people understand why Germany is fighting so desperately at Verdun and why the Austrians are smashing at Italy. It is essential for the continuance of the war that a great victory be won by the Central Powers, so that the people may again put out the flags and the bands may play in the streets.

"It has been long since the German people rejoiced over a great triumph but daily they are seeing the little modicum of food they are permitted being diminished and the majority of the civilians are sadly underfed. The wife of the official who attended my wedding, who came from Dusseldorf with him, and who by the way, was an Englishwoman, was so weak and was suffering so from malnutrition that she could hardly walk a few hundred feet.

"The civilians receive scant attention from the government so far as food is concerned, and the patients in the tubercular and other disease hospitals are succumbing in large numbers because they cannot be fed. The whole attention of the government is centred on feeding its armies. All the food which comes to Germany, no matter who buys it, be he high or low, must go to the central depot in Berlin.

"From there it is distributed. The necessary food stores for the army are made up and what remains is apportioned about the country for the civilians. As an example the official of whom I speak received weekly two ounces of butter, or about the amount one eats at a meal, for the use of his wife and himself. He receives a certain small portion of meat on having his meat card presented and punched, but recently there have been times when there was no meat.

"Holland has placed an embargo on foods into Germany. When the official returned to Germany, his wife took buns and spread over them shuns three pounds of butter, for she wanted the butter very much. When she reached the border the customs officials, who are very strict, took away the buns and butter, and permitted her to retain but three buns, (her individual food allowance for actual consumption.

"The people throughout Germany are depressed, and recently the lassitude which followed their first outbursts of joy over early victories has been giving place to a restiveness that is alarming the government. There have been riots in many places and though every effort is made to keep them from becoming public they are becoming so frequent that it is impossible to deny.

"The babies, the aged and the weak are suffering. There must be some definite advance on Germany's part or she must admit defeat. In Holland the general belief among those who are qualified to know is that Germany is beaten but not destroyed. About eighty per cent of the Dutch people are pro-ally, but the majority, while wishing to see Germany beaten, do not want her smashed. They do want her to be brought to a realization that 'kultur' is not a necessity for the world.

"All over Holland I found a certain friendliness for the United States as well as a certain criticism. It is believed over there that President Wilson has pursued a weak and vacillating course, and that he has lost a magnificent opportunity to place this country in the front of the great nations of the world in not more strongly protesting against breaches of neutrality. Holland has received better treatment from Germany than the United States. She has between 400,000 and 500,000 trained soldiers under arms and this, added to her determined attitude, has been a fine lever in the discussions she has had with Germany."

Many to whom I talked believe the President was weak because his people would not let him interfere with their dollar making long enough to take a great place in the world as the champion of neutrals. The impression exists among the best informed that this country is given over entirely to the accumulation of gold regardless of any higher pursuit.

But Holland expects to see peace soon, and expects too that the United States will have a hand in the making of it."

Despite the fact that she is under tremendous expense and that the war has seriously hampered her industries, Mr. Delanoy said his country was going ahead with her great public improvements and that the delegation of fifty officials which has arrived here represented the country's determination not to delay progress.

Chief Iron Tail Gets Lonely in Hospital

THOUGH BELIEVED DYING, HE INSISTS ON JOINING CIRCUS.

Philadelphia, May 31. — Although his condition is believed to be critical Iron Tail, a Sioux chief, who was taken to St. Luke's Hospital last week, suffering from pleuro-pneumonia, insisted last night in leaving the institution and rejoining the Wild West Show which left at midnight for Washington.

Chief Iron Tail's profile is stamped on the new Buffalo nickels. Although he is nearly 70 years old, he told the hospital physicians through an interpreter that it was too lonely in the hospital and that he longed to be with "the gang." Accordingly he signed a paper, releasing the institution from all blame should his condition grow worse, and walked to an automobile, which whisked him to the Wild West Show train.

Garrison at Kut Suffered Greatly

Would Have Perished Had Gen. Townshend Attempted to Hold Out for a Few Days Longer.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The Evening World to-day publishes the following:

Bombay, India, May 20.—Stories of the terrible suffering of the British and Indian soldiers and the inhabitants of Kut-el-Amara before General Townshend gave up his gallant defence of the place, have been brought here by wounded and diseased prisoners who were exchanged for Turkish prisoners.

They were frightfully emaciated. The whole garrison would have perished if Townshend had held out a few days longer. When the capitulation was signed only six mules were left to feed the army and 20,000 of the civil population. When Townshend tried to send the Turkish civilians out into the Turkish lines the Turks hanged [illegible] them as a warning to the remainder to stay and consume the British food. Before the surrender every cannon, projectile rifle, and cartridge was destroyed.

Ate Horse Flesh.

A diary of the siege shows only suffering for food. Before the surrender a dead officer's kit was sold. Eighty dollars was paid for a box of cigars, and $30 for fifty American cigarettes.

In February the rations daily consisted of a pound of barley meal bread and a pound an a quarter of mule or horse flesh. In April it was four ounces of bread and a pound of flesh. The supply of bread to the British soldiers was even lower, since the Indians would not eat the meat because of their religion. Disease spread among the horses, and hundreds had to be shot, and 2,000 also were killed because there was no grain for them. The fattest were kept for forty-five days [illegible] food.

Vegetable Seeds from Skies.

In February scurvy appeared, and when British aeroplanes dropped seeds. Townshend turned his army into gardeners. Millions, too, were dropped from aeroplanes to grind flour. Stray cats furnished a delicate "wild rabbit supper." Grass was cooked as a vegetable, and ginger root, boiled, acted as a substitute for tea and coffee. Later aeroplanes dropped some corn, flour, cocoa, sugar, tea, and cigarettes, but this went to the wounded alone.

"Intoxicated" Man Put in Cell Dies From Broken Skull

Buffalo, May 31.—After lying in a cell in the Franklin street station for more than seven hours in an unconscious condition, an unidentified man was yesterday morning sent to the Emergency hospital in the patrol wagon, where it was found that he was suffering from a fracture of the skull. He died soon after arriving at the hospital.

The man was found at Genesee St. and the Lower Terrace about 11 p.m. last night by Patrolman John Manley, of the First Precinct. Patrolman Manley called the patrol wagon and the man, who the police say, appeared to be intoxicated, was taken to the station. There he was locked in a cell.

About 7 o'clock in the morning Turnkey Michael Shaver found the man lying on the floor of his cell. He was unconscious and taken to the hospital. An address, Louise M. Cutting, 742 Seventh street, was found in his pocket. At the Seventh street address it was found that the Erie County Lodging House authorities had been asked to send a man to do some work. The man is described as being about 43 years old, poorly dressed, and weighed about 175 pounds. He wore a soft hat.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Her Owner Proud of The Gallant End of the Erin

Sir Thomas Lipton Writes to H. H. Saxton of the Loss of His Famous Yacht—Sank a Submarine Before Being Hit

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 30.—H. N. Saxton, an exporter of this city, who read in the Herald a short time ago an account of the sinking of the Erin, Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht, and who is a personal friend of Sir Thmas', cabled his sympathy to him. In reply he received the following letter:

Osidge, Southgate, Middlesex.
May 16, 1916.

My Dear Saxton,—Very many thanks for your kind cable expressing sympathy in the loss of my dear old ship, the Erin. I shall miss the satisfaction to me to know that she has taken her share in the great struggle, and that she went down 'doing her bit.' You will be interested to know that in the Petit Parisian and other Continental papers, a few days ago, there was an account of the Erin sinking an enemy submarine off Syracuse, Sicily, on April 19 the survivors being made prisoners and landed at Taranto.

According to the report: 'The British armed yacht Aegusa (Erin) surprised an enemy submarine and with three shots capsized and sunk her.' I also noticed there was an account of the loss of the Erin in Saturday's London Daily Telegraph, page 10, from their special correspondent at Malta, stating: 'It appears the Nasturtium was first struck at about 2 p.m. and was slowly sinking when the Aegusa (Erin) came to her rescue and picked up some of her men. The Erin herself was struck while coffee was being served to the rescued sailors, who were thus twice blown up.' So you see the Erin to the very end of her existence was engaged in helping the suffering.

You might kindly let some of my friends know how the Erin spent her last days, as I am sure it will interest them. I know Dr. Hedge would like to have particulars.

I hope this will find you in the very best of health and with renewed thanks for your kind message and with best wishes,

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) THOMAS LIPTON.

Six Names Selected For Berliners To Choose From

BERLIN, Ont., May 31.— The committee of 99 representative citizens appointed by the city council to choose six names from a list of 114 to be submitted to the electorate for a choice for a new names for the city and after three hours' discussion choose six names after the big list had been boiled down to fifteen.

Interesting discussion was manifest throughout, and the committee probably made the wisest choice at their disposal.

Ald. C. C. Hahn was chairman. The following names will appear on the ballot in this order having received the highest number of votes:

Huronto, Bercana, Dynard, Hydro City, Renoma and Agnolea.

The city council at their meeting next Monday will decide when the vote shall be taken.

Soldiers Made Full Use of the "Y" Building

Average Daily Attendance of Soldiers During Their Stay Here Was 150—"Y" News

It was with pride, mingled with regret, that we saw our Peterborough Battalion leave the city yesterday. This battalion contained many Y.M.C.A. men, and many of its members have been recruited in our building. During the past four months all of the privileges of the association have been offered freely to the members of the 93rd. During the winter the physical training of the men was conducted in our gymnasium, every member of the battalion appearing under orders for this work at regular intervals. Since the weather has become warmer the plunge has been the main attraction to the boys in khaki, as from two to four platoops a day have enjoyed the privilege of swimming in the plunge. The largest number of soldiers to use our privileges during one day was 260. The average attendance of soldiers at the building per day has been about 150. The men have made free use of our correspondence table, social privileges, games, etc.

We will miss the boys, but we know that we can rely on them to perform their duty wherever they are called. We are pleased to note that our Y.M.C.A. work will follow our boys wherever they go, for through our National Council an aggressive association work is being conducted at Barriefield and at other centres in Canada, as well as in England and at the front. We trust that our boys will make free use of the privileges that are offered by the Y.M.C.A. and made possible through the generosity of friends of the association movement in subscribing $1,000,000 in Canada and in the States for this purpose.

The many association friends of Norman Darling received the news of his death at the front with sorrow, for he was a young man who made friends with all whom he came in contact.

There has been quite an exodus from our dormitories this week, for the leaving of the 93rd has caused vacancies, and this number has been increased by four civilians leaving their rooms during the past few days. The vacancies have occurred at the right time, however, for we are able to accommodate 13 ministers and lay delegates who are attending the Methodist Conference. We would urge upon young men who are seeking good quarters to call at the association at once, for they will have an excellent choice of rooms at the present time.

The Y.M.C.A. tennis courts are in good condition, and are largely used by the young men of the association after school and evenings. The league games will be started on our courts this week. We expect that tennis will continue to be one of the features of this year's programme.

In the absence of the soldiers, who have had first claim on our plunge, swimming classes for boys will be resumed.

"SOUP KITCHENS" TO BE ESTABLISHED THROUGH GERMANY

Thirty Thousand To Be Fed in One Suburb of Berlin Alone.

BERLIN, May 31. — Feeding the masses of the population in the larger cities by means of central kitchens under municipal auspices, is the solution selected by the Government to meet the problem of the food supply and distribution during the period of the war.

The president of the Food Regulation Board, Adolph Von Batocki, announced to the Ways and Means Committee of the Reichstag that an appropriation bill for funds to assist the municipalities to organize and operate the kitchens would be immediately submitted to the Reichstag.

The municipality of Schoeneberg, the second largest Berlin suburb, has already arranged to feed 30,000 persons in such institutions. A similar organization for Berlin was called into life at a conference, which was notable for the presence of two women, Frau Hedwig Heyle and Fraulein Landsberg, among the members of the conference.

Message From Dead Captain of Str. Price Is Found in a Bottle

PORT HURON, May 31.—A bottle picked up on the Canadian shore of Lake Huron near Blue Point a day or two ago, was found to contain a small sheet of paper—a leaf torn from a note-book, wet and almost undecipherable. On one side was written:

"Finder, please notify wife of Captain Black of steamer Price.

On reverse side was:

"Mrs. Black: Dear Wife,—This is my last few lines to you I guess. We are at anchor, but the boat is just about at its last, so good-bye." Signed "Captain Black."

The Price went down with all hands in the great storm of November 9 1913, a few miles off Blue Point. Captain Black's pathetic farewell message has, no doubt, been imprisoned inside the hull of the sunken boat until it was released by a movement of water recently.

Capt. Reid of this city, is inclined to believe the message is authentic, and word has been sent to Mrs. Black, who lives in Cleveland.

If a strip of blotting paper is bound around the neck of the oil bottle, being often renewed, the shelf on which the bottle stands will not become greasy and discoloured.

Prospects of An Excellent Crop

Around Hastings Are of the Very Best—News of the Village

HASTINGS, May 30.—The Peterborough papers contain the information of the success which has attended the latest composition by Mr. Asa Huycke, his new march "Irresistable" being played by the 93rd Battalion Band, and being highly commended. Mr. Huycke was born and spent his boyhood days in Hastings and his many well-wishers here extend heartiest congratulations.

The fruit trees are now in full bloom, and prospects for an excellent crop are exceedingly bright.

The warm weather of the past few days is very favourable to vegetation and the grain is making rapid progress, except in the low-lying districts, where seeding has as yet not been completed.

Mr. Harry Scriver of Portland, late of Hastings, will give his popular lecture "That Boy," in the town hall on Friday evening, under the auspices of the I.O.D.E.

A large number of our citizens took a trip to Peterborough on May 24, and report a very enjoyable outing, the weather being ideal.

The Ladies' Aid in connection with the Methodist Church, met for their regular monthly meeting, on Thursday last, at the home of Mrs. W. Stillman, Percy. The drive out was very invigorating and the afternoon pleasantly and profitably spent.

One item of business which was thoroughly discussed was the annual excursion to Peterborough, which will take place about the end of June per steamer Stoney Lake.

Mrs. Aubrey Doxsee and children left on Monday to join Mr. Doxsee in Palmerston, where he has secured a position.

Mrs. Charlie Warner of Toronto, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred Warner.

Mr. Walter Fowlds has purchased an Overland car.

Capt. Walter Thompson of the 93rd Battalion, visited his parents, Rev. D. A. and Mrs. Thompson recently.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Barrigan, recently of Stirling, have moved their household effects to Hastings.

Mr. Harry Carter of Otonabee, was in town on Saturday.

Mr. Alex. Fleming has been engaged by the G.T.R. Co. as night operator here.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid Fisher of Campbellford spent Friday with Hastings friends.

Dr. Berry of Port Perry was a recent visitor to Hastings.

Mr. Jas. McCarthy has secured the services of Miss Keogan as saleslady in his general store, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Fleming spent Victoria Day with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fleming.

An interesting letter has been received by Mrs. Wm. Warner, from Lieut. Fred Hubbs, now at the front, in which he expresses his thanks for the recent gift of socks which, of all gifts, are the most acceptable, and of which they cannot have too large a supply.

Mrs. Jack Collins of Otonabee, spent the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Beamish, Percy.

Miss Lily Tate of Peterborough, spent Wednesday at the home of Mr and Mrs. L. T. Huycke.

Mrs. O'Shea of Norwood has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. T. Coughlan, town.

Mr. R. Plant of Roseneath spent a short time during the past week in Hastings.

Mr. E. Perrault has been engaged as flag-man at the G.T.R. crossing, here.

Dr. Sweeney has purchased a new Ford car.

On Monday night a very heavy rain fell and the land, in consequence, is again rendered unfit for seeding.

Mr. Portway of Norwood motored to Hastings on Sunday in his new Chevrolet car.

New Stamp Issues Caused by the War

London, May 31.—Philatelists must be on the alert to keep track of the new stamp issues brought about by the war. According to information received here Turkey has issued a set of five stamps to mark what purports to be the Turkish occupation of "Somewhere in Egypt". Word comes also that the Germans have suppressed the Warsaw Citizens' post, and a curious position arises in connection with the stamps of the temporary institution. It is illegal to deal in these Warsaw labels in Germany, and they are regarded as stamps of enemy origin in England, France, Russia and Italy, and consequently it is illegal to import them.

Germany Already Preparing For Another War After Victory Now

NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS FROM TEUTON CITIES TELL OF SCHEME UNDER DISCUSION TO TRAIN BOYS IN THE ARTS OF MILITARISM ALMOST FROM VERY BIRTH.

"After we win this war it will not be hoore us to become inactive and indifferent. In fact, Germany ill still continue to have powerful and hitter enemies, and it will be our duty, as the Japanese say, when a victory is won 'to set our helmets tighter on our heads'.

These remarks, made by the late Field Marshal von der Goltz in a speech in Constantinople some months ago, have found a ready response throughout all Germany, and the German newspapers and periodicals that reach this country tell of the scheme that is now being discussed in the empire of preparation for another war after the present conflict is over.

According to the scheme outlined militarism will be more deeply rooted than even at this time, and a boy will be trained to be a soldier from almost his very birth. As soon as a boy enters school at six years of age, instruction in military matters will begin and will form an important part of his studies. Drills will be held in the open air and Spartan simplicity and discipline will prevail in his bringing up. He will be put through a severe course of athletics, will be exposed to all kinds of weather and hardship, and physically his body will be hardened in order that he may be prepared to meet all the vicissitudes of a campaign.

When the boy reaches his twelfth year the drilling will become still more strenuous and several hours daily will be devoted to military training in camps especially selected by the government. This will continue until his eighteenth year, when he will be considered fit to enter the regular army.

During the school term from the twelfth to the eighteenth year the boys will constitute a big army by themselves. They will have their army corps, brigades and regiments, and they will be commanded by generals, colonels, lieutenants and captains, selected from the boys whom the big general staff of Germany will consider best fitted to fill such positions. There will be regular manoeuvres and sham battles, and nothing will be over looked or left undone to train these boys to be the best "soldiers the world has yet seen."

For girls there will be training along the same lines. Athletics will form an important part of it and Spartan endurance and indifference of pain and suffering will be their training also. In addition, they will receive special instruction in nursing the wounded and will be trained to grow up strong and hearty women, fit in every way to be the wives of soldiers.

The military spirit in Germany, instead of subsiding after this war, will be more and more encouraged and pamphlets advocating these measures are being widely distributed throughout the empire.

German Idealist Raised His Voice To Denounce Prussian Militarism

Another German idealist has raised his voice against the mailed fist, and the hypocritical pretence that Germany is not responsible for the war, and is merely defending herself against the treacherous Allies.

He is Professor Foerster of the University of Munich, who has been fiercely denounced by the Pan-German-ist press, but has already found some supporters here and there.

He was even allowed to conduct a campaign in a Berlin newspaper against the Prussian militaristic education and to declare future generations should be educated not with a view to war, but to peace. He foresees a future of peace externally between nations and internally between warring beliefs and classes of society.

"We have much to learn from each other," says Professor Foerster in one of his articles, 'especially from those of our adversaries in whom we have encountered an incomprehensible and unexpected strength, which we have experienced through the wounds in our own bodies."

According to Professor Foerster the cause of the war was that the culture of the mind had been neglected for the exclusive pursuit of material interests. The Paris Temps agrees with this view to a certain extent, but thinks Professor Foerster is wrong when he attributes this evolution to a development of the 'party spirit'. "The Germans of the age of Pericles and of Augustus did not neglect the culture of the mind," declares the Temps 'and the most hateful pharisaism of modern times is surely that of Germany, which boasted of all the superiorities and all the virtues and had for her neighbours only an absurd contempt."

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the best of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of rheumatism often by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Peterboro' County Roads Improve

Some of the Sideroads Still Impassable But Others Have Improved

Roads throughout the country and especially around Peterborough have improved greatly during the last few days of fine weather although Saturday's rain threatened to keep them in a muddy state for some time.

As the water has been gradually drained from them they have returned somewhat to their normal state. Some, however, have been cut almost down to the bed by the passage of farmers' heavy carts and automobiles over them while they were still soft from the spring rains. In most localities little repairing has been done or is planned for this year owing to the scarcity of labor and the lateness of the crops, which will require all the farmers' time.

Motorists report that the main roads are now in fairly good condition although rough. Mud holes exist in some places, and side roads in many localities are still impassable. Sandy and gravel roads have not been damaged to the extent of the clay ones and almost all of these are in good shape.

Hungarian Youth Off to the War Pleads In Vain For Girls' Kisses

The Prager Tageblatt contains a rather pretty and amusing story of the experience of a young cadet by name of Paul Waisenkind, who has graduated from the military school and who had been ordered to the front. The story was written by Herr Ernst Saep, a well known Hungarian writer and poet, and was authoritatively translated into German by Herr Stefan I. Klein. Waisenkind was an unsophisticated young man from the country, who felt that every one, particularly pretty women, would be interested in the fact that he was leaving for the front. He was not long deluded, however.

"Ensign Paul Waisenkind, having received word that he would quickly start with his regiment for the front, thought he would amuse himself as best he could and started by taking a walk in Andrassy strasse," writes Herr Saep. "He had come from the provinces and the city fascinated him. He wore a brand new uniform in gray, wore gray gloves and even the scabbard in which hung his sword was gray in colour. Slowly he walked along through the crowded street, mingling with recruits, soldiers, officers, students, servant girls and newsboys, as well as numerous other members of Gods people. He was particularly interested in many women and young girls, pretty girls, that were walking in this street. They were all dressed in white, and talked and smiled and laughed, and no one would imagine by looking at them that there was a cruel war going on and that he, Paul Waisenkind, would soon beon his way to the fighting line.

"Darkness came and the street lights shone out in all their electric brilliancy. Then it was that Paul Waisenkind received a shock. As the girls walked by in their white dresses and the rays of the street lights shone upon them he saw that they were transparent. He became dizzy. It was like a dream to this country boy, almost like a scene from 'Arabian Nights,' which he had read in his boyhood. And yet he had to leave all this and go to the front! Just then a young girl radiant in her blonde beauty came toward him. Paul Waisenkind stretched out his arms, so that she could not pass.

"'My dear, sweet girl,' he said, 'tomorrow I must join my regiment and go to the front to fight for our dear country. Give me a kiss.'

"The young woman looked at the handsome boy with his soft blue eyes and smiled good naturedly, but when he persisted in his attentions she screamed.

"'Don't be alarmed, my dear girl,' he said. 'My name is Paul Waisenkind. I have no friends or relatives to whom I can give a parting kiss, and now I must be off to the war. Who knows if I will ever return—only one kiss'—

"'Idiot!' said the girl, and she strode away.

"Paul resumed his walk and soon espied another pretty young woman, also attired in white.

"'My dear lady,' he said, stopping her, 'to-morrow I go to the war and leave everything behind—life, love and beauty. Please, just one kiss—one kiss.'

"The young woman looked him over angrily from head to foot.

"'Away with you!' she cried.

"The bewildered youth gazed after her in amazement. A crowd collected and laughed at him, but he never even heard their taunts and jeers. He thought only of the war, and it saddened him that he found not a single soul who would give him a good-bye kiss. And he strode back to his quarters, looking up at the stars and he wondered and wondered."

BRANTFORD'S MAYOR IS FACING CHARGES

Twenty-four Sensation is Sprung in Council.

BRANTFORD, May 31.—To investigate an allegation that through the instrumentality of Mayor Bowely, a foreigner, who had been fined $300 or jail sentence in police court for having an excessive amount of liquor in his home, had been released from jail on the payment of $100, a special committee was named by council.

The charge was sprung by Ald. J. S. Dowling just as the members of council were awaiting the motion to adjourn. Mayor Bowely admitted that the release had been effected and the man allowed out on payment of $100 on what he, the Mayor, thought a grossly excessive sentence.

Ald. Dowling further alleged that the fine had been paid by check of the city and Mayor Bowely, on being asked if he had signed such a check, refused to swear that he had not. A committee of three aldermen will investigate the release of the prisoner on part payment of his fine.

"I have been in the Mayor's chair many times, but this is the first time that I am to be investigated," was Mayor Bowely's comment.

SAYS GIRL TRIED TO DIE

Orpet Lawyer Asserts Nurse Swept Poison from Marian Lambert.

WAUKEGAN, IL, May 31.—Testimony which, if corroborated, will prove that Marian Lambert attempted to swallow cyanide of potassium a few days after she heard that Will Orpet was about to announce his engagement to Celestia Youker, is in the hands of attorneys for the young student.

James H. Wilkerson, senior counsel for Orpet, acknowledged possession of the evidence yesterday which it is expected will be used by the defence in the murder trial.

The story told to Attorney Wilkerson is that Miss Lambert was restrained from swallowing the poison by a graduate nurse, who swept it from her hand. At this time the Lambert girl is declared to have been in a physical condition that gave her a strong motive for suicide.

She sought the advice of the nurse, then in the employ of the Lake Forest family, thinking she might be able to help her. She was morose and threatened suicide. The nurse thought lightly of her threat.

But after the poison incident the nurse became alarmed and consulted her cousin, Joseph Hartmann. He gave Miss Lambert a commonly-known drug, he says, with specific instructions as to how to take it. To him Miss Lambert is alleged to have also expressed her desire to die.

Verification of Hartmann's story has been sought from his cousin, the nurse, but she cannot be found.

CAT WARNED LOST CRUISER.

Seamen may be a superstitious lot, but withal they are scientific. They want to know the reason for things, in witness whereof is the following story of the ill-fated Arethuso, British battle cruiser, hero of a number of thrilling sea frays at the beginning of the war. It was sunk by a mine off the east coast of England last February. A writer in the London Despatch tells the story:

"Talking to a member of the crew of the late H.M.S. Arethusa, I was interested to learn from him the story of the ship's pet, a cat.

"It is a curious fact that when the Arethusa was taking in oil fuel before leaving port on its last journey the mascot jumped from the cruiser on to the oil craft, and refused, despite all entreaties and caresses, to return to the doomed vessel. The cat had never done this before, and the 'tars' regarded its defection as an ill omen."

Entente Powers Will Reject Idea of Ending War Save On Terms Acceptable To Each

President Wilson Left in No Doubt as to the Views on the Subject of Peace—Offers Not Worthy of a Moment's Consideration

(By Lord Cromer)

LONDON, May. 31.—It would appear advisable that President Wilson and those associated with him should be left under no doubt as to the views on the subject of his most recent utterances which are held by many who, as in my own case, throughout their lives have entertained and still entertain the most friendly feelings towards the United States and Americans.

I can only state my personal opinions, but I believe that those opinions are shared by many of my countrymen.

ONLY ON ALLIES' TERMS

President Wilson cannot too clearly understand that, desirous as the people of this country are of bringing this terrible war to a close, and as willing as they eventually would be to listen to any rational and practical proposals having for their object the diminution of the risk of future wars, they would altogether reject the idea of concluding peace save on terms wholly acceptable to themselves and their allies.

We know nothing very definite as to the terms of Germany is prepared to propose or accept, but from the feelers put forward by the inspired German press we come to the conclusion that they are not worthy of a moment's consideration or discussion.

A TRANSPARENT EUPHEMISM

It is well that President Wilson should fully realise the fact that the meaningless and misleading phrase invented in Berlin about the freedom of the seas is generally regarded in this country as a mere euphemism for the destruction of the naval supremacy of Great Britain, which, in the past, has been of such infinite benefit not only to Britons, but to the rest of the civilised world.

If, as I feel assured will be the case, we emerge victoriously from the present contest, the victory will be mainly due to the British navy. Not only do we owe it to the fleet that our shores are immune from invasion, that German warships have been struck from the seas and that steady pressure in the interests of peace is being kept up by curtailing the supplies obtainable by Germany, but the vigilance and foresight of the Admiralty have, to some extent, saved us from a disastrous consequence which otherwise would have ensued from the culpable inaction of the Irish Executive. If Sir Roger Casement had not been arrested and the ship bearing arms for the Sinn Feiners had not been sunk, the whole of Ireland would have been set ablaze, and we should practically have to reconquer that country.

GUARD NAVAL STRENGTH.

With such evidence of proved services it is inconceivable that any responsible British Government official would be disposed to listen to, or any nation be prepared to accept, any proposals having for their object the diminution of the relative naval strength of this country.

We may all recognise President Wilson's good intentions and lofty aims; we may assume that he is impartial, but it is more than doubtful, in spite of the very friendly feelings entertained towards the United States and Americans generally, that the people of this country would under any circumstances welcome the idea that President Wilson should assume the role of mediator.

WILSON FAILS IN VISION.

As note has succeeded note and speech has succeeded speech, the conviction has been steadily gaining ground that Mr. Wilson has wholly failed to grasp the view entertained by the vast majority of Britons on the cause for which we and our allies are fighting. This opinion certainly will be confirmed by the amazing statement that America is "not concerned with the causes or objects of the war."

Confidence in President Wilson's statesmanship has been rudely shaken; neither for the moment does it appear likely that it will be restored to the extent of acquiescence in the proposal that he should be vested with the power of exercising any decisive influence on the terms of peace, upon which the future destines of this country and the civilised world will greatly depend.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT IN THE WEST NOW

REGINA, Sask., May 31.—Reports received by the Saskatchewan Department of Agricultuarl from their staff of telegraphic correspondents indicate that the rain of the past week was general throughout the province, and while it delayed seeding to some extent, prospects are very bright.

Wheat and oat seeding are partially completed and barley and flax to the extent of at least 50 per cent.

Some re-seeding was necessary on account of the high winds and one report shows slight damage by cutworms.

Wheat is making good growth and is on the average from two to three inches in height. Oats are also making good growth. Live stock is shown to be in good condition, with an average increase, although in some districts some loss was sustained owing to the long and severe winter.

Pastures and grasses are well up to the average condition.

Germany and The Feeding of Poland

BERLIN, May 31.—Great Britain's counter proposals to Germany's programme for the relief of Poland, as submitted by the Government by Jas. W. Gerard, the American ambassador have been the subject of repeated conferences between Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, and Dr. Karl Helfferich, Minister of the Interior.

The probability is not strong that Germany will accept the British terms. It is said she had gone to the limit of her ability in the original proposition submitted through the Belgian Relief and Rockefeller Commissions, and the British modification is felt to be not acceptable. The excellent crop prospects, particularly in the occupied region of Russian Poland, form an additional reason for non-acceptance.

The Support of the Methodist Church in Recruiting Appreciated By Gen. Hughes

Rev. (Major) Williams of General Staff, Was Bearer of Greetings to Bay of Quinte Conference Which Opened Its 33rd Session Here To-day.

END OF WAR NOT IN SIGHT

With three of its prominent members present in the uniforms of officers of the Canadian Forces, the 33rd session of the Bay of Quinte Conference opened in George Street Methodist Church this morning with an abundant spirit of patriotism. Captain the Reverend H. B. Kenny presided, and with him on the platform were Major Williams of Cambray, recently appointed chief recruiting officer of the 3rd Military Division, and attached to the Divisional staff; Capt. John Garbutt of Oshawa. All these are militant ministers of the Methodist Church in the Bay of Quinte district.

Following the customary devotional exercises the Conference sang the National Anthem.

Explaining that his presidential address was reserved until the general session, on Thursday afternoon, Capt. Kenny briefly referred to the trying conditions the Church had experienced during the past year. It had been likewise a testing time for Canada and the Empire; but by God's grace considerable progress had been made.

Capt. Kenny paid a tribute to Major Williams, who, he said, was a real soldier. The eighteen years he had spent in the British Navy had specially qualified him for the important work in which he was now engaged. "He knows the soldier's life, and is the first Chaplain I know of for this work." Capt. Kenny used the adjective 'first' to qualify the Major's abilities and not his own acquaintanceship."

GREETINGS FROM THE STAFF.

Major Williams, who has made a splendid impression in the assistance he gave to the recruiting efforts of Peterborough while the 93rd battalion was forming, stated that he bore to the Conference the greetings of the General Staff of the 3rd Division. "I say it without hesitation that the Methodist Church has a warm friend in General Sir Sam Hughes. We may not all think alike along party lines, but if there is a busier man in Canada than the Minister of Militia he has to go some. He gets through an almost incredible amount of work.

MINISTERS AND RECRUITING.

Turning to the assistance clergymen have rendered in recruiting and referring to all denominations Major Williams stated that where the Pastor of a church who had not seen this struggle in its true light and had not been strong in his patriotic efforts; it had been observed that few recruits had offered themselves from such churches. There were places where hardly a man had gone forward. And the converse was true where pastors had pointed the way to duty. Major Williams said that General Hughes had paid a tribute to the work of the Methodist Church throughout the country and had recently instructed his Secretary to remind him of Rev. Dr. Chown, whom he wished to make an Honorary Colonel as a testimony of the support of the Methodist Church in recruiting. Gen. Hughes had expressed the hope that the ministers would return to their churches enthused in the work before the country. Only by this means it seemed could conscription be forever turned back in Canada.

After touching upon the opposition of ideals in this war, Major Williams stated that it was the opinion of high authorities that the end of the war did not appear proximate. Some believed that even two years hence we would still be slugging away at it.

Unless the Church of God rises to its wonderful responsibility, the men of the future will have no use for it all. "Our only object is to win this war and the country calls for aid," Major Williams concluded.

MAKE EXPERIMENT WITH BOY MURDERER

RESTORED TO NORMAL LIFE IN EFFORT TO ESTABLISH HIS MENTAL CONDITION.

The humane treatment of insane persons is comparatively recent. Less than a century ago, says the Boston Globe, they were put in jail like criminals. The humane treatment of criminals on the supposition that some of them may be insane, is still more recent. It does not date back further than 50 years.

District Attorney Pelletier and Dr. Walter E. Fernald have now taken the initative in a remarkable experiment. A boy of 16 years has been in jail under indictment for murder and awaiting trial. The circumstances of the crime were such that it seemed incredible that the boy should be normal. Yet under close observation, he revealed no symptoms of abnormality.

Specialists came to the conclusion that the question could not be determined without putting the boy back in the conditions under which the crime was committed. Jail for life is abnormal. Liberty is normal. They could not detect abnormality under normal conditions. The probability was that only under normal conditions could the abnormality reveal itself.

The problem was to release the boy and yet keep him under such guard that the community would not be jeopardized, and this is being worked out by Mr. Fernald.

Half a century ago the procedure would have been to kill the boy because he had killed some one—on the life for a life principle.

For the last two or three decades, we have called in the alienist and given the offender a chance to be diagnosed as a case of mental disease.

INSANITY INCREASED BY WAR IN EUROPE

Cases of temporary insanity have been numerous in Europe since the beginning of the war, and interesting articles appearing in the French papers tell of some peculiar incidents in this connection.

According to these writers, directly after the war started many women were seized with the hallucination that they were Joan of Arc and were anxious to lead armies and go to the front. Among the men there were many who laboured under the delusion that they were great leaders and generals like Caesar, Alexander the Great and Napoleon. When the big battles began the number of such cases increased, and since the big conflict around Verdun, this has been especially the case.

Numerous persons have come forth with suggestions and ideas on how to stop the war at once. In the majority of cases these persons are perfectly sane on all other subjects.

German papers tell of similar instances in Germany, where insanity has increased since the beginning of the war. Among the soldiers, especially those who have never been under fire, cases of temporary insanity are numerous. They are overcome by an overwhelming fear, and wander about in a condition similar to that of aphasia, being entirely unconscious of their actions.

Usually, however, a few days' rest behind the front restores their mental equilibrium, and after this first shock they are usually good and brave soldiers. The horrors of the battlefield affect even the officers, but participation in many conflicts hardens the men so that they can look upon death and bloodshed without the least concern.

Douaumont Stroke Was Well Planned

French Troops in Large Numbers Were Brought to Scene Through Deep Cuttings

THEN CHARGED AND FOUGHT FURIOUSLY AMID THE RUINS HURLING GRENADES AT CLOSE QUARTERS.

By George Le Hir.

On the Eastern Verdun Front, Monday, May 23rd, (via Paris, Tuesday, May 30.)—For the last ten days the redoubled activity around Verdun has prolonged a striking effort on the part of the French troops. The roads were lined incessantly with thousands of auto-trucks loaded with troops and munitions.

About the middle of last week it became evident that a considerable concentration was being made which progressed infinitely more easily than in the early days of the battle, thanks to the executive ability of General Petain, which had converted the whole Verdun sector into a gigantic ant heap of subways and deep cuttings, along which troops could advance unperceived and without harm.

On Sunday night I was permitted to follow a detachment toward the front line before Froide Terre, whence on the previous night had started the attack that recovered the Haudremont quarries. The men who took part in that assault say that it was characterised by even greater fury than usual on the French side, for the men had been brought by their months of training to the utmost perfection and had been long training for a fight.

Underground in the quarries the darkness was absolute save when bursting grenades showed brief visions of carnage and terror. Friend often grappled friend until the French adopted the plan of fastening an electric pocket lamp to the tunic bottom. This light gave the Germans a better mark, but it enabled the French to rally together and sweep the foe back in the final rush en masse.

It was an extraordinary journey last night. Although the bombardment from both sides was tremendous, shaking the earth, we were completely sheltered, now moving along in deep cut galleries, and now in actual tunnels, above which at intervals we could hear a strange thud, followed by a roar as a shell fell harmless in the open air.

Twice we rested in wide deep caverns, where the men were allowed to talk and smoke without fear of enemy aircraft. They joked and chatted freely as if engaged in a practice march instead of being on the verge of a terrible battle. Only here or there a nervous laugh or yawn marked emotion that was impossible to control.

At last the appointed station was reached. One may judge how effective were the measures taken to protect the troops from the fact that the casualties were barely one-tenth of the usual toll of open air concentrations.

As the morning advanced the French bombardment of the hostile lines redoubled. Nothing could be seen of the German positions save a dense sea of smoke. Of this fact the French troops quickly took advantage. Unseen by the enemy they donned masks and began digging saps westward in the direction of the ruined stone heaps that once were Fort de Douaumont.

The soil beaten up by the continuous shell storms, helped them to make comparatively rapid progress and the cross fire of the German machine guns passed harmlessly over their heads. From this side, however, it was slow, dogged, spade work, not the breathless charge which the battle writers love to talk about.

When the French cannonade ceased our men were occupying a hollow right under the shadow of the stones, and scorely harassed by German grenades, now raining upon them until it almost seemed as if they were in a ditch of fire.

The ordeal lasted but a few minutes, yet never has greater heroism been required than to endure it. They were sheltered as best they could under the lattice work of planks like the Roman "sortoise," or burrowed each for himself underground.

At last the signal came. They scrambled forward into the ruins.

The ensuing combat seems to have been the most savage of the whole war. Men fought amid the stone heaps hand to hand or at ten yards distance with grenades, like children playing ball. But these balls were bombs, deadlier than those with which anarchists used to set a whole city in uproar.

The German trenches were mostly tunneled or winding deep through the ruins. Often it was impossible to hurl a grenade for lack of room. Then each side pushed these at the other with long poles, simultaneously trying to push back those which the opponent sent forward. Most of the time the groups of combatants were involved in mutual slaughter. Soon came more French with bayonets from the south and west, and the Germans threw up up their hands or took to flight.

At the moment of writing the Germans still hold the narrow passage leading into the northern end of the fort, by which they communicated with the main body in the first days after the positions were taken. Except for that position, which we expect soon to capture, Douaumont, the "corner stone of Verdun's defense," is French once more.

PRESENT SITUATION MAY FORECAST LORD'S COMING

This View Was Expressed Yesterday at Bible Study and Prophetic Conference at St. Paul's Church—Some Views Commonly Held by Christians Are Challenged.

The keen interest being taken in the Bible Study and Prophetic Conference being held in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church is shown by the intense interest with which the remarks of the speakers are followed. Many of the views expressed challenge those commonly held by Christians and as Scriptural authority is given for them the necessity is borne home to those present of studying their Bibles carefully.

Two striking examples of this were given at yesterday's session, when Rev. Dr. A. B. Winchester of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, while discussing the Kingdom Parables in Matt. 13, showed that the method of interpretation which makes the leaven which the women mixes in the meal to represent Christianity and the meal to represent the world, thus giving the idea that Christianity is to spread until the world is converted, is absolutely at variance with the meaning given by our Lord. Rev Dr. Winchester showed that everywhere in the Scriptures the word "leaven" is used in an evil sense, never in a good one. Christ told His disciples to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees. Elsewhere they were warned to beware of the leaven of Herod. Paul told them to purge out the old leaven. The Jews were forbidden to use leaven in their feasts. When Christ therefore, told the Jews that the kingdom of heaven was like unto leaven which a woman mixed in meal they naturally understood Him to mean that something evil would be mixed in with the teachings of Christ corrupting and dishonouring them and misleading and causing sin among members of the kingdom. Meal in the Scriptures always stands for something that is good. To liken it to something evil is to do violence to its real meaning, as much as to liken leaven which stands for a corrupting influence to something that is good. The real meaning Christ intended to give by the parable was that false teachings would spread. That this has been the case is shown by the prevalence of the many false sects and teachings which are misleading Christians today, and retarding the work and growth of the Church.

A second belief held by many Christians that no one can expect to know the time when the Lord is to return to the earth was challenged by Rev. Canon Howitt, of Hamilton at the evening session. Canon Howitt first explained that there are two stages of the Lords coming. First, He is to come for His saints as described in 1 Thes. 4: 15-18. No one knows when this event will take place, although there are indications that it may occur soon. Later He will come with His saints to judge the world. In order that those who look for this event may see it coming He has given many signs. These He gave in the 24th Chapter of Matthew, in reply to the questions of His disciples, as to when He would come, and what would be the end of the age. The early Christians all believed that they might see the day coming. This is shown in Hebrews 10 25, where Paul warned them not to neglect the gathering of themselves together, but to meet so much the more as they saw the day approaching.

AFTERNOON ADDRESSES.

The increased interest being taken in the sessions was indicated by the fact that the attendance last evening was the largest of any of the meetings held since Sunday. It was representative of the Christian element of the city. Rev. F. A. Connors presided at the afternoon session and Rev. R. B. Grobb at the evening session.

In opening the discussion of the 13th chapter of Matthew, Rev. Dr. Winchester remarked the fact that too many Christians in their study of the Scriptures grasped the meaning of passages and chapters scattered throughout the Bible, but do not seem to grasp the divine plan of salvation as outlined in the Scriptures as a whole. They get passages relating to the Jews and the Jewish kingdom mixed up with other truths relating to the Church, and the Christian profession, and this results in great confusion. For instance, there is not a bit of the gospel in the Sermon on the Mount. Christ was talking to the Jews about the principles that were to rule in the kingdom which the Jews expected their Messiah to come and establish. The Gospel was not proclaimed until after the Jews had refused to accept Christ as their Messiah, and He had cast them off and turned to the Gentiles.

In discussing the parables of the 13th Chapter of Matthew, he showed that in the first parable good seed was sown on four different classes of soil, only one of which brought forth seed and even the seed on that soil did not bear an hundred fold. By this the Lord clearly meant that the teachings of Christianity could not be accepted by the great mass of the people in the world. In this connection the speaker pointed out that even allowing for the greatest possible number of Christians after 1,900 years of teaching not over one-quarter of the world has been christianized.

In discussing the second parable Dr. Winchester showed that where the good seed of Christian teaching was sown the parable showed that Satan would sow bad seed also, and that this would spring up among the good seed. There is nothing in this ultimately grow nothing but good parable to indicate that the field will seed, but the contrary, for Christ showed that the good seed and the bad seed were to be allowed to grow together until the harvest which would be the end of the age when the angels, who would be the reapers would separate it for judgment. This was not the picture of a converted world at the end of the age. This teaching agreed with the parable of the net which gathered both good and bad, the good being separated from the bad and the bad thrown away. Both these parables agreed with the parable of the leaven when the latter word was taken to mean false teachings and professions, but did not harmonize with it if leaven was made to represent something good, a meaning commonly given to it. The treasure in the parable of the treasure Dr. Winchester said represented the faithful remnant for whom Christ had died and the pearl of great price represented the Christian Church in the world for which Christ also died.

Canon Howitt, in the afternoon gave a helpful address on the first part of the 20th Chapter of Matthew.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Canon Howitt's address, in the evening, on "The Signs of the Times" was followed with intense interest. In opening the service Rev. Mr. Grobb read from the 21st chapter of Luke and at the close said that all who had listened to the reading must feel that it had an application to present day conditions, for upon the earth there is distress of nations with perplexity, and men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after these things that are coming on the earth.

Canon Howitt, basing his remarks largely upon the same chapter, first showed that the world is ready for a change. It has all been explored and mapped out, the different nations are united by their telephone and telegraph systems and other means of communication, until now it is possible to flash news around the world the same day it is heard. The world is also awake, all the nations being in a state of unrest. The failure to observe the Lord's Day is one of these signs of the Lord's return.

Canon Howitt showed that Christ said that Jerusalem was to be trodden down by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles should be fulfilled. This war is likely to end by Jerusalem being given back to the Jews and re-built, which will mean the ending of the times of the Gentiles. He explained the meaning of the image in Nebuchadnezzar's vision, and that the old Roman Empire is being re-formed and the Babylonian Empire being brought back into it as a result of this war when the time will have arrived for the stone to fall from heaven and smite the nations. The stone represents the Lord's return, when He comes to judge the nations and set up His kingdom.

Rev. Dr. Winchester spoke on the Letter to the Churches, to Revelations, and showed that they predicted that in the last days the Church would be condemned for her failure to love Christ as it should. This in spite of the fact that it would be rich and increased with goods.

The Conference will close this evening with two addresses, one by Dr. E. R. Hooper of Toronto, on "The Anti-Christ" and the other by Rev R. V. Bingham on "The Second Advent, and the Missionary Programme."

German Order To Check Spending By Boys Making Shells

Boys employed in munition factories in Germany have shown so many evidences of extravagance in spending the money they earned that the representative of the general in command of the Eleventh Army Corp, stationed in Cassel, has issued a general order prohibiting useless and unnecessary expenditure on the part of minors.

The order calls attention to the fact that boys ranging from eighteen to twenty-one years of age are largely employed in munition factories, and are earning such high wages that many of them have become careless with their money. In Cassel some boys were seen fighting the cigarettes with paper money, while others buy the best seats in the theatres, all of which is an evidence of extravagance that cannot be tolerated. The order calls upon them to "think of the seriousness of the times, and to use their earnings for the support of those dependent upon them or to place the money in a saving bank.

The order states that a careful watch will be kept on all boys working in munition factories, and if proof is shown that they are spending their money foolishly the proprietors of the factories in which they are employed will be directed to pay part of their wages to relatives and hold a certain per cent., thereof for deposit in the savings bank to their account no amount of which can be withdrawn until after the war. There can be no appeal from this army order and no boy will be permitted to give up his employment because of it.

ENGLISH ARMY EVER BUSY HARASSING GERMAN LINE

The London Daily Express publishes the following from its correspondent at British Headquarters in France:

There is sometimes a feeling in the army that people do not quite realise the actual state of affairs on the British front, now nearly a hundred miles in length, and it is indeed a matter of some difficulty to convey an accurate impression of the operations. Perusal of the official communiques leaves a conviction that things are dodging along in a somewhat humdrum fashion, with an artillery duel here, a skirmish there, a mine blown up, and so forth.

The fact of the matter is that our front is restlessly active, and on the evidence of prisoners, is the most unpopular of any with the Germans. They had rather be sent anywhere than into the trenches opposite us. Cases are not uncommon of the Germans throwing over notes or holding up messages written on boards in front of their trenches proposing a mutual abstentation from "strafing."

If the German infantry are inferior to ours in vigorous attack they are our equals in dogged determination, and in sticking bravely to their trenches to the last. They are persistent and skilful snipers and they have excellent material. On the other hand, our heavy artillery is now of formidable dimensions both in numbers and calibre, and our special weapons for the trenches are highly efficient and most ingenious. With all these element sin view, remembering that there is no love lost between the two opponents, so that every soldier's one thought is how he can harass the enemy most, it should be easy to understand that there is something doing all the time.

THE MORNING "HATE."

Now even the average day's work does not lack for variety. It usually begins with what is dubbed the "morning strafe," either with artillery or mortars, or both. The object is to counteract any development that may have taken place during the night, and damage any new work that has been done. If the weather is favorable for one or the other, captive balloons go up to survey the land and aeroplanes go off scouting with the general object of seeing what is going on behind the enemy's lines, troops on the march, transports moving, new depots or guns and so on. This information usually gives the artillery, which is generally quiet in the middle of the day, something to work on, and so it gets busy again later in the afternoon.

The infantry in the trenches have always something to do. On a quiet day they are sniping, sending over rifle grenades, or working to improve the defences. Underground the sappers are always mining away steadily. On a busy day, say, when a mine has been sprung on either side, there is sharp fighting for the possesion of the crater, and the bomb throwers have their hands full; or in the course of a night attack a party of the raiders may have succeeded in slipping into a section of trench out of which they must be bombed. Then during the night there is always much work to do between the trenches. The barbed wire entanglements have to be repaired and the "no man's land" patrolled.

SCREENS OF SHELL.

Small raids are becoming increasingly numerous all along the line, ours being more frequent than the German. These raids always take place at night, that is to say, the infantry part of the business, because as they are miniature battles they are preceded by artillery preparations, as in the bigger affairs. A section of the enemy's trench is selected for the operation, and plans are duly laid. When the time comes the artillery sets about destroying the wire entanglements and damaging the parapets. Then the infantry charge to the assault, while the artillery sets up screens of shell on both sides of the advancing raiders and parallel with them, so as to prevent any attack on their flanks.

Naturally the enemy's artillery is busy, too, and if it cannot stop the advance it in turns endeavors to make a screen of fire behind the attacking party to prevent it returning to its own trenches. When the attack is over our artillery again starts on the enemy trenches to prevent a return offensive. As a rule, in the darkness the raiders get back all right, and these little affairs are very useful, because the loss to the attackers is usually less than that inflicted on the defenders, while much useful information is obtained as to the interior of the enemy defences.

If the actual fighting line is thus constantly active what shall be said of the supporting services behind the lines? Our system of light railways spreads its ramifications all over the country, linking up railroads. Royal Engineers and artisans are hard at work felling trees, fashioning timber and building or repairing railways and bridges. The infantry is occupied in improving, extending and developing fortifications, because our lines are being made more numerous and more compact every day, hence more invulnerable. Bombing schools for the infantry and trench-mortar schools hang away industriously far behind the firing line, while cavalry is constantly manoeuvring and exercising.

BRAVE DESPATCH RIDERS.

The roads of France have stood up remarkably well under the tremendous strain of all this heavy traffic. There are extremely few passenger motor cars to be met on the roads in the British zone, but many despatch riders on motor-bicycles, and these deserve special mention. There is not a harder worked body of men in the British army than the despatch riders. Most of them are gentlemen volunteers, and they are certainly expert riders. Speed is essential, and one meets them all over the place, tearing through the most intense and intricate traffic, taking great risks, appearing suddenly around the ends of great lorries, but whizzing past somehow, over the roughest of roads, over the rubbly mess of roads under repair.

There they dash along all day and night, sometimes out under shell fire and back again through it; in all weathers, sometimes covered with mud until they look like clay models, or powdered with dust to a uniform shade of white, in snow and rain, in wind, and cold and heat, there they dash along. Wonderful men in a wonderful army of tireless energy!

NURSE TAKES HEALTH STORY INTO HOMES

Mrs. Lindsay, of School 26, Doing Preventive Work – Mothers Go to School—Knitting Homes and School Close Together for Community's Health Betterment

ROCHESTER, May 31.—Bringing the home and the school together in the most intimate relationships—making the home and the school co-teamwork, that is the present-day function of the schools themselves, and of the associations such as Mothers' Clubs and Parent-Teacher Associations, working in co-operation with the schools.

Almost every school in cities of the size of Rochester to-day maintains a school nurse. In many instances the work is restricted only to cases that can be observed and attended to in the school. That is, no follow-up or social welfare work is attempted. But down at School 26 on Bernard Street, where they are doing remarkable things in other lines they have school nursing down to a science, as it were. There is a finely equipped laboratory and consultation room, and a place where the nurse, Mrs. Nellie S. Lindsay, not only looks after the physical welfare, but helps the children and their mothers solve many other problems.

The room, though small, is well equipped with every thing necessary for the work. Dr. S. H. Rosenthal makes regular visits to the school, and at each visit the children needing attention are presented to him. They get as careful consideration as if they had come in the ordinary channels of professional work, or through a hospital. Those who need special care and are not ill enough to require hospital treatment are sent to the Baden Street Dispensary.

Girls Given Instruction.

The girls of the school are given instruction in the care of the baby—bathing, dressing, feeding and every thing necessary for its health and comfort. As they advance they are taught how to prepare the baby's food, and how to select foods for small children.

Through these girls the home is reached and the mothers come into the classes with them for instruction. The work also takes Mrs. Lindsay into the homes where she is able to give first hand instruction to those mothers who do not find their way to the school. In this way she does actual district nursing, giving hand care, suggesting methods of handling sickness and co-operating with the doctor, and when none has been called urging the necessity of his attendance.

One of the things district nurses do is giving instruction in home sanitation, and that line also falls within Mrs. Lindsay's activities. The work has been growing right along and she finds demands made on her in ever increasing proportion with the growth of the school for help and instruction in getting the homes of the district on the right sort of health-giving and health-maintaining basis.

"Our care of the children in this school," said Mrs. Lindsay, "begins before they are born and continues until they are old enough to go to work — for we never lose sight of these children until they are of working age, unless they move out of the district. The result of this intimacy has been to bring the homes and the school close together. First the girls took the message of sanitation, child hygiene and baby welfare home to their parents. Then the mothers began to reach out for the knowledge they began to feel necessary to the protection of the family, until now the relationship is so closely knit that the homes come to the school, and, as I have said, many of the mothers are pupils in classes with their children, gathering knowledge necessary for the proper care of themselves and their families."

"This school nursing work will work out to be a great community asset," said Colonel S. H. Mouthrop, principal of the school, in discussing Mrs. Lindsay and her work. "It is essentially a preventive work. Stop disease at its source and in a generation there will be no sick people. Teach the children by practical example and application the principles of health and the generations to come will be virile and vital."

PATRONS IN BERLIN RESTAURANTS MUST PROVIDE OWN SUGAR

London, May 30.—A despatch from Rotterdam to the Daily Telegraph says: "Berlin has made a further reduction in the meat ration. Beginning to-day this is fixed at half a pound of meat or fat per adult each week. Under the new arrangement the ration is subject to revision each week. It is doubtful whether the supplies on hand will meet even this allowance. The shortage continues, and the government is encouraging the use of gulls' eggs. There is also a serious lack of sugar. Last week the hotel and restaurant keepers appealed to the municipality to increase the minimum allowed to be purchased. The request was refused, and notice was issued that restaurant customers in the future must bring with them the sugar which they wish for their coffee, tea or cocoa. Soap is now so scarce that workmen in Berlin factories have to bring their own supply with them."

A Berlin despatch says: "Eugene Zimmermann, editor of the Lokal Anzeiger, says: It seems beyond all doubt that our enemies desire the war to go on through the summer, because they have a firm but erroneous conviction that Germany will collapse from the lack of foodstuffs before a new harvest can be brought in. In this, as in so much else during the war, they will deceive themselves. We shall have to limit ourselves even more than heretofore, and give up many habits of life, but we will come through. Only when our foes shall have realised the true situation, that is to say in the fall, at the earliest, will they consider the then most important question whether they shall fight on or conclude peace on the basis of the war situation."

BURNS DENIES GUILT.

Willing to Waive Immunity — Says He Uncovered Crime.

NEW YORK, May 31.—W. J. Burns, detective, said on his return from Los Angeles Sunday, that he would willingly waive immunity and take the stand to-day at the John Doe hearing into the wire tapping proceedings. He maintained that in everything he did he was clearly within his rights.

"I will be very glad to tell everything that happened and all we found out," he declared, "with the exception of those things that may interfere with our future work. We have uncovered enough evidence to justify a criminal charge."

Mr. Burns would not say what the nature of the charge would be or name the person against whom it would be brought. He asserted, however, that the Morgan firm would undoubtedly press it.

GIANTS' WINNING STREAK IS BROKEN BY THE PHILLIES

New York, May 30.—The winning streak of the Giants has been broken. In this morning's game at Philadelphia with the champion Phillies, the men of McGraw, after winning seventeen consecutive games, were forced to sup the bitter cup and their dream of establishing a new record for consecutive wins was not realised. It remained for a Giant cast-off to make the New Yorkers lower their standard. Al Demaree, with the Giants for a number of seasons, and then turned over to the Phillies, was on the mound this morning when the locals won by 5 to 1. Opposed to him was "Pol" Perritt.

HOW GIANTS LOST.

The following summary of the 8th inning shows how the defat of the Giants was accomplished—Burns singled and Dugey ran for him. Demaree bunted and Perritt in trying to get Dugey at second threw wild. Dugey scored while Bancroft beat out a bunt. Nichoff tripled, scoring Demaree and Bancroft. Stock hit to McKechnie, who threw to Fletcher, catching Nichoff off third. Cravath shot a home run over the right field wall, sending in Stock ahead of him. Whitted out, Fletcher to Merkle Cooper struck out. Five runs. The only other run of the game came in the 9th when Kauff scored New York's lone tally.

The splendid record made by the Giants, and which terminated to-day, was the centre of baseball attention. It eclipsed even the work of the Cleveland Indians, who are making such a splendid showing in the American League. The Giants left the Polo Grounds on May 9th for a trip abroad and up to that time had won only two out of fifteen starts. They started in with a victory in the first game at Pittsburg and up until this morning had not lost a game. The record they were after was to better that made by the Providence Grays, in 1884, when that team won twenty consecutive games.

McGRAW A PROPHET.

The run of seventeen victories is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that it was made in the early season. Teams have made long runs of consecutive wins but they have invariably been in the hot weather when the players are in the best of condition. Manager McGraw contended during the spring training that he had in this year's team the best aggregation that ever represented a New York National League club. He was the subject of much criticism during the early days of the campaign when his team played miserable ball but he has now demonstrated that he knew what he was talking about. The veteran Christy Mathewson, whom many pronounced as through, is having another good season, and McGraw has now one of the best pitching staffs in the National League.

BASEBALL

The senior baseball team of the Queen Mary School defeated the Collegiate team, Monday afternoon by a score of 15 to 9.

The game was played at Queen Mary The batteries were: For Queen Mary Greene and Thirnbeck; for the Collegiate:

Green and Hagerman.

Mr. Stacey umpired satisfactorily.

Tuesday afternoon's baseball game between the Junior teams of the Central and Queen Mary schools, resulted in a victory for the latter, the score being 12 to 11. The game was played on the Queen Mary grounds. The batteries were: Central, McGill and Dutton; for Queen Mary, Baraclough and Hamilton.

Mr. Frank Jobbitt umpired in his usual satisfactory manner.

CAN KILL WITH TONGUE.

Lion Capable of Destroying Man Merely by Licking Him.

The tongues of some animals are very dangerous weapons. A lion could speedily kill a man by merely licking him with his tongue. The tongues of all the members of the cat family are covered with curious recurving spines, formed of tough cartilage. In the common domestic cat these spines are very small, but are sufficiently well developed to give the tongue a feeling of roughness.

In the fiercest animals, such as the lion or tiger, these spines are frequently found projecting up for an eighth of an inch or more, with very sharp points or edges. While the mouth is relaxed the tongue is soft and smooth, but when the animal is excited the spines become rigid.

LACROSSE

The local team had another good workout Monday evening, and the boys are showing great improvement by their consistent practice. The team intend to be in perfect shape when they make their debut this season. The old-timers should get on the job and encourage the youngsters along for the good of the game.

Pte. King Dillon, while equipped with all the kit of a soldier, by the Militia Department, found, when he got to Kingston, that he forgot his mug; essential weapon, his old war club, the lacrosse stick, which he used so effectively in a scientific way for years, so he sent a hurry-up call to the management to forward the old reliable, which request they complied with. They also sent their best wishes and hoped that 'King' would have equal success throwing grenades into the trenches of the Hun as he did in the game.

The practice will be at the Oval to-night. The executive are negotiating with the management of the Riverside Park for future practice nights and games. Manager Geo. Moin will be on hand to-night to coach the boys.

CHURCH TENNIS LEAGUE.

George Street played St. Andrew's at the bowling green courts last night, St. Andrew's winning 3 sets out of 4. For St. Andrew's H. Nicoll and E. Walton beat H. Meyers and T. Shields of George Street, 6-1, 6-2, and F. E. Kitz and A. Gilbert, St Andrew's, beat J. E. Smith and C. R. Allis of George Street, 8-10, 7-5.

Games to-morrow are: Sacred Heart vs. All Saints, Trinity vs. Knox, K. of C. vs. Y.M.C.A.

THE CRUISE OF THE PRUSSIAN KING.

It was the old ship Prussian King, and it sailed a stormy sea,
And the Kaiser said to his son and heir, "We're out for a jubilee."
Says Willie, "To murder and burn and rob, it surely is a treat.
But there's one thing makes me awfully scared, it's the sight of the British fleet—"
"Oh, sonny, you don't know your dad, I'll show them what I'm like.
I'm just about the biggest bluff, that ever crossed the pike.
"For I'm the mate and the captain bold and the admiral, too, you see.
I'm the gink with the iron cross from Berlin on the Spree."
Then up spake old Von Tirpitz, with all his might and main,
"I've sent the ships to the Kiel Canal, for I fear a hurricane."
The Kaiser sat in his bomb-proof car, a cigar butt in his mouth,
And he heard the war reports come in from the east and west and south.
"Say, papa, I hear a noise like guns, whatever can it be?"
"Oh, I guess it's a British man-of-war; they float on every sea."
"Say, papa, I hear a row down east, whatever can it be?"
"Oh, that's the return of the Russian bear, and he'll soon be after me."
"Our money is at a discount, dad, and the Turks are on the run.
And the Frenchmen put it all over us at the battle of Verdun.
"That row we raised in Ireland to fool the British rulet,
Has gone completely on the blink, and Sir Roger's in the cooler."
"Say, boy, there's no one in this world can run this job like me.
I'll build about four million subs and live by piracy."
Then from the land of the Southern Cross, through the blinding sleet and snow,
Came some transports filled with Australian troops to add to the Prussians' woe.
Faster and thicker came the news of battles west and east.
The cigar butt dropped into the mud, and the Kaiser frothed like yeast.
"The lager beer is getting low, say, daddy, there's the rub.
And the British fleet is blockading us, and we are getting short of grub."
Then the Kaiser swore some German swears, till his generals stood aghast,
And he took a pound of limburger cheese, and nailed it to the mast.
"Say, daddy, I hear a louder noise, whatever can it be?"
"Oh, that's some more of the 93rd boys, and it means our finish, see!"

Parrot Loses Job With Suffragists

THE BIRD REFUSES TO SAY "VOTES FOR WOMEN."

Chicago, May 31.—Because it could not be taught to say "Votes for women!" a parrot which recently was installed at the headquarters of the woman suffragists, is back in the bird store.

It was the purpose of the women to carry the bird in the suffrage parade on June 7th, the day of the Republican national convention here, as a means of advertising the desire of women for the right of suffrage.

The parrot would say "Votes" but refused to go any further.

It is all a question of proportion in war time. The shoe is bound to pinch —Mr. M'Kinnon Wood.

Travel from one to two years free in your Ford on your saving in one year's depreciation

Other cars in the $1000 or less class, after one year of service, are worth from $250 to $400 less than their purchased price. That's their depreciation.

Ford cars, after a year's hard work, sell on an average for only $125 less than they cost brand new. That's Ford depreciation.

The difference in depreciation of these year-old cars ranges from $125 in the one case to $275 in the other—both considerable savings for Ford owners.

Thousands of owners tell us that it costs .024 per mile on an average to drive a Ford—paying for gasoline, oil, tires and repairs.

So, if your saving in depreciation for a year is $125 you pay all your expenses for 5,208 miles—while if it is $275, you have kept enough money in your pocket to pay for driving your Ford 11,458 miles.

Buying a Ford in preference to other less than $1,000 cars, lets you save in one year's time a difference in depreciation that pays all your motoring bills for from one to two years.

Pte. Jack Curtis of 93rd Battalion Still Very Much Alive, Reports Col. Johnston

A telephone message from Kingston this morning to the effect that Pte. Jack Curtis of the 93rd Battalion, had died at Kingston last night from pneumonia, caused much needless grief in Peterborough. The Examiner called up Col. Johnston at Barriefield and found that there was no truth in the report, which he said had been circulated in camp as well. Pte. Curtis is suffering with a cold, and has a fairly high temperature, but his condition is not regarded as dangerous. This information from Lt.-Col. Johnston will be gladly received in view of the earlier reports.

FUNERAL OF JAMES J. HILL

All Activities in North Dakota Were Stopped from 2 to 4 p. m.

Special to The Examiner:

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 31. — The northwest stood still to-day while its great builder, James J. Hill, Canadian, was buried. The funeral services, strictly private and without flowers at the request of the family, were held at the home at two o'clock this afternoon. Vicar General Gibbons, Diocese of St. Paul, Catholic, officiated, and the burial was at Hill's favourite farm "North Oaks," near St. Paul.

By Governor Hanna's proclamation North Dakota was asked to stop all activities from 2 to 4 p.m. to-day. "In the death of James J. Hill North Dakota has lost its best friend," the Governor's proclamation read.

Schools were closed in St. Paul throughout the day, the State Capitol departments were closed, and flags throughout the state were at half mast. The half masting of flags by official order is the most signal honour ever paid to a private citizen. By proclamation of St. Paul's mayor every citizen was asked to pause wherever he stood and bow his head from 2 to 2:05 in honour of Mr. Hill. Factories, shops and all activities were ordered absolutely suspended for this period.

93RD BEST BEHAVED BATTALION THE G.T.R. HAVE TRANSPORTED

"The best behaved battalion the G.T.R. has carried," was the opinion of the railway officials who were in charge of the transportation of the 93rd Battalion to Kingston. Mr. B. A. Rose was in charge of the first train, and Mr. S. R. Joyce, T.P.A. had the second. Trainmaster Orr and Locomotive Foreman W. J. Fee, of Lindsay also accompanied the trains. The G.T.R. had the first train at Kingston at 1:20, and the other arrived at 2 o'clock. The battalion was then formed up and marched off to camp.

Coal Goes Up 10c. a Ton To-morrow Here

Coal will be advanced 10 cents a ton to-morrow, making the prices 7.60 for stove and $7.85 for nut coal. There has apparently been no concerted movement, and individual dealers did not know what the others were doing. The Examiner called up several and learned that they were making an advance of 10c., and apparently the increase is general. In Hamilton recently there was a 25c. raise.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, May 31.—Lehigh Valley and reading were active and strong at opening of stock exchange to-day and several specialities showed advances of point. Special to the Examiner:

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. H. J. Prust of Edmonton, Alta., is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bellaghem, Hunter St.

The many friends of Bandman Stanley McCabe of the 39th and Private Sidney McCabe of the 93rd Battalions were sorry to learn that their mother was ill yesterday with contraction of the muscles when he battalion was leaving for camp. It was a sudden muscular attack.

The members of Knox church Women's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Chiles, 93 Aylmer street Monday evening. May 29th to bid farewell to her on the eve of her departure for Havelock. A very pleasant time was spent. Refreshments were served by the ladies and a beautiful hymn book was presented to Mrs. Chiles.

Mr. Geo. Pound, Superintendent of the International Sailors' Missionary Association, of which Mr. James S. Potter is sec-treas., is in the city in the interests of the work among sailors, from Quebec, westward, also of the lighthouse and life saving stations. During the past week 107 light houses on [illegible] waters have been supplied, and last season 160. With many life saving crews, no other organization in Canada has ever attempted this most important work here, though it probably will be by the time it gets going abroad. He is sending on the Frederick VIII. today, for a general tour of investigation and probably investment, his metropolitan manager, Gaston Planaff, of this city.

HEAR BALLIN ON FUTURE OF GERMAN SHIPS

HAMBURG, May 31.—Albert Ballin, war manager of the German railways and director of the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, characterized the war as the greatest, bloodiest and most idiotic war of all time," in an address delivered yesterday, at a general meeting of the Woermann Shipping Company.

Herr Ballin declared that German shipping interests, after the successful termination of this war, must be prepared to conduct a new war on the economic battle ground against competitors "extraordinary strengthened by war profits of fantastic height." He expressed confidence however, that the old Hanseatic spirit would be able to accept successfully the gage of battle in this struggle. First, however, he declared, that the concept of freedom must be so established that Germans, in regard to the world trade, need n longer be forced .ve as "tenants of England." In conclusion, Herr Ballin thanked the Reichstag for the resolutions passed by it recognising the importance of the speedy re building of Germany's mercantile marine and requesting the assistance of the government to that end.

The meeting, which sanctioned the re-organization of the Woermann Line, signalized the advent as a shipping magnate of Hugo Stinnes, one of Germany's great coal and iron men, wh was elected a director of the company. August Thyssen, another, and perhaps the greatest of Germany's iron and coal magnates, has bought a fourth interest in the Bulkan shipworks at Bremen. Tyssen and Stinnes are credited with the belief that Germany's future lies upon the water and that the expected post bellum boom will bring great returns to the men who are first on the grund.

Stinnes is reported to have a large number of ocean freighters already on the stocks in spite of the high war cost of labour and material. The German shipbuilding industry which in the first year of the war was almost dead, is now showing decided vigor. The Hanso Line has ordered six ships at Bremen and the Roland Line has increased its capital for the same purpose.

New Badge of Canada's Most Famous Regiment — Every city in Canada has contributed to the membership of the Princess Pats, which has recently been authorized to attach to their regimental badge the names of several battles in which they have fought in France and Belgium.

Throws Bucket Into Auto, Kills Eight-Year-Old Girl

Hartford City, Ind., May 31. — Geraldine Stout, eight-year-old daughter of E. P. Stout, of Upland, Ind., is dead of a broken neck, and Albert Thomas, aged 40, a farmer, is in the jail here to-day charged with having killed her with a bucket of corn. Thomas was compelled to jump from the path of Dr. Stout's automobile, it was said. He was alleged to have swung the bucket of corn about his head and to have hurled it into the automobile. It struck the little girl, and she died almost immediately.

Threats from the crowds about the jail have caused extra gaurds to be placed on duty. Thomas denies that he threw the bucket voluntarily. He says that it slipped from his hands as he scrambled from the road.

FORD TO AID WAR'S POOR.

Will Invest Big Fortune in Belligerent Countries of Europe.

NEW YORK, May 31.—With the departure from this port to-day of the Scandinavian-American liner Frederick VIII., there will begin a movement which will result within the year—regardless of the continuance or stoppage of the war — in Henry Ford investing an immense fortune in Europe.

The Detroit motor manufacturer is prepared to spend, in a way which he believes will combine both good business and humanitarianism, several million dollars, perhaps eventually $25,000,000, and to give employment at high wages to thousands of men in the various countries of the Old World.

He is to start in several of the European countries, including at least three or four of those now engaged in war, his tractor plow business, which is not yet in operation

Townshend's Men Dying of Hunger Before Surrender

BOMBAY, India, May 31.—Stories of the terrible suffering of the British and Indian soldiers and the inhabitants of Kut-El-Amara before Gen. Townshend gave up his gallant defence of the place, have been brought here by wounded and diseased prisoners who were exchanged for Turkish prisoners.

The British wounded were frightfully emaciated. The whole garrison would have perished if Gen. Townshend had held out a few days longer. When the capitulation was signed, only six mules were left to feed the army and 20,000 of the civil population. When Townshend tried to send the Turkish civilians out into the Turkish lines, the Turks hanged forty of them as a warning to the remainder to stay and consume the British food.

"Before the surrender, every cannon, projectile, rifle and cartridge was destoyed. A dairy of the siege shows only shows only suffering for food. Before the surrender, a dead officer's kit was sold. Eighty dollars was paid for a box of cigars and $20 for fifty American cigarettes.

"In February the rations daily consisted of a pound of barley mess bread and a pound and a quarter of mule or horse flesh. In April it was four ounces of bread and a pound of flesh. The supply of bread to the British soldiers was even lower, since the Indians would not eat the meat because of their religion. Disease spread among the horses and hundreds had to be shot, 2,000 also being killed because there was no grain for them, the fattest were kept for 45 days for food. In February scurvy appeared and when British aeroplanes dropped seeds Townshend turned his army into gardeners. Mill stones, too, were dropped from aeroplanes to grind flour. Stray cats furnished a delicate "wild rabbit supper."

Grass was cooked as a vegetable, and ginger root, boiled, acted as a substitute for tea and coffee. Later aeroplanes dropped some corn, flour cocoa, sugar, tea and cigarettes, but this went to the wounded alone.

LIQUOR DETECTIVE SAID TO HAVE BEEN TOO GOOD AN ACTOR

LINDSAY, June 1.—Not satisfied with the report from Cannington, the Ontario License Board Tuesday has started a private enquiry into the conduct of their detective, Alex. Coorian, in connection with the charge that he became intoxicated while there. Coorian and Officer Servis, of the department, both appeared before the board and the detective gave his version of the affair. While the members of the Board refused to say anything regarding the case, it is understood that they have decided to appeal the conviction against Coorian and may also institute proceedings for perjury against some of the witnesses who testified.

It seems that Corrian went to Cannington with an assistant. He took the town Constable into his confidence and the understanding was that when the arrests took place Coorian was also to be gathered in to make the thing look more genuine. Coorian entered the club room with one of the men he was after, but his partner could not get in. The detective, being constantly under the eye of the man he was trying to catch, was forced to drink some of the liquor, but managed to throw most of the drinks away.

After having a few drinks Coorian feigned drunkenness. Prepared to lay his information and prosecute the piggers, Coorian was surprised to find that an information had been laid against himself for drunkenness by the constable who was to help him, and he believes that his acting was so good as to have caused this.

While the board is investigating the case the prosecution of the alleged blind piggers has been postponed.

Doctor Says Phosphorus and Iron Makes Your Nerves 200% Stronger in Ten Days

Iron For Your Blood and Phosphorus For Your Nerves, Make You 200 p.c. Stronger In 10 Days.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. R. Sauer, Specialist, of this city, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron, and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food simply passes through your system like coal through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation people become generally weakened, nervous, and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at nights; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless; but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Bonized Phosphorus with iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous and run down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance, and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Bonized Phosphorus with iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth, and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—Bonized Phosphorus with Iron, recommended here, is not a patent medicine nor a secret remedy, but one which is widely known by both doctors and druggists who will tell you that one tablet of this newer form of iron is worth a whole bottle of some medicines. It is dispensed in this city by F. C. Weber's two stores at 50 cents a box

JOHNSON IN SPAIN

London, May 30.—Jack Johnson, the ex-heavyweight champion of the world, has settled down in Spain, having opened a boxing academy in Madrid. It is reported that one of his distinguished patrons is King Alfonso. Johnson left England at the "invitation" of the authorities, having, it was understood, booked passage for the Argentine, but stepping off at the land of the bull fights, he appears to have made himself agreeable to the natives, who may not have the same strong objection to his manners as the British and American authorities entertained. Johnson has had a couple of contests too, both taking place at the Grand Theatre, Madrid, where he defeated Frank Crosier on March 10th and Arthur Grihah, labelled the heavyweight champion of Spain, on March 25th, the Spaniard being knocked out in the eleventh round.

An attractive centrepiece is made of filet net, which is embroidered in heavy mercerized linen in a conventional design. This is really a rarely beautiful table decoration and the filet net gives the effect of Mexican drawnwork.

Only those who have put up with inferior quality in shirts can appreciate all that the W.G.&R. label stands for. If you will take the positive of all the negative qualities that you find in a "bargain" shirt, you will have some idea of what the label really represents.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE REWARD OF EVIL.

The Nettie B. was surging north, nearing Cape Breton. Nat Burns sat moodily on the top of the house and watched the schooner take 'em green over her bows.

Within the last day a fog with a wind behind it had drifted across the lead-coloured ocean; and now, although the fog was gone, the wind was still howling and bringing with it a rising sea.

The equinoxes were not far off, and all skippers had a weather eye out, and paid especial attention to the stoutness of lashings and patched canvas.

Never had Burns been in a blacker mood, and never had he better cause.

He was three days from St. Andrew's, and there he had become acquainted with several facts.

The first was that no Canadian gunboat by the name of Albatross had called at said port and left any prisoner by the name of Code Schofield—in fact, such gunboat had not called at all.

Investigation at the admiralty office proved to Nat that the real Albatross had reported from St. John's, Newfoundland, on the very day he supposed he had met her. As the waters near St. Andrew's and St. John are several hundreds of miles apart, Nat was not long in forming the opinion that he had been duped.

Fuming with rage, he began to investigate. Gradually he learned the story (from sailors in wine-shops and general hearsay) of the mysterious schooner that had twice saved Code Schofield from actual capture, and had aided him on one or two other occasions.

One man said he had heard of a retired naval officer named Foraker, who was supposed to be in command. As a matter of fact, there was a Captain Foraker aboard the schooner who navigated her and instilled the "run and jump" discipline that had so excited Code's admiration. Outside of this vague fact, Nat's knowledge was scant.

He was ignorant of who owned the swift vessel. He would never have connected Elsa Mallaby with her in ten years of hard thinking. All he did know was that some unknown agency was suddenly at work in behalf of the man he hated.

He notified the admiralty that a strange schooner had impersonated the gunboat of H. I. M. George V., and gave a very accurate description of her.

As this was a new offence for the vessel that had already interfered with justice twice, the skippers of all the revenue cutters along the coast bent their energies to capturing or sinking this semipiratical craft upon the receipt of radiograms to that effect.

Not only had Nat set the machinery of the law in motion against the mystery schooner, but he had provided against any future dabbling with his constabulary powers by the simple expedient of having with him an officer of the law, who was empowered to bring the accused murderer of Michael Burns before the bar of justice without transfer.

When the supposed gunboat had removed the prisoner from his deck and borne away (for a while) on the course to St. Andrew's, Nat, relieved of responsibility, ran over to Grande Mignon and into the harbour of Freckirk Head.

His purpose in this was twofold, and treacherous in both cases. First, he lost no time in spreading the details of how Code Schofield had been captured in a drunken brawl at St. Pierre and was lighting the jailers in St. Andrew's. Secondly, he had a long private interview with Bill Boughton, in which he tried to get the storekeeper to sign a contract for his (Burns's) fish at a certain price.

While the former was meanness of a hideous kind, this latter move was one of treachery against the men of Freckirk Head. The worst part of it was that Nat had about a hundred quintals of splendid cod (every pound he had caught) in his hold and these he handed over to Boughton as a sample of what was to come from him very shortly.

Boughton was hard up for fish for none had come from the Banks, and bought them at a big price. But as to the signing of the contract, he demurred. When Nat could not explain why he had caught so few fish in such a long time the storekeeper became wary and refused to commit himself. Finally he agreed to the price if Nat would deliver a thousand quintals before any of the rest of the fleet arrived home.

Consequently it was up mainsail and away them flat and a fast run north for the Nettie B.

During his day's stay in Freckirk Head he had received a big bag of mail for the men of the fleet from their women folk at home, and this he had in his cabin, now all distributed and tied into handles, one for each schooner, so that they could be easily sorted and thrown aboard as he met them.

Burns caught the fleet of a Thursday morning, just as they had dropped anchor after making a night berth, and the dories were out sampling the ground and the fish. It was just three days after Code had arrived aboard the Charming Lass again.

As Nat worked his way in and out among the vessels, throwing their mail aboard attached to pieces of coal, he kept an eye out for the Rosan. One very important piece of business that had brought him north was a reconciliation with Nellie Tanner, and he meant, while his men were out in the dories, to accomplish this first.

At last he sighted her near the very front line of the fleet. The Charming Lass he could not see, for Code had taken a different direction from the Rosan and was one of the score of sails scattered around the horizon. But Nat was in no great hurry to get him on the minute; if the mystery schooner were attended to, then it would be merely a matter of time until the capture of Code.

He ranged up astern of the Rosan with a cheery yell and let go his anchor, ordering his dories over the side in the same breath. But his aspirations received a chilling setback from none other than Bijonah Tanner himself. The old man had been sleepless for a week trying to nose out the Lass for the top haul of the fleet, and here was a young scapegrace who came and cast anchor within a hundred yards of his chosen ground.

Nat laughed carelessly at the storm of abuse that rattled over the stern of the Rosan and rowed over to her in his dory with the package of mail.

"Forget it, papa," he said, easily insolent, as he climbed over the rail in the teeth of a broadside. "We're not goin' to foul your rodin' or steal your fish. I have come to make a call and tell you the news from home."

He handed Bijonah a couple of letters and a package containing those of the men. Two others he kept in his hand.

For a few moments he chatted with the old man, telling him what had happened in Freckirk Head. Then he asked for Nellie, whom he had not seen. As he asked she came up out of the cabin, having just finished her breakfast.

She was dressed in white this morning; a white canvas blouse with a broad blue collar and V-neck held to modest stricture by a flowing blue tie, a white duck skirt and whitened shoes—a costume that set off her pink cheeks and bright eyes.

Since the violent emotions of the fire at the Head, her courtship, and her self-analysation since her split with Nat, she had seemed to become more of a woman.

Nat had not the slightest doubt but that Nellie by this time would have recovered from her angry pet of their last interview. He was very certain that their rection had only been temporary.

Nellie was unfeignedly glad to see him.

He stretched out his arms to her impulsively but she refused him and he laughed the rebuff off good naturedly.

"Oh, did you bring any letters for me?" she cried eagerly.

He held out the two that he had kept in his hand.

"Oh, goodness, Nat—only from mama, and Lutie Bissell. You excited me so!"

He spread a tarpaulin amid the clutter amidships and they sat down.

She excused herself and began to read her letters, first opening the one from the girl friend, which, as such letters usually do, contained nothing of importance. Then she opened the one from her mother. It was long, and she settled back to the pleasure of deciphering it.

Nat smoked and whistled and looked out to sea, waiting for her to finish. Therefore, he did not observe the changes that passed across her face. Near the middle of the letter the color rose to her forehead in a hot wave but at the end it had receded, leaving her pale. Methodically she folded the letter and returned it to the envelope.

"Well, dearest," he said cheerfully, "all through? Now I want to talk to you—" He reached for her hand, but she withdrew it beyond his reach and looked at him with the steady brown eyes whose level gaze he hated.

"Come on now, Nellie," he said impatiently, stung by her relentlessness, "you are not going to be mad forever about that other time, are you? I was out of temper an' said things—"

"Mother was up to Mallaby House for dinner a little while ago," interrupted Nellie as though she had not heard him.

"Yes? That's good. Fine place, ain't it? As I was saying, I forgot myself—"

"They talked about us, too; mother says that's nearly all they talked about."

"Must've been short of conversation. Am glad to say, Nellie, that I'll try never to speak like that to you again. I—"

"Mother says she learned things about you that she never had imagined before," persisted Nellie, with quiet insistence. But again Nat did not seem to have heard her. With an awkward motion he drew from his pocket the little glazed paper box that contained the engagement ring.

"Please," he said, "I want you to take this again." He was in earnest.

"It's strange Elsa Mallaby should be able to tell mother things about you.

Nat lost his patience. He had tried his best to make peace, and the girl was only baiting him for her own amusement.

"What the deuce is all this about that Mallaby woman?" he asked. "I should think you'd listen to me, Nellie."

"If you will listen to me first, then I'll listen to you as long as you like."

"I agree," he said, thrusting the ring-box back into his pocket, "only make it short, will you, little girl?"

"Yes, I will," she promised, without smiling. "I merely said that mother and Mrs. Mallaby had discussed you and me, and our marriage, and that Mrs. Mallaby had said some things about you."

"Well, lots of people do that," he smiled.

"Yes—but they haven't said just this thing, Nat."

"What was that?"

"I'm going to let you think. Just suppose that Mrs. Mallaby hated you very much and wanted to do you harm. What would she tell my mother?"

The girl, pale and on the verge of an hysterical outburst, watched his face out of her mask of self-control.

The blood beneath his tan receded, and was replaced by a sickly greenish hue. That flash had brought its memory—a memory that had lain buried beneath the events of his later life. Did she know? How could she know

To the girl watching him there was confirmation enough. She was suddenly filled with inexpressible distaste for this man who had in days past smothered her with caresses and dinned into her ears speeches concerning a passion that he called love.

"I see it is all true," she said quietly. "This is all I have to say. Now I will listen to what you were going to tell me a few minutes ago—that is if you still wish to say it."

Nat read his doom in those few calm words. The things that had been in his mind to say rose and choked his throat; the thought of the ring in his pocket seemed like profanation. He gulped twice and tried to speak, but the words clotted on his tongue.

Still she sat quietly looking at him, politely readily to listen.

With a horrible croaking sound he got to his feet, looked irresolutely at her for a moment, and then went to the side where his dory lay. She next saw him rowing lazily to the Nettie B., and then she turned her face from the sight of him.

And suddenly into her mind, long prepared, came the thought of Code Schofield. Amid the chaos of her shattered ideals his face and figure rose more desirable than all the earth.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomain-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate set on the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels.

THE ONLY ONE LEFT

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by Associated Literary Press.

I was only fourteen years old when I made the voyage from London to Rio on board the Duchess, having a crew of fourteen, all told. At Rio we loaded green coffee for Australia. We got away with a fair wind and every body in perfect health, and our run to the east, until we had sighted inaccessible island and left it a hundred miles astern, was something to boast of. Then came a dead flat calm, which lasted for eleven days. On the fifth day of the calm two men were suddenly stricken with a strange ailment. They were reported sick at 8 o'clock in the morning; by 2 p. m. both were dead; at 6 o'clock a third man was taken down and lived only two hours.

Green coffee will sometimes breed fever on a long, hot voyage, but the symptoms of these men were so strange that some other explanation had to be looked for. No one was attacked on the sixth day, but on the seventh the captain, second mate and a common sailor all came down at once. The first complaint was dryness of the tongue. That was followed in half an hour by loss of sight and other senses and before noon all were dead. On the night of the seventh day a sailor who had lain down on the deck in perfect health and soundly slumbered for three hours awoke with a parched tongue. He did not wait to die as others had done, but groped his way to the ship's side and dropped from the rail into the sea. He was the sixth who had died, and the living were panic stricken.

We had now lost nearly half our crew, and the ship lay heaving on the glassy sea without sign that the calm was ever to be broken. On the morning of the eighth day there was a better feeling, however. At noon every man ate a hearty dinner. An hour later four men were taken down at almost the same moment, and the symptoms were more violent than in any of the preceding cases. There was no burial of the bodies; they were simply thrown overboard as soon as life had departed. When this had been accomplished, the mate called the living around him and said there was no longer any hope that any man would be spared. The captain's gig could be got at handily, and in case we wanted to take it and pull away from the ship he would help to get her in the water. The two sailors were eager to get off, but my mind was quickly made up to remain with Mr Merwin.

When the mate and I were left alone he wrote up his log book and also prepared two statements, which he sealed up and cast overboard. That night when I went to sleep the bark was heaving about on the ground swell in the same monotonous way, and Mr. Merwin sat at the table in the cabin reading a book. I slept the night through without a break, and it was sunrise when I turned out. I looked into the mate's stateroom, but saw that he had not been to bed. I ran on deck, but he was nowhere to be seen. I called him and began a search, and it was a full hour before I gave up and realized that he was not in the ship. What had happened during the night I could only surmise. He had not wakened me nor left a message.

When I fully realized that I was alone aboard of the ship I was so terrified that I hid away in the cabin for several hours.

Things were not at all clear to me until the morning of the eleventh day of the calm. Then I awoke to find myself feeling as well as ever in my life and ran on deck to find signs of change in the weather. I knew how to make a signal of distress of the English flag, and, although there was no wind, I ran the bunting aloft.

It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon before the first catspaws began playing over the glassy surface of the sea, but in the course of half an hour a steady breeze set in from the north, and the bark went drifting away before it. During the next five days and nights the breeze blew from every point of the compass except the east, but did not rise to a gale nor create a heavy sea. I had little to do except to cook my meals and go aloft to look for sails, but I made as much work for myself as I could and did not permit my mind to dwell on the present or future. On the seventh or eighth day of my loneliness at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and while the bark was drifting to the east under a light breeze I went aloft and made out a sail to the north, a second to the south and a third to the west. The first two were too far away to hope for assistance. The third was coming up and must pass me close. She was but a speck on the horizon when I made her out, but two hours later I had her in plain sight, and at 3 o'clock she was up with me. She proved to be the ship Amazon of Liverpool, bound for the Cape with soldiers and emigrants, and a crew was put aboard of the derelict, and she headed for that port in company. Ship and cargo were worth a big sum of money, but I was not entitled to a dollar of salvage. There were those who even said I ought to be thankful over my escape from the epidemic, let alone the question of a reward. I had to tell the story over and over again, make affidavits, go into court and sign papers, and I may tell you that before I got through playing the hero I was disgusted with the whole business and hoping nothing of the sort would ever occur again.

BIBLE IN 600 LANGUAGES.

The Poor in All Parts of the World Receive Copies and Even the Blind May Read.

The Bible is now being printed in not less than six hundred languages and dialects. The American Bible Society itself, says the Christian Herald, has printed the Scriptures in more than eighty-five languages and dialects.

At the present time the British and Foreign Bible Society, through its German branch, is printing Bibles in Russian for the Russian prisoners in Germany. The American Bible Society has already distributed to the soldiers in Europe more than 400,000 copies of the New Testament, which have been paid for by the Sunday School children of the world.

The Bible has been prepared for the blind in three systems of embossed letters, and from the very first year of the society efforts have been made to supply missionaries to American Indians with copies of the Scriptures. The Delawares, Mohawks, Ojibwas, Senecas, Cherokees, Choctaws, Dakotas and Sioux were all supplied in the first twenty-five years of the society's life.

After the civil war a special department was created to supply the freedmen with the book which they had learned to love, but which few of them possessed and fewer could read. The immigrant, too, has found his Bible awaiting him. At every port of entry the Bible man is ready with Testaments and Bibles in the languages of all the nations which send their sons to America.

THE PUT-IT-OFFS.

From the June number of Ford Times
My Friend, have you heard of the town of Yawn,
On the banks of the Rivly Slow,
Where blooms the wait-awhile flower fair,
Where the sometime-or-other sceats the air,
And the soft go-easys grow?
It lies in the Valley of What's-the-use,
In the province of Let'-er-slide;
That tired feeling is native there,
It's the home of the listless I-don't-care,
Where the put-it-offs abide.
The put-it-offs smile when asked to work,
And say they will do it to-morrow,
And so they delay, from day unto day,
Till death cycles up and takes them away,
And their families starve, beg or borrow.

MOORE TO MOVE STEIPER'S TRIAL ON WEDNESDAY

Buffalo, May 31.—John Edward Teiper, the young Orchard Park brick manufacturer, charged with the murders of his mother and brother just beyond the southerly borders of the city, last January, will be placed on trial in the Supreme Court before Justice Emery this morning, unless his counsel, Attorney Edward R. O'Malley, can convince Justice Emery the taking of testimony at this time would be contrary to the legal rights of his client. O'Malley has already served notice upon District Attorney Guy B. Moore he will vigorously fight any effort to place Teiper on trial just now, giving as a reason the physical condition of Grace Teiper, the young man's sister.

Miss Teiper, O'Malley holds, is the only living witness of the tragedy on the Orchard Park highway, and her physical condition by reason of the grave injuries she suffered at the time her mother and brother Frederick Teiper lost their lives, precludes any possibility of her taking the witness stand in her brother's behalf. Consequently he desired the trial postponed until the fall term of the Supreme court in the belief the young woman will have sufficiently improved by that time to withstand the trying ordeal of a court examination.

MOORE IS FIRM.

Nevertheless District Attorney Moore is firm in his decision to bring Teiper into court and he has announced his intention to resist the efforts of the defence to have the trial postponed.

"The people's case is prepared and we are ready to go on with the trial," said Mr. Moore to-day. "Mr. O'Malley has told me he will ask for an adjournment, because of the condition of Grace Teiper. I am prepared in the face of that, however to insist the trial shall proceed. In view of the circumstances I do not believe the testimony of Miss Teiper is quite so important as the defense would have us believe. We want to be fair and have no desire to override the rights of Teiper but I believe sufficient time has now elapsed since the commission of this crime to warrant us in insisting that the case now be brought to trial.

"I shall move the trial before Justice Emery in the criminal term of the Supreme Court at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning."

Attorney Edward O'Malley, other than to confirm the report that he would ask for an adjournment of the trial, would make no statement regarding the case.

JAPS EXPORTING UMBRELLAS.

The export trade in Japanese umbrellas is rapidly increasing. In recent year the exports amounted in value to $8,500,000, and this year the figures are expected to be exceeded. Manufacturers in Japan are now overwhelmed with orders from China, India and other countries in the South Pacific because of the falling off imports from England and Europe generally.

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering—Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Once the nervous system gets run down everything seems to tend to make it worse. You worry over your condition, are unable to get the required rest and sleep, noises excite and irritate you and the future is most discouraging.

The nervous system does not get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, so you must have something also to lift you out of the run-down condition. You may find that your experience coincides with the writer of this letter and be encouraged to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for, acting as it does hand in hand with Nature, it is bound to do you good.

Mrs. Jas. Jensen, Gwynne, Alta., writes: "About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for several months so bad that I could not get a night's rest. I used several medicines recommended by the druggist. My doctor also prescribed but nothing he gave me brought any relief. Instead I got worse and worse until I could scarcely do anything or bear the least bit of noise. My nerves were all upset.

"My husband read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and got me some. Although I had no faith in it, I began its use, and after a few doses began to sleep well and the neuralgia left me entirely. I used six more boxes and have never had any trouble from neuralgia or the nerves since.

"This is to certify that I know Mrs. Jensen and believe this statement to be true and correct. Fred Freeman, J.P."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 5 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

PATRIOTISM of CANADIAN INDIANS

"Please, sir, may I go to Regina to enlist?"

According to a prominent C.P.R. official the question was put to a government inspector at the File Hills Indian Agency, Balcarres, Sask., and the speaker was a tall young Indian.

After looking sympathetically at the prospective soldier the inspector said: "I'm afraid your eyes are not strong enough to pass the sight test."

The Indian stood his ground, and seeing that he was not to be put off without a test, the inspector got a newspaper, and holding it before the eyes of the Indian who was only a few yards off, asked him if he could make out a large letter to which he pointed his finger.

Like many of the white people, this Indian thought he could see everything, though, in fact, he was almost blind. His eyes expanded with enthusiasm. He looked towards the paper; he stretched his neck; his face reddened deeper than before; he paused, and he faltered: "It's-it's-a-a-C."

The letter was O. The youth had lost his chance. He possessed a spirit that could dash into the mouth of a German cannon and hands that could slay a hundred Germans without trying. These were wonderful gifts, but, alas! his sight was too weak to enable him to perform the simple task of making out a letter.

"Good night," was all he said as he left the room.

Altogether there are fourteen of the File Hills Indians in the Canadian army; others are joining the forces, but owing to physical defects and ignorance of the English language, many are prevented from joining. The Indian population of File Hills at present is 84 men, 76 women and 156 children, so it must be considered they have certainly done their part for the colors.

Besides the Indian population of File Hills there are 7 men, 11 women and 4 children of the white race living there. All unite in doing the best they can for the Empire, and the loyalty of the Indians is staunch as that of their neighbors.

Since March, 1915, $1,100 has been raised for the Red Cross Society, which has 104 Indian members. During the fall of 1914, thirty-three members of the Agency gave $600 for the Patriotic Fund. A Patriotic Fund Association is now in full working order, and in one month the Indians have subscribed $99. Last winter an Indian concert brought $212 for the Belgian Relief Fund. Last fall an entertainment for the same purpose brought in $46. The concerts that may be held in the future are not likely to be so successful as the early ones, for ten of the original nineteen players and singers are now wearing khaki.

Between the causes mentioned, the Tobacco Fund, Trafalgar Day, and the purpose of supplying Christmas Presents for the Indian soldiers in France, the Indians at File Hills have given or assisted in raising nearly $2,000 in their share in helping Canada in the war. Have well-off Christian Canadians done as much?

The Indian women knit socks, make shirts, pyjamas, wristlets, scarfs, handkerchiefs, bandages and belts for the soldiers who are fighting on the battlefields or those who are wounded in hospital. Some very aged Indian women make beautiful beads, which realize substantial sums when sold for patriotic objects.

POOR CLASSES SICK OF THE WAR

The following interesting communication has reached the London Times, via Warnemunde and Copenhagen. It is addressed by one neutral to another and can be taken as absolutely accurate:

"The condition of such parts of Germany as I have visited—the Berlin and Hamburg districts—is interesting. Much money is in circulation and there is work for all, but the whole population is on short commons as regards many necessaries.

"This fact is causing an infinite amount of grumbling among the poor, who are heartily sick of the war. They have no voice whatever in determining the course pursued by the Government and the upper and middle classes who are, of course, not suffering.

"The English blockade, so long ineffective, is now having some result, and the Germans look forward with great anxiety to the next two months before the harvest. The Government tells them that they have only to hold out until July and all will be well again. Harvest prospects vary greatly in different parts of Germany, but in general the crops are suffering from lack of fertilizers.

"I was in Berlin for Easter. There is no apparent sign of distress, but when one goes below the surface of things one learns a great deal. The soup kitchens are being opened on a larger scale than at any previous time since the beginning of the war, and the soup itself is of very poor quality, composed chiefly of potatoes. Diet is largely one of substitutes—saccharine instead of sugar, imitation coffee instead of real coffee, and so on. Even the beer is now adulterated. Bavarians especially are grumbling at the hop shortage that will injure their brewing this year. I have seen meat cards, bread cards, milk cards (one of which I enclose), and washing soda cards. Soap cards are in course of preparation.

"There is plenty of gaiety in Berlin. Officers home from the front fill the theatres, and the women are well dressed in Paris fashions. Attempts to introduce German fashions have hopelessly failed.

"There are a great many wounded to be seen in public places.

"At the Easter races a novelty was introduced by a great display of Zeppelins and Taubes over the racecourse. The Shakespeare celebrations were then in full swing. The chief anxiety of the Berliners was that there should be no trouble with the United States.

"As to troop movements, the kaiser was on the western front, at Verdun, I believe. Many more troops were coming west than going east. The Germans have no fear whatever of the Russians.

"I learned in Hamburg from a friend well able to ascertain, that there is a semi-famine in Turkey, and much bitterness.

"Hamburg itself is a desert. The good people of Hamburg and Bremen consistently oppose the proposed retention of Antwerp. They fear it will injure their ports. Food was higher in Hamburg than in Berlin. The well known Hamburg geese are selling at two pounds each.

"In addition to the shortages, I have already mentioned, there are all sorts of others, such as of string, which is now being made of paper. In Hamburg I asked the price of sugar and was told 5 shillings a pound. Coffee was also that price. In Berlin the best cuts of beef are six shillings a pound.

"It is now difficult for rich Germans to escape to Denmark and Switzerland. As you know large numbers left for these countries in order to be more comfortable but the passport regulations are now much more stringent.

"But for the fact that the Entente Allies appear to be on the defensive everywhere, and the extreme docility of the German people, I think there might be something like a national protest against the war, difficult, however, it would be to organize while so great a portion of the male population is away at the front.

"Such soldiers as I spoke to seemed absolutely confident that Germany had won."

WHY KEEP SHEEP.

1. Sheep will eat almost all weeds. It is claimed that of the 680 weeds growing in the northwest sheep will eat 576 of them.
2. Sheep will live on short pasture.
3. Sheep are capable of utilizing a large amount of roughage to grain consumed.
4. The cost of production is cheaper than cattle.
5. Sheep are adapted to intensive methods of farming.
6. Sheep bring in a revenue from wool, the lamb, and the old ewe.
7. Some places are only fitted for the raising of sheep.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WHERE RIVERS of ICE FLOW

(1) The Cracks in a Glacier. (2) A Rocky Mountain Lakelet fed by Glacial Waters. (3) The Fissures in a Glacier. (4) The Yoho Glaciers.

STAND with me on the summit of a Canadian Pacific Rocky Mountain. What a wondrous panorama is unfolded: not only of peaks and ranges, tier on tier, line on line, but of vast glittering fields of snow and ice, making a white world of the upper heights, a region of eternal winter in striking contrast of the flower-covered beds of the valleys a mile below us, or the green of the alpine meadows and the forest depths.

We are standing in a realm where rivers of ice flow, for it is one of the manifold wonders of nature that these huge snaky lines of ice are slowly but surely moving down the mountain slopes to their death in a terminal moraine. And while they thus travel down hill, they are at the same shrinking, so that with few exceptions they show a gradual recession which is marked in some glaciers by scientific study, huge boulders carrying the year when the toe of the glacier reached that spot, with later markings indicating the shrinking process. The Illecillewaet Glacier, for example, retreated up the valley, between 1890 and 1898, a distance of no less than 452 feet.

The Illecillewaet glacier, in the Selkirks, is one of the largest remaining glacial deposits in the Canadian ranges, a gigantic icy river of green and white-flowing valleyward with a magnificent sweep. Longfellow's description comes to mind as one gazes on the scene as "a glittering gauntlet which the frost king has thrown in defiance of the sun," and so it seems as it glitters back its radiance from its white bosom and its crystal architecture.

Or stand on Lefroy or Hungabee, or better still, on Temple, in the Lake Louise region, and again the eye is held in thrall with the colossal canvas and the icy glaciers on every peak. Who will forget that superb view of the Victoria Glacier from the Lake Louise Chalet, or the white masses on the lofty roofs of the Ten Peaks, when a full moon floods them with silver light? The sheen of a hundred sparkling waterfalls makes a drapery, while at times the ear is bombarded with the sound of a mighty avalanche tumbling from inconceivable heights.

The wonder of the glacier is more fully realized when they are explored at close quarters, when their fantastic caverns and awesome fissures are entered or crossed, when the mountain climber picks his way over a mass of ice masses thrown up as if in mortal agony by the pressure of the upper deposits that cause the downward movement. Yonder is the snow field from which the glacier flows, here is a "bergschrund" as the ugly-looking crevasse is called that separates the glacier from the mountain side. Seracs—curious ice towers—look like monuments of the gods, and the tongue or snout marks the end of the glacier from whence flow the melting waters that mark the birth of great rivers.

In this vast Canadian Garden of the Gods, of Rockies and Selkirks, in which scores of Switzerlands could be put, nothing is more wonderful than the great glaciers ever journeying to their obliteration, ever sweeping toward the valley beds.

Strange Manoeuvres of the Turkish Battle Fleet

If some one were to write an official history of the Turkish navy during the past quarter of a century or so, the volume would be one of the most humorous publications of the day, says a writer in the Glasgow Herald, for the Sultan's fleet has been more of a fun-raising institution than a fighting concern, and many a rollicking story is to be told of the peculation, mismanagement, incompetency, and general muddling that has clogged this most unseaworthy service for ages. It is no navy at all in the ordinary sense of the word—only a jumble sale assortment of odds and ends in the warship line which the Sultan's advisers picked up now and then when there was a little money in the nation's coffers that needed spending.

Once they had bought their ship the Turkish Admiralty did not bother much about spending any more money on her. Overhauling and repairing a ship was a matter for—which they could not spare any gold. Of course, the ships were overhauled officially, but in Turkey, when money is voted for the overhaul of warships, the warships remain as they were, and some one in authority finds himself with a much-swollen bank-book.

That is why the Sultan's fleet consists for the greater part of floating dust-heds held together for a few thousand rivets. It is not likely that any of these vessels will distinguish themselves in this campaign. Indeed, there are not many of them left now to distinguish themselves, for our "capital Ets" have had quite a busy time off Constantinople.

THE VANISHING BATTLESHIP

There is a yarn about a Turkish sailor who was rowing over to his ship an old battleship dating from the Crimean war era. By way of stopping his boat as it came alongside, the Turk used his boat-hook against the side of the battleship, but the plating was so rotten that the boat-hook went right through, whereupon, so it is related, the Turkish Government gave strict orders that their warships were not to be prodded with boat-hooks on any account, as it entailed such a lot of patches being put on.

Then there is the perfectly true story of the Turkish warship which had a wooden propeller shaft—her captain having sold the original steel shaft at scrap iron prices at a time of personal financial embarrassment.

Equally authentic is the tale of the battleship which was laid down at Constantinople about twenty years ago. After she had been a year or two on the stocks, progress was suspended for lack of funds. Shortly afterwards, the Kaiser, who was then busy wooing the Turk, was billed to visit Constantinople in the capacity of the friend of Islam and the Turkish Government, which had then by means of a loan from Germany come into funds again, decided to complete the ship, and have her launched by his All-Highest when he paid his visit. But when they went to the building slip to look for the ship not a trace of her remained. Everything had disappeared—peculated by those who sit in power in the Turkish Admiralty on the shores of the Golden Horn.

DISMANTLED BY DEGREES

Most people know Kipling's story of "The ship that found herself". Here is the story of a Turkish warship that almost lost herself—through the 'evaporation' process.

A cruiser, with a number of Turkish officers on board, was despatched from Constantinople to the Atlantic on an educational trip. The boat reached Gibraltar right enough, but for some reason never went through the straits into the Atlantic. Instead, it doubled back towards the homeland via the northern coast of Africa. For a time the officers on board had quite a pleasant trip—with heaps of nautical education, no doubt—along the shores of the Mediterranean, until one day it was discovered that their funds were exhausted. The captain immediately wired to Constantinople for money but Constantinople paid no heed to his request, so he got none.

Here, indeed, was a pretty pass—hundreds of miles from home and penniless. A council of war was held on board, and as the outcome of a brilliant suggestion of one of those present it was decided to sell part of the vessel's machinery to the proprietor of a sugar factory and with the money thus secured, the cruiser acquired a new lease of life and plodded a little further homewards, till the funds gave out again.

Another council of war. This time it was decreed that a couple of small guns were of small value to the ship's armament, and were knocked down to the highest bidder. Further along the coast the Sultan of Morocco took a fancy to the ship's searchlights, and several other articles, and the impecunious captain saw no reason why the Sultan should be disappointed in his desires, especially as he had the money to pay. Constantinople, when the vessel left that port it had no searchlights, and at port after port various little trifles changed hands.

At last after a long series of miniature auction sales, the cruiser, with the aid of a tug, crept back to Constantinople, to spread the tale that she had lost most of her fittings in a heavy storm. Whether the populace believed the story or not is not known but they were so mighty glad to see their old friends return—they had long since given her up for lost—that they gave her a splendid reception.

Mark Twain could not have invented a better yarn, and yet it is perfectly true.

WHEN MALTA DISAPPEARED

Contemporary history also records another wonderful cruise by a Turkish warship.

A gunboat had been stationed for years off Chanak at the Narrows in the Dardanelles. So long had it remained there, with its anchors down and a first-rate collection of barnacles on its bottom, that the people began to doubt if it would ever be able to move again. Just to satisfy the doubting Thomases the Government decided to send the vessel on a cruise through the Aegean and Mediterranean to Malta.

But the lengthy rustication on shore had made land lubbers of the officers and crew, and when they left the shelter of the Straits they found the buffetings of the open sea hardly to their liking. For a day or two they tossed about, green with sea-sickness, and then decided that they had had enough, turned about and made for home, where the captain made the amazing report that the island of Malta, the vessel's port of call, had disappeared.

Of course it so happens that the location of Malta is a somewhat uncertain quality. When the island came into British possession, it was originally regarded as part of Africa. Consequently when British troops were sent to garrison the place they demanded the extra pay to which they were entitled for service "outside the confines of Europe," whereupon the British Government, with a sublime meanness, promptly passed an act of Parliament whereby Malta ceased to be included in Africa, and became part of Europe.

Still that Turkish gunboat ought too have been able to locate the island despite its inter-Continental wanderings.

IN THE PERSIAN GULF.

Another gunboat episode comes from the Persian Gulf region. In 1901, Germany, busy with the construction of the Bagdad railway, was anxious to secure the right of building the line down to the semi-independent town of Koweit, on the upper reaches of the Gulf, where the depth of water was sufficient to ensure that the railway terminus would be linked up with a steamship service. The difficulty of Germany, however, as that the sheik of Koweit refused to obey the order of his nominal overlord the Sultan, and would not grant the Germans their desire. In this he had the support of Britain, who estimated that if Turkish troops were sent to occupy Koweit we would land marines.

Foiled diplomatically and by land, the Turks determined to make an attempt on the much-desired town from the sea, and plant the Turkish flag over the place. So one day a gunboat from Basra stole quietly down the Shat-el-Arab, intending to arrive at Koweit unhindered, and bring off its coup before Britain or anyone else could interfere. It got to Koweit all right, but found three British cruisers there before it. Checkmate.

The decrepit, ancient gunboat could do nothing in face of the opposition, but the brilliant commander decided to wait till nightfall, and then, under cover of darkness, when the British ships would be asleep, send ashore a landing party to hoist the Crescent over the town. But he reckoned without modern naval equipment, for when it began to grow dark the British ships turned their searchlights on the Turkish boat, and kept it under their game till daylight came.

Then the little pop-gunboat got up steam and slunk away back to Basra, its commander no doubt madly wondering why his superiors at Constantinople had never told him about such things as searchlights.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

For the spring and summer a profusion of styles in skirts has been offered so that, in meeting the demands of fashion, there will be plenty of opportunity for satisfying the individual taste. A splendid example of a three gored model for those who prefer the simple lines is No. 7,745, built on a slightly raised waistline and just as attractive without the outside belt as with it, although it does tone up the garment some, in contrasting goods for trimming effect. The same idea carried out at the "pocket place" is very effective and up to the minute in style. There is a generous sweep to the fulness of the skirt that invites you to copy the model which is "all buttoned down before." Military striped gabardine will be excellently suited to this model, but there are a great many in the mass of materials that will make up with equal effectiveness.

The pattern may be had in sizes 24 to 32 inches waist measure. To reproduce the design in size 24 inches waist will require 2¾ yards 54 inch goods (without nap) and ⅛ yard material 44 inches wide for trimming; in nap goods it will take for this skirt 2⅝ yards.

If you will send 10 cents to the office of this publication you will obtain the pattern.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

FLIGHT ACROSS ATLANTIC.

Norwegian Aviator the Latest to Discuss the Project.

LONDON, May 31.—The London Daily Chronicle publishes the following:

A young Norwegian aviator, Mr. Georg Kulbech, is at present engaged in preparations for a daring attempt to cross the Atlantic by aeroplane, or rather by means of what he calls a "flying boat" of his own designing. He proposes to start from Jaederen, on the west coast of Norway, but to pay what may be called literally a "flying visit" to England on the way.

"My flying boat," he says, "is built exclusively to solve the problem of the Atlantic, and is, therefore, constructed as a seaworthy boat, its hull being entirely of mahogany. It has two seats, placed side by side, so that the aviators can steer my turns without changing places. Another peculiarity is the mechanism for starting the flying boat's motor, which can be effected by the aviator without leaving his seat.

"The machine is a biplane and has a plane surface of fifty square metres. It can lift a total weight of about 6,000 pounds. The motor is of 250 horsepower; It is water cooled and has a velocity of 1,800 revolutions a minute. With its full cargo the flying boat can attain a speed of 112 miles an hour, so that we should be able to strike the American coast in a little more than twenty-four hours."

Patent leather shoes should be wiped off with a cloth when they are removed and then a little olive oil should be rubbed into them.

Sifted wood ashes will clean fine agate or crockery ware. Dampen a cloth, and apply the wood ashes by rubbing it on the stained places.

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

"I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicine, with no result. Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of "GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS," and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know, that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made.

I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't have to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. Am seventy-two years old.

ANOTHER VAIN ATTACK ON DEADMAN'S HILL

GERMANS AT VERDUN HEAVILY REINFORCED

German Attack On Dead Man's Hill Is Completely Repulsed

Assault on the Eastern Slopes a Complete Failure French War Office Announces--Germans Claim That the French Will Soon Have to Evacuate Hill 304 in View of Terrific German Bombardment.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (French Official Communique), June 1.—The complete repulse of a German attack on the eastern slopes of Dead Man's Hill was announced by the War Office to-day. The Germans bombarded all French positions in the Dead Man's Hill region with the greatest violence throughout yesterday.

Intense artillery duels continued throughout last night on the east bank of the Meuse, but there were no other important infantry actions around Verdun.

French air squadrons early to-day dropped 20 shells on the Thionville and Audun stations, and fifty shells on the supply depots at Azannes.

GERMANS FALLING BACK IN GERMAN EAST AFRICA

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 1.—The British force which is invading German East Africa from the southwest and which was reported to have penetrated twenty miles into German territory on the front between Lakes Tanganyika and Nyassa has made still further progress, according to an official statement issued last night. The statement says:

"In continuing the report of his operations, sent on May 25, Brigadier General Northey telegraphs that his operations against Neu Langenberg (north of Lake Nyassa) were successful. The enemy was compelled to evacuate the town. We occupied it Tuesday, capturing large quantities of ammunition, food and stores of all kinds.

"An enemy garrison which is holding Marema, twenty-three miles east-northeast of Abercorn (on the Rhodesian border), has been invested."

Says French Will Give Up Hill 304

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 1.—A Berlin despatch says:

"The French are preparing to surrender Hill 304, the last of the strongly fortified heights remaining in their possession northwest of Verdun.

"Several French positions on the summit, torn by the pounding fire of German guns, already have been evacuated. The next general assault on the position probably will bring it into the hands of the Germans.

"The most furious French counter attacks, delivered at heavy sacrifices in men, have resulted in only temporarily successes, the Germans pressing on after each fresh check."

75,000 New German Troops at Verdun

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, June 1.—The Germans have thrown more than 75,000 fresh troops into action at Verdun since a week ago to-day, according to reports received by the War Office. At least five new German divisions have been engaged on both banks of the Meuse.

Since February one million Germans have been in action at Verdun, according to War Office figures. Of this number it is estimated that about 300,000 have been killed or put out of action.

Have Located Enemy in Strong Position

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 31.—The British invasion of German East Africa has been carried further into the interior, and one of the British columns is now confronted with a German army, which has taken up strong defensive positions. The following official statement in regard to this campaign was given out here this evening:

"General Smuts (The British commander) reports that our column which is advancing down the Panagni River reached the south end of the Kgare mountains on the 29th, and located the enemy near Nikocheni, occupying a strong entrenched position on a narrow neck between the mountains and the river."

Admit French Have Gained 433 Yards

Editor, Examiner:

BERLIN, June 1.—French troops have captured 433 yards of German first line trenches by a counter attack southeast of Dead Man's Hill, the War Office admitted this afternoon.

On the east bank of the Meuse violent artillery duels continued last night.

Guilty Soldiers Are Punished, Say Turks

Examiner Special:

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 1.—Fifty-one Turkish soldiers convicted of mistreating the Armenians deported from the district of Van, have been shot. Government employees found guilty of similar cases have been deprived of their offices and delivered to the military courts for trial.

LONDON, June 1.—Premier Asquith in the House of Commons to-day moved an adjournment of Parliament until June 20, which gave the members an opportunity to discuss any subject they desired to take up. John Dillon, the Irish Nationalist, said he did not take a hopeful view of the efforts now being made by David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, to reconcile the various Irish factions.

LONDON, June 1.—The Norwegian steamer Rauma, 3,047 tons, has been sunk off the coast of Algieres. The crew was saved.

LIEUT. D. HUYCKE LATEST ADDITION TO CASUALTY LIST

Second Son of His Honour Judge Huycke Has Been Wounded His Parents Are Informed in a Private Cablegram To-day

WAS WITH ARTILLERY

Lieut. Douglas Huycke, the second son of His Honour Judge Huycke, has been wounded.

The unwelcome information came this morning in the shape of a cablegram from Lieut. Huyckes brother, Lieut Meredith Huycke, to his mother, stating that Douglas had been wounded, but not dangerously, the last part of the message affording his parents some relief.

Lieut. Douglas Huycke left Canada with the 33rd Battery, C.F.A. early last autumn. The 33rd Battery was composed principally of Peterborough boys, and Lieut. Huycke recruited the last detachment secured here for the battery. After some training in England, Lieut. Huycke was transferred to the 15th Battery, C.F.A. under Major Arnoldi, and has been at the front some time with that unit. His many friends will wish him a speedy recovery.

Lieut. Huycke has two brothers overseas, Lieut. Meredith with the Artillery, and Lieut. Wilfrid with the 39th Battalion.

MR. C.A.G. SPENCE IS IN TORONTO

Will Spend the Day With Mr. J. J. Kelso Provincial Superintendent

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, who yesterday closed out his career as Sanitary Inspector for the city, is in Toronto to-day at the invitation of Mr. J. J. Kelso, Provincial Superintendent of Neglected Children. Mr. Spence will immediately enter upon his new duties as local agent for Childrens' Aid Society. The public generally is unanimously of the opinion that the Society made a wise selection, and as a result have secured the services of a capable and conscientious official. Mr. Spence will doubtless receive from the Provincial Superintendent some instructions and information pertaining to the new office.

CONDITIONS WERE BAD ON ARRIVAL OF 93rd IN BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Plenty of Mud and Water and Some Tents Could Not Be Occupied But Things Were Soon Straightened Out Says Examiner's Correspondent---Four Units Competing For Recruits Here---New Battery Starts Campaign For Men--To-day's Military News.

(Special to The Examiner.)

BARRIEFIELD WAR CAMP, May 31.—The officers and men of the 93rd Battalion have started on a new era in the soldiers life. We arrived in Kingston with no mishaps, and after disembarking formed in marching order for a two mile tramp to camp, where we were pleased to see all tents erected by the advance guard, but the grounds showing signs of recent rains, the mud being knee knee in places and some tents impossible to occupy.

The men were placed in charge of their company commander and some assigned to their proper tents, an average of ten men to a tent, with a non-com. in charge of each tent. After this they were issued with waterproof sheets, 3 blankets and mess tins. Following this the men were given a rough and ready, but hearty supper, supplied by our efficient cook staff, supervised by Sergt. Cook Wride and prepared in one of the new field kitchens, which proved to be in fine working order.

It might also be well to mention that on our approaching the camp numerous men from other battalions were lined on either side of the road, passing a criticising eye over our appearance as a whole, and numerous compliments were heard to the effect that we were the best appearing battalion to arrive so far, and no doubt the officers and men will be able to uphold the good standard set. Col. Hemming was also an interested spectator.

It will be disappointing news to some to know that there will be no battalion orders issued for a day or two at least, that is in orthodox form, as through some misunderstanding the B.O.R. baggage and also the paymaster's baggage was not shipped from the station with the Battalion, but left to come down with a freight which will cause a very disagreeable delay until its arrival as it interferes materially with the system of the Battalion in general.

We have had it brought to our attention that the officers in charge of this department are doing all in their power to make the men feel at home and comfortable, there being free writing material, pianos, free moving pictures and a canteen. This end of the work is in charge of Mr. E. R. Wilson, secretary of London, Ont., Y.M.C.A.

That Peterborough is regarded as a good field for recruiting despite the big drafts of men that have gone from us here, is evidenced to-day by the fact that representatives of three other units are competing with the 93rd Battalion for the eligible men. Capt. Kennedy is here in the interests of Queen's Field Ambulance, Capt. McDougall of the newly organized 74th Field Battery is in the city to inaugurate recruiting for that unit, and Capt. Hayes of the new 235th Northumberland and Durham Battalion, is also on he job looking for men. The advent of the 235th into the recruiting field in Peterborough is not looked upon with favour by the local recruiting officers. The Field Ambulance and Artillery are special services, with the privilege of recruiting all over the division, but it is hard to see why a county unit like the 235th should be allowed to recruit in Peterborough when the 93rd is still in need of men to complete its establishment. The entrance of the 235th into the local arena has been reported to headquarters at Kingston. Yesterday the Durham and Northumberland unit secured three or four recruits here, but with one exception they had been turned down by the 93rd. The other had been passed by the Peterborough battalion, but had not been sworn in. Included in the list was the old soldier who used to entertain the 93rd boys at the armouries with solos on a tin whistle.

In spite of the competition yesterday the 93rd Battalion secured four recruits. Lieut. Ketchum, Sergt. Mitchell and their staff are working energetically and no prospect is allowed to get away without a battle.

The call is out in Peterborough for more artillerymen. Capt. McDougall is here to-day to start a campaign for the new 74th Battery which will follow in the footsteps of the 93rd, in which there are some 60 Peterborough boys. Major W. C. Ackerman, of the 24th Field Battery, who looked after the recruiting for the 83rd Battery, will be the recruiting officer for the new unit and is open to receive applications from to-day on from any local men who would like to join the artillery. Any information necessary can be secured by calling up Major Ackerman.

The many friends of Mr. Chas Thorpe, of the firm of Grant and Thorpe, who is with the 32nd Battery, C.F.A., at Petawawa, will be pleased to hear of his promotion to the rank of sergeant.

Capt. Kennedy, who is recruiting here for the medical services for Queen's Field Ambulance, secured a number of recruits yesterday. Altogether about twelve Peterborough citizens joined the colours yesterday.

Fred Jamieson, formerly of the local post office staff, has joined the 235th Battalion.

The friends of Pte. A. Cripps, invalided home from the 39th Battalion, on account of tubercular trouble and who was one of the soldiers to be given a reception at the Exhibition Grounds on Victoria Day, will regret to learn that he has taken a bad turn and is now in Nicholls Hospital. Pte. Cripps who is a South African war veteran, enlisted here with the 39th, early last year, and was away over a year.

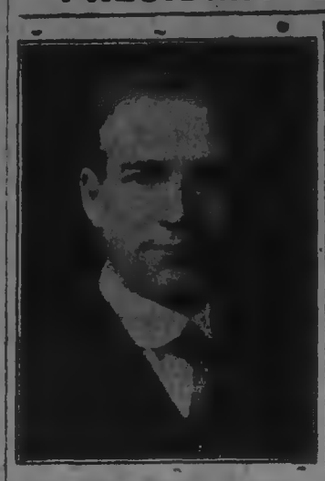
CHILDREN'S EYES.

How many parents have noticed that their children become sleepy or restless when they begin to study. This is a sure sign that their eyes need attention; to have them seen to now, means a whole lot of trouble saved later on. See Dr Lacey, 410 George Street.

REV. M. E. SEXSMITH, PICTON, PRESIDENT OF CONFERENCE

Was Ordained in George Street Methodist Church 22 Years Ago —Capt. John Garbutt Called to Niagara Camp This Morning—An Affecting Farewell to Ministers and Laymen.



CAPT. A. W. McPHERSON, Peterborough's Medical Health Officer, on overseas service, who is president of the Ontario Medical Officers of Health Association now in convention in Toronto.

CAPT. KENNY'S ADDRESS

The General Session of the Bay of Quinte Conference opened this morning at 9 o'clock with an hour spent in religious exercises, and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper conducted by the Rev. Wm. Johnston. Captain Kenny delivered his presidential address, a lengthy consideration of the events of the past year, and a retrospect of the thoughts that have been called up and the problems presented.

A moving incident was the farewell of Capt. John Garbutt of Oshawa, who received a summons this morning to report at Niagara camp in connection with his duties as chaplain. He asked for the prayers of the conference for success in his work, stating that with the entire church behind the forces they would not fail. He had no thought of lowering the standards, no thought of smoking cigarettes with the boys, but maintaining the standard. He had already been pleased with the spirit of the men of his battalion. "I feel that if we can maintain in their minds and hearts the spirit of devotion to God we shall do a great deal." Capt. Garbutt said he intended to throw all his energies into the work, and asked for prayers that God would strengthen his efforts. He then took formal leave, the Conference singing "Stand Up for Jesus."

New President.

In the election of a president to succeed Captain Kenny there was only one ballot, Rev. M. E. Sexsmith of Picton, being elected. One hundred and sixty-two votes were cast, the president-elect receiving eighty-two, the rest being scattered.

Rev. S. T. Tucker of Deseronto, was elected secretary by 105 votes out of a total of 149.

Rev. Mr. Whattam of Mark Street Church, and Rev. Mr. Terrill, receiving six votes each. Mr. Tucker has been one of the assistant secretaries during the past year.

Rev. Mr. Sexsmith in expressing his appreciation of the honour conferred upon him, said that twenty-two years ago he was ordained in George St. Church, attaining the ambition of his life, to serve Jesus Christ and to minister unto men. The coming year would be a trying one, and men need leaders as never before. Mr. Sexsmith asked for the sympathy and support that had been accorded his predecessors, and promised faithful service as president of the Conference.

Little Miss Ruth Knapman presented the new president with a beautiful bouquet, receiving the usual token of appreciation. Mr. D W. Dumble on behalf of the congregation of the conference church congratulated Mr. Sexsmith upon his appointment.

Rev. Mr. Tucker bespoke his gratitude to those who had elected him and promised to give the Conference his best work.

Presidential Address.

In his address at this morning's opening assembly Capt. Kenny, presented the following review in part:

Of all Conference years that have come and gone, the one that has fallen to my lot through which to guide this Conference, has been the saddest our world has ever known. Yet in the midst of history's bloodiest war we are not in despair. This is in itself a miracle of faith and hope. Look about you and see if there is anything more wonderful than this. The spectacle of ruined countries, millions of new made graves, multitudes of crippled, the sightless, fatherless and the childless causes us to humble ourselves before Almighty God and pray for forgiveness for our National sins, for we have participated in the guilt as in the good of civilization.

These unspeakable experiences have made it a melancholy memory, but we cannot be blind to the fact that ecclesiastical, social and political distinctions and differences are being consumed by the present holocaust. Cherished creeds and sects have proven as perishable as concerts and fancies. We can no longer absolutely identify Protestantism with lawful freedom, nor Romanism with the unhallowed conspiracy against that freedom. Millions have been federated in universal suffer-

FIFTY YEARS AGO SOLDIERS LEFT HERE TO FIGHT FENIANS

Only a Few of the Peterborough Men Who Volunteered to Defend Their Country Against Invasion Half a Century Ago Are in Land of Living

WILL HOLD REUNION

Fifty years ago to-day, on June 1st, 1866, Peterborough experienced much the same sensations as were felt by the citizens the other day when the 93rd Battalion left for Barriefield. Just a half century ago to-day four companies of soldiers left Peterborough to fight for the defence of Canada against the Fenians. Mr. Wm. Langford, Sr., Water Street, was one of the men in the gallant band, and he was in a reminiscent mood to-day in recalling the incidents. Peterborough was a pretty small place in those days, and there was wild excitement on account of the news that was being circulated as the extent of the raid by the Fenians from the United States. Practically everybody in town was on hand to watch the departure of the volunteers, and the sad farewells that have become an all too familiar sight in Peterborough in the past twenty-two months were in evidence. Peterborough's soldiers in those days did not travel as luxuriously as do the men behind the gun at the present time. They left Peterborough packed in box cars, over the floors of which straw had been strewn, and in which ventilation was supplied by having the side door partially open.

There are only a few of the Peterborough veterans of the Fenian raid in the land of the living, and they will hold their annual reunion to-morrow night.

BANK OF TORONTO.

In respect of the Bank of Toronto we cannot, to the motto, "welcom coming," add "speed the parting guest," for the "departing guest" by a stroke, is going to stay with us. This morning, Mr. A. J. Vanstone, of Vancouver, enters upon the duties of manager of the Toronto bank, succeeding Mr. Peter Campbell. In welcoming Mr. Vanstone, we can give him no better wish than that his work here will be as, it doubtless will be, as fruitful and pleasant and as profitable as has been that of Mr. Campbell. Mr. Campbell has been in charge of the bank here for the full quarter of a century. He has seen the city and the business of the bank steadily grow. When he came to Peterborough there were four banks; now there are eight, and the city itself has grown greatly, too, in population and importance. In this growth Mr. Campbell has had a large share as a public spirited citizen, who took a wide interest in civic betterment. He was actively associated with the Charity Board and Children's Aid Society and St. John's church, and was a practically sympathetic patron of sports of various kinds and was actively interested in them through his sporting sons, one of whom is now in the thick of the stern sport of war. While the patrons of the Bank of Toronto will miss Mr. Campbell's presence in its office they and other citizens will be pleased to learn that Mr. Campbell will remain a resident of Peterborough and still remain an enrolled soldier in the ranks of good citizenship.

THE REAL MEANING.

A member of the Public Library Board excused the cobble-stone triangle placed at the entrance walk to the building as "not looking very bad." He regards it as a vile deformity, which people will not use on account of its roughness. This is placed so that people won't tread on the grass—when there is no grass to tramp on. It is a mighty ugly and disgraceful substitute for green grass even bare earth would look better. The real and humiliating meaning of the cobble-stones is that they are a confession for civilization—on the part of the public—a substitute for religion of the golden rule. The congregance, now sitting here, might otherwise than instruct its ministers to emphasise a little in their preaching the gospel of respect for the rights of others—another way of loving one's neighbour as one's self. If everybody "got religion" of this kind, even a mild type, we should not have to deplore the destruction of boulevards and parks by the heedless feet, moved by the thoughtless minds of—in this connection—unregenerate public — wasting and destroying beauty. The grounds about the newly-built Trinity Church are being graded, and when finished—put into shipshape seemingly — according to the Gospel of "Jones," and it is a safe bet, for once, that within a week after the completion the corners of the walks at the junctions of Scott street and Aberdeen and Reid streets, will be path into cow paths by the pedestrians barbed wire entanglements such as our soldiers put up to protect us against other Huns, are installed at these corners. No decent woman can be considered as straying in the Scriptural "narrow way" if she should depart from it to walk over beautified lawns and grass plots.

LEAVY JUNE.

The generally smooth of full blue skies, sculpturous airs and [illegible] this morning with all [illegible] so far life have associated with coming and presence. [illegible] we feel that life is worth living. The trees are glorious in their [illegible] the country landscape [illegible] with its magnificent [illegible] its lush meadowlands, and its [illegible] grain fields. In spite of the late and cold spring, the pledge of a good crop is written large and wide on the face of the country, implementing the divine promise of unfailing seedtime and harvest. And can't describe, one can only feel, the beauty, the brightness of a perfect day in June, with everything at its freshest and fairest—the leaves in full flutter to the warm fillip of the genial air, fragrant with the prophecy promise of the opening flowers. He that can look abroad and see Nature in its myriad manifestation of marvellous growth and workmanship, and cannot see on every leaf, grass blade and bloom petal the autograph-signature of a divine creative agency, must be doubly blind—in body and soul. To whom but to Him can we outpour the gratitude that surcharges our hearts, as we look and see and drink in all the beauty and hope of garden and landscape—of earth and sky? Whom can we thank but Him for that we have promise of harvest and reaping in peaceful fields, with none daring to molest or make us afraid? When we contrast our peaceful landscape, with "its fields of wavy corn," its feeding flocks and herds under God's benediction of serene sky or rain-dropping clouds, with the horrid scenes of waste in the war zone—with the fields ripped by shell rock by bursting shells, the trees disbranched and torn limb from limb, their truncated boles standing among abominations of desolation, as monuments to the wrath of man—when we look on this picture and then on that we should be filled with thankfulness for the divine mercy that gives us peace and the promise of plenty, while in war scourged lands, the wretched people shrink and hide in dens and caves from the eyes of ruthless enemies. Our paeans of praise should rise high for the many benefits we enjoy in possession and foretaste in the leafy month of June, in Canada, prodigal in beauty and promise in this blessedly set-apart country of ours—the season when God manifests Himself more graciously in His works, and Heaven seems nearer to earth than at any other time of the year.

RELIGIOUS MOBILIZATION.

The soldiers of the King have left us for camp, and the town is strangely quiet, lacking the blare of bugle the stirring notes of the band, and the measured tramp of marching platoons. But, as in nearly all things in this world, the law of compensation comes into play. We have in the place of the khaki-clad soldiers of the King, the sober black uniforms of the Church, worn by a battalion of two or three hundred Methodist ministers and laymen, assembled for the annual conference of the Bay of Quinte district.

We heartily welcome them; for their own sake and for the sake of the Captain and cause they serve. We also welcome them because they in a way, a higher, if less striking way, replace the soldiers who have left us, and supplement the material sense of protection the soldiers represented—by a less tangible, but a far more important protection, especially to those who think beyond outward appearances.

We sometimes hear the faint-faith pessimists deplore the asserted fact that the world is not becoming any better, because of the presence of so many ministers and so much elaborate church machinery. We have in Peterborough about twenty splendid churches, all served by faithful and zealous ministers, and attended by more or less zealous flocks, though no one will accuse us of being a city of religious precisians, yet we are, on the whole, a fairly good people, good neighbours—the touchstone of right living — and good citizens, with a minimum of crime and a maximum of good works for good causes. What we have and what we are, we owe entirely, and without reserve, to the presence of our churches and the moral and religious elements they represent and the moral influences they exercise. If we are fairly good, which, without Pharisaic pretence we may claim to be, that is an evidence of religious possession. True religion is not a mere sentiment or emotion—it is an influence from within, which, though, perhaps, working silently and unconsciously to some of us, colours all our outlook on our human relations, and influences every action, from the commonest act of politeness to the highest manifestation of altruistic sacrifice. The world is better than we think it is; the people of the world are better than we think and believe they are. And through our faith in these truths sometimes receives a few shocks, yet the truth remains; the divine fabric of religion stays, firmly founded, subject to fluctuations of the human element, but steadfast, immovable, like, to quote Scott's metaphor, the rocking stones of Stonehenge, whose balance a child's touch may disturb, but the power of a giant cannot overturn.

The pervasive influence of religion has close relation to the Conference now sitting here. When one looks over the assembled members, the thoughtful receives a thrill of emotion at the knowledge this so much educated intellect, so much consecrated zeal, are met to receive and impart new inspiration, develop more effective working force for the exercise of their silent and penetrating influence upon the world. And this idea gains momentum when one adds the thought that this Conference is only one of a score of mobilization centres in the interests of Christianity that, in the form of other conferences, of synods and assemblies, marks with beautiful significance the beautiful days of leafy June in this province and country.

In this view, if we condescend to use our minds one moment, for thinking, we shall be impressed with the great significance and deep meaning of the presence of a Church Conference in Peterborough. We shall regard it with reverence, as one of many similar elements of mobilization of moral and religious forces that will equip the church militant to become, in a large sense, even on earth, the church triumphant; when the whole world shall have joined the army of the Great King, in which, thanks be to God, physical disability does not bar the recruit, but where all—the halt, the lame, the blind, the degraded, the friend less, the outcast, are welcomed and "signed-up."

LETTERS FROM SIR SAM HUGHES IN Regard To Contracts

OTTAWA, Ont., May 31.—General Hughes stated yesterday that he had never used his influence with the Shell Committee in the placing of contracts. The following letters were read by E. F. B. Johnston before the Meredith-Duff Commission this morning. Dr. McAlpine is Sir Sam's brother-in-law.

"Dear General Bertram:

"You know Mr. Wilford and Mr. Caven, M.L.A., of Lindsay. I am asking for my home town of Lindsay, the small number of fifty thousand high explosive shells. These man and their associates Messrs. G. S. Dukes, T. R. Hindes, John Caven, M.L.A., Dr. John McAlpine and F. R. Wilford, under the name of F. R. Wilford and Company, of Lindsay, will do this work up to perfection.

SAM HUGHES.

"Ottawa, April 29, 1915."

"Dear Col. Bertram—This will introduce to you Mr. Charles Burgoyne, of Fenelon Falls, in my riding. He is desirous of securing a contract for the manufacture of boxes of shells. I wish you would give him full plans, specifications, and prices complete for said boxes. He is thoroughly reliable in every sense. Thank you for your goodness

SAM HUGHES.

"May 16, 1915"

"Personal"

"Dear Col. Bertram,—The Lauson Engineering Company of Levis, Que., has leased the public works foundry, at that place. The machinery, I understand, for the manufacture of shells is largely installed, and the firm is in a position, I am assured to, proceed at once with the manufacture of shells. Will you kindly give this your immediate consideration and report?

SAM HUGHES.

"Ottawa, May 16, 1916."

"Dear Col. Bertram,—This will introduce to you our mutual friend, H. H. Stevens, M.P., of Vancouver. You will remember we tried to see you one night in Ottawa some time ago about the shells. They have all the facilities for making these, and they have, also, very hard times. We can easily get testing ground on the Lulu Island, a most ideal place. Please oblige them in any way you can.

SAM HUGHES.

"Ottawa, March 5, 1915."

"Dear Col. Bertram,—I enclose herewith a letter, handed to me by the Honourable Senator Donnelly, from the Honourable D. J. Jamieson, Toronto, relative to Krupp brothers' desire to manufacture shells. I have made a note on the corner of this letter for you. Will you please be good enough to make equiries into this matter, and if the firm is capable to carry on the work, and report to me. SAM HUGHES

Barnardo Home Boy Assaulted

Havelock Youngsters Fined $10 and Costs By Magistrate Langley

HAVELOCK, June 1.—The trial of the two local youngsters charged with assault on the person of Master Albert Wilson, a Barnardo Home boy, working for Mr. Jas. Gilbert took place on Friday afternoon last before County Magistrate Langley. Wilson was represented by F. D. Kerr of Peterborough and Mr. J. Hodgins of Toronto, an inspector for the Barnardo Home. The defendants Cecil Brown and Lear Smith, were represented by G. N. Gordon of Peterborough. The evidence showed that the accused boys took turns in walloping Wilson, who did not attempt to defend himself and who received a black eye and a bloody nose in the melee.

The boys were tried separately. His Worship reserved judgment in the case of Brown and inflicted a fine of $10.00 and costs, or about $20.00 in all, in the case of Smith. The trial was heard in private. Mr. Gordon thought the prosecution of the two boys was an outrage and in strong terms denounced those responsible for the laying of the charges separately as an attempt to load costs on the parents of the boys, who had indulged in nothing more than harmless fisticuffs. His Worship took a much more serious view of the case than that, but consented to reduce the witness costs to half the regular amount.

To bleach straw hats wash them in pure water, scrubbing them with a brush. Then put them into a box in which has been set a source of burning sulphur, and cover them up so that the fumes may bleach them.

When using a new dustbin have about half a dozen holes made in it. This will allow all the water to drain away and prevent that nasty damp smell which so often comes when the lid is taken off, caused through water getting into it.

LONDON, June 1.—Lady Wilson, who met the German Crown Prince during his tour in India some years ago, records her impressions of him in the current issue of the Cornhill Magazine. The first meeting was at a dinner at the Viceregal lodge, Calcutta.

"My first impression," writes Lady Wilson, "was of his extreme youth and slightness; he appears ridiculously thin; there is also something ridiculous about the height of his collars. His animation and restlessness are very marked, and I believe on that evening, as always, he was longing to dance.

"When my turn came to be taken into his orbit I found conversation with him most easy and pleasant. He spoke English fluently, almost faultlessly, with scarcely any accent and a flow of colloquialisms. He was certainly dignified and gracious that evening. Subsequent meetings with him did not heighten the impression.

"His expression is elusive and his face consists entirely of expression, for the features are insignificant. A foolish sandy haired look is accentuated by an compromising 'nut' coiffure. His hair, worn rather long, is brushed unmercifully back from a receding forehead; his mustache is embryonic.

"Yet there is a fire about him and devouring vitality. In his curious slanting eyes, that you can scarcely arrest for a second, so restless are they, it is impossible to read what is passing through his mind—much that is trivial, no doubt, for he was callow and schoolboyish when I knew him, but other thoughts as well. A distinguished civil servant jogged my elbow as we were preparing to leave the party 'Look at him now', he whispered to me, 'the panther's cub'.

ESCAPADE ENDED THE TOUR

"This Indian tour ended abruptly The Prince's indiscreet escapade at Lucknow, when he gave his staff the slip and remained away twenty-four hours without having given them any indication of his whereabouts, not unnaturally precipitated the end.

Instead of using the German war ship on which he had travelled the Prince chose a Peninsular and Oriental line steamship for the voyage to India. Lady Wilson was aboard the same ship and had many conversations with the Prince.

"We talked together much of English ways and habits during the voyage," she writes "He always seemed to me to admire, in a jealous, grudging sort of way, all that Englishmen did and were. Yet he would never admit that he felt admiration for them. He did not appear even remotely interested in things military, in fact, during his tour anything in the nature of a military function was a positive punishment to him.

"He affected a great love of sport, and big game shooting, he assured me, was his seventh heaven. When I think of the poor tiger, heavily drugged and elaborately carted to the correct distance from the Crown Prince's rifle, I could not help wondering which was the more artificial—the Crown Prince's love of big game shooting or the conditions under which the shooting was conducted.

"FIRST SPEAR"

"Pig sticking had not been so easy to engineer for him while he was in the Punjab. Two or three days had been arranged and he had gone out with the officers of a crack cavalry regiment quartered at—, but the subalterns had told me that they had to ride the pig until it was stone cold to enable the Crown Prince to come up and get "first spear".

Even then the happy consummation could hardly be affected, as the Prince did not appear to relish going faster than a brisk trot. Those of us who have galloped over pig sticking country will easily appreciate his scruples.

"A young lady of Hebelike proportions he caught the Crown Prince's vagrant eye almost before we weighed anchor. She was flashily dressed and wore a sunbonnet, while from her brawny arm depended, on a chain an evil looking monkey. The Prince asked me if I had noticed "the flapper" and I felt surprised that he should have commanded of such up to date slang.

"An acquaintance was scraped with the girl, who was afterward known as the Affen Madchen (Monkey Girl) by the Crown Prince and the whole of his suite, and though he openly joked with everybody about her, his flagrant flirtation with the young person was the subject of much unfavorable comment, and was carried on with complete disregard of the solemn farnings of his elderly bear leaders.

"He saw no harm in lounging on a deck chair on the promenade deck, having his much be-ringed hands manicured by the Monkey Girl. His household was nauseated by the spectacle, and, he admitted to me, had put him into Coventry afterward as a protest.

THE HEART OF A CHILD.

"I took him to task and declared that I entirely agreed with them. He looked angrily at me like a spoiled child, and said he saw nothing wrong in his behavior; that he would continue to have his nails manicured for the rest of the voyage, but in his own cabin.

"A little child racked with fever was brought up on deck each day in its cot—a wonderful little creature with pain eyes, white and lifeless as a fallen petal, it lay there hour after hour. On hearing that the Crown Prince was of, absorbing interest to her, I took him up to her cot. "Are you the Crown Prince? Where is your crown?" she asked, fixing him with her searching gaze. "Oh, that's packed up, you know. I hardly ever wear it when I'm travelling, he replied lightly.

"Then he stopped over the cot and showed that perfect understanding of a child's heart which I then considered, to be the birthright of all Germans. I liked this aspect of him better than any I had seen. He knew the universal language of childhood and spoke of his own children and fetched their photographs—three bullet headed little Teutons, the eldest a tiny counter part of his grandpapa."

Lady Wilson says that in the Crown Prince's "shallow soul is reflected the vanity and overbearingness of the Kaiser; but he is a tin soldier, almost a chocolate one! He is entirely devoid of magnetism, and lacks that talent for decor which his father possesses in such a superlative degree. In a nature that seems incapable of any fine impulse, as of any small sacrifice, there is not much to admire. He seemed to me quite as giddy and heedless as a child, maddening to deal with in the give and take of life, yet behind so much alloy there ran a vein of gold—his unaffected kindness and great simplicity."

JUDGMENT GIVEN FOR THE PLAINTIFFS

The following judgment was given yesterday by Mr. Justice Britton in Osgoode Hall, Toronto:

TRIAL COURT.

Before Britton, J.

The Campbell Flour Mills Co., v. Ellis.—H. H. Dewart, K.C., for plaintiffs. W. E. Raney, K. C., for defendants. Action to set aside a conveyance from husband to wife as fraudulent as against plaintiffs.

Judgment: My findings are that the conveyance was voluntary, and that it was made and accepted with the intent and design of defeating, delaying and hindering the plaintiffs in the recovery of their debt. There will be judgment for plaintiffs declaring said conveyance from defendants, J. A. Ellis to defendant, Mary A. Ellis, void and of no effect as against the plaintiffs. The judgment against the validity of the conveyance will be as against the defendants only, and not as against the mortgagee, who is not a party to the action. Fifteen days stay.

Capture of Trebizond Is Of Vast Value To The Advancing Russians

London, June 1.—The immediate advantage to the Russian forces in the capture of Trebizond, it is declared in military circles, will consist in increased and direct facilities for supplying the army in the Anatolian country. Up to now the army of the Grand Duke Nicholas has been dependent on the railway running southwest from Tiflis through Kars to Sarikamische. This last named place is the terminus of the Kars railway and from Sarikamische supplies must be transported over a rugged, mountainous country for a distance of 68 miles.

Trebizond is distant by highway from Erzerum, the headquarters of the Grand Duke's forces, 108 miles. The highway shortly before hostilities were declared was repaired over the greater part of its length by French contractors. A railway was projected between Trebizond and Erzerum, but the outbreak of war prevented any railway construction from being carried on. As the situation now exists the 108 miles of roadway travel between Trebizond and Erzerum, it is declared, is far superior to the 68 miles of difficult mountain journey between Sarikamische and Erzerum.

Apart from the road haul to Erzerum the availability of Trebizond as a forwarding point places Erzerum in much quicker communication with European Russia than does the Kars line. From Trebizond the sea route to Batum is only 91 miles and to Poti 106 miles. Both Batum and Poti are much nearer to Tiflis than to Kars. From Trebizond to Sevastopol in the Crimea the sea route is 340 miles, and Sevastopol is directly connected with the entire network of Russian Europe railways. Through steamship connections can now be maintained between Trebizond and the Russian ports of Odessa, Kertch, Sevastopol, Cherson and Nicolaief, and with the ports of Azov ports of Berdiansk, Mariupol and Taganrog.

By having a course to the nearby port of Batum, the Russians can forward supplies through Tiflis over the railway from Baku. The Russian Baku railway runs northward along the shores of the Caspiran to Petrovsk, from whence it swerves inland, passing through Georgijewsk and Bemnivir on up to Rostow. At the last mentioned place connection is made with the railways of European Russia.

To the westward of Trebizond there are no important ports until Samsun is reached, 150 miles distant. The Turks had projected a railroad from Samsun to meet the Angora railroad at Jerrichun, situated a few miles west of Sivas, but the project was cast aside by reason of the breaking out of the war. Samsun of late years has vied in importance as a commercial port with Trebizond, but the latter put up to the time that war was declared was the principal port in the Anatolian coast for the export of Persian goods to Europe.

In addition to the facilities now afforded the Russians for bringing up additional troops to reinforce the Grand Duke, the capture of Trebizond disposes of any further concern for the flanks of the main Russian army. The strength of the Russian fleet in the Black Sea, which is all powerful, may be depended upon to keep open the Trebizond lines of communication with European Russia.

Kaiser Has His First Ride In a Plebeian Street Car

ELBING, Prussia, via Berlin, May 31.—The German Emperor to-day appeared in the role of a street car passenger. He boarded a crowded street car, and paid his groschen—ten pfennings—like the other 'fares'.

The Emperor with a small suite arrived here this morning, as heralded, to visit the Schichau shipbuilding yards. He walked to a car of the bob-tail variety, and asked the motorman whether the car ran to the Schichau yards. Receiving an affirmative answer, he called out: "All right gentlemen, jump on."

The Emperor and the members of his suite each dropped a groschen in the box, and when the trip ended the Emperor thanked the motorman for his first experience in riding on a street car, emphasizing his thanks with a ten-mark piece.

The local authorities learned of the Emperor's presence before the inspection of the yards was completed, and automobiles were in readiness to take the party to the station.

New blankets may be shaken and soaked in cold water overnight to take out the sulphur dressing and make them more easily washed.

Severely Criticizes The Civil Servants

Ottawa, May 31.—The 207th Battalion had three church parades on Sunday. In the morning composing two and four paraded to the reformed Episcopal church on Elgin street. In the evening No. 1 company went to St. David's Church, New Edinburgh, and No. 3 Company, to the Dominion Methodist Church. At the latter, Lt.-Col. Bell, A.D.M.S., and Captain Robins, of the 207th Battalion, were the speakers. Captain Robins criticized the response of the Civil Service to the call of duty had been one of the bitterest disappointments of the War. When the battalion was authorized it was decided to form at least one company of civil servants (about 230), but up to the present fewer than 30 have enlisted.

GENEROUS TREATMENT.

The speaker said he but expressed the feelings of pride of all Canadians at the splendid way in which Canadians have responded under the voluntary system and the government has been generous almost to a fault in promising to keep positions open for the men who go overseas and maintain their present financial standing, plus their outfit and subsistance, but should circumstances compel the country to resort to a system of compulsion, no government would dare murder those circumstances, to continue such undertakings.

It did seem a mistaken policy for the government, it was claimed, when an able bodied civil servant enlists to put an able bodied substitute in his place. By so doing expenditure is increased and efficiency decreased, without any corresponding gain from a military point of view. Such positions should be given to returned soldiers, men medically unfit for overseas service or above military age, or whenever possible to females, wives and dependants of soldiers.

IN THE HOUR OF NEED.

They all devoutly hoped that compulsion would not be necessary, but a year ago no one would have imagined that in the month of May, 1916, King George V. would give his signature to an act making military service for men medically fit between the ages of 18 and 41, compulsory, and especially in view of the fact that under the voluntary system Britain had raised an army of 5,041,000.

"Do your duty in the hour of need," said the speaker, "and you will have no shame in the day of victory. That day of rejoicing will surely come and no man who turns a deaf ear to the stern call of the present needs will be able to participate in the joy of the day of triumph."

A draft in the poultry house means roup in the flock. Prevention is the best method, and mice cheaper than the cure.

To remove the shine on clothes lightly sponge with a solution obtained by dissolving an ounce of hartshorn and half an ounce of castile soap in a pint of hot water and use a little of the mixture slightly warm. This is excellent for cleaning men's blue serge suits and it makes a shiny suit look quite new.

INQUEST WILL BE RESUMED THIS EVENING

Investigation Concerning Tragic Death of Edward Welsh Will Open in Millbrook To-night—Trainmen Will be Present

BROTHER'S STATEMENT

MILLBROOK, June 1st.— The investigation respectin gthe death of the late Edward Welsh, whose mangled remains were found last Sunday on the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks, a short distance south of Cavanville, will be resumed here this evening. A number of trainmen and others will be present to give evidence. Coroner Dr. McKinley of Port Hope will preside.

Watch Was Found.

Mr. Patrick Welsh of Pottery Corners, brother of the deceased, has the following to say in respect to the fatality:

"My brother," said Mr. Welsh, "left Mr. James Paul's place, where he was working on Saturday evening, and walked to Cavanville, for the purpose of purchasing tobacco and other goods. He remained talking to some young men of the village until after 11 o'clock, at about which time he started for the railway track, some 75 yards distant, on his way back to the farm. On reaching the track he had only a short distance to walk when he arrived at an overhead bridge and it was at this place he was struck by the fast express from Montreal, which in passing over his body cut off both his legs; one below the knee and the other above it. The body was found lying by the side of the track. His head was badly cut, and a deep wound was found under the left ear. The watch he carried on his person attached to his suspenders was removed. Dr. Turner, of Millbrook, has since received information from a Toronto man that the latter has it in his possession."

It is supposed that after Welsh was killed another train of cars passed over the body about 2.30 o'clock on Sunday morning, but was unnoticed by the crew and remained there until the 10.30 a.m. went through, by which crew it was discovered.

The deceased visited at his home on Victoria Day. He was a quiet, inoffensive man, possessing industrious habits. The deceased was 57 years of age.

THE CLOSING SESSION OF THE PROPHETIC CONFERENCE

Mr. Bingham Answers the Objection That the Doctrine of the Pre-millennial Coming of Christ Cut the Nerve of Missionary Endeavour—Interesting Address by Dr. Hooper

The Bible and Prophetic Conference which has been in session for four days in St. Paul's church came to a close last evening. Mr. Bingham spoke in the afternoon on "The Times of the Gentiles", basing his argument on the words of our Lord, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down on the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." (Luke 21:24). These times began with the captivity and deportation by Nebuchadnezzar and are characterized by a dominance of governmental power over Israel during their captivity, and the treading down of the holy city, Jerusalem. Israel was to be punished seven times. Measured on the scale of a day for a years (Num. 14:34), this would be 2,520 years. The times of the Gentiles, therefore, ought to be nearly fulfilled. The Zionist movement among the Jews, which shows a revival of the old national spirit and the probability that the Jews will be given Palestine at the close of the war, points to a near fulfillment of this prophecy.

At the evening session Mr. Bingham answered the objection that the doctrine of the Pre-millennial coming of Christ cut the nerve of missionary endeavour. He pointed out that the two most outstanding leaders of this generation are Robt. E. Speer and John R. Mott, both of whom hold the doctrine of the Lord's coming. Everyone of the 1,100 missionaries of the China Inland Mission hold the same truth. So does the greater proportion of the Church Missionary Society, which is the largest in the world."

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Dr. Hooper spoke in the afternoon on the millenium, and in the evening on the Antichrist. His wonderful knowledge of Scripture was a revelation to all present, and especially to the ministers. He pointed out that the pre-millenialist has a better social programme for the race than even the most ardent socialist. When Christ comes Satan will be bound, the curse will be removed from nature and ferocity from the beast. It will be a time of great prosperity and fruitfulness, here will be no child labour and no sweat shops. Profits shall then go to the toilers, for perfect justice will be enforced in all departments of life.

This happy time is to be preceded by the reign of the Antichrist, and this was the theme of Dr. Hooper's evening address. The Antichrist is not a system but a man who is to arise in the end of the age previous to the manifestation of Christ. He will head up all the antichristian movements of the day. He will hold the reigns of commerce and organize all capital and labour into one universal trust, one universal union. He will cause, as John says in Revelation.

"All, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their hand or on their foreheads, that no man might buy or sell save he that had the mark on the name of the beast or the number of his name". In religion he will unify all sects and denominations into one organized church. He will deceive the earth by his miracles and lying wonders. He will be destroyed, however, at the coming of Christ. The tremendous upheaval spoken of in Matthew 24 will take place in his reign. "There shall be great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. For there shall arise false christs and false prophets and shall show great signs and wonders; in so much that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." Then, "the Son of Man comes in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." The "beast (which is the Anti-Christ) and the kings of the earth and their armies will be gathered together to make war against him who sat on the horse and against His army." He will be immediately conquered, however, and destroyed by the Lord.

Prince of Wales Is To Marry Italian Princess?

PARIS, June 1.—That Prince Edward of Wales aged 23 the heir apparent to the British throne is to marry Princess Jolanda aged 15 the eldest daughter of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and a girl of rare beauty was the report received from Rome. It is rumored the announcement of the engagement is imminent. The Prince visited Rome a few weeks ago and then made a trip to the Italian front where he was the guest of King Victor Emmanuel. The King is said to have summoned the Princess with the Queen to army headquarters to extend his blessing and congratulations. It was while returning from this visit that the Queen and Princess Jolanda narrowly escaped death when Austrian aviators attacked their train. Jolanda is of course a Catholic and would have to become a convert to be British Queen.

NO DAYLIGHT SAVING SCHEME FOR KINGSTON

KINGSTON, May 31. Clocks in Kingston will not be pushed on an hour to-morrow, though a week ago the city council decided to put daylight saving scheme into effect here.

Following a storm of protests from citizens, the council held a special meeting last night and rescinded the action. Citizens held that there would be too much confusion in time as regards boats and trains, in addition to making many changes in routine of home life.

Wet a cloth and put it into your bottle of paste. Cork tightly and your paste will never become too dry. In a week or two when the cloth becomes dry, moisten again.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The other day while we were riding on a southbound street car going to the Henry Hope Co., where we offered our services as munition workers, an altercation arose between the motorman and us. After having given our husband and sons to the army, we feel that there are many more men in Peterborough who should don the khaki. A suggestion was made to the men on the car that they change their suits for khaki ones, and let women, who are willing take their places. Whereupon the motorman became indignant, and in the course of several remarks (none of which could be termed loyal) he said he would rather fight for the Germans than for the allies. We told him that he should express such sentiments to Chief Thompson, and not to us. He threatened to throw us out the window.

We have sons in the trenches, and others on the way there. We would consider our men mighty poor specimens of manhood if they didn't fight for the right in this war. We are willing and able to work in places of men that they might do their share. Women are taking the places of men in the old land, and why not here?

Men with anti-British sentiments should be interned, and those who are not in khaki should get a hustle on and "don" it. We wouldn't respect any man who is a slacker.

Thanking you, sir,

"The Cheat" At The Empire

Every Woman Should See This Play —They Will Appreciate It Greatly

Famed for her talents as a comedienne, Miss Fannie Ward will make her second appearance as a Paramount star in a production by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company entitled, "The Cheat." Her first photoplay was "The Marriage of Kitty," which has been universally popular.

"The Cheat" is a modern drama offering Miss Ward splendid opportunities not only for comedy but also for drama. It is by Hector Turnbull and was personally produced by Cecil B. DeMille. Prominent in support of the star are Jack Dean, Sussue Hayakawa and James Neill.

Miss Ward appears as Edith Hardy whose husband is a hard working man of extensive business affairs. She is interested in charity movement and is ambitious socially. Also she is vain on the subject of clothes. Through her position as treasurer of a charity fund she has many thousands of dollars in her keeping. Tempted to speculate in stocks to satisfy her desires for wealth, she takes the fund money.

Exposure faces her when she seeks the aid of a neighbour, a wealthy Japanese, who tries to make a bargain in return for the loan. The successful and happy working out of the complex and thrilling situation furnished a thoroughly exciting photo play, replete with suspense.

SHIPMENT OF FLOUR IS ACKNOWLEDGED

"We feel exceeding grateful for this magnificent contribution to our work, and beg you to accept our most sincere thanks. Kindly extend also our thanks to each member of your committee as well as to all generous donators. We will send you an official receipt by next mail."

Noted French Flyer Escapes Third Time

Paris, June 1st.—Mr. Eugene Gilbert, one of the best known French aviators, who was interned in Switzerland in August of last year on being compelled by lack of gasoline to land on Swiss soil after a raid on the Zeppelin establishment at Friedrichshafen escaped for the third time, on Thursday last and has not been heard from since. The Petit Parisien has information, which has not been confirmed officially, that Mr. Gilbert has reached Italy.

Mr. Gilbert, who established several world's records before the war, joined the French forces at the beginning of hostilities. His first escape from the detention camp in Switzerland, was made shortly after he was interned. He reached Paris but was sent back on the demand of the Swiss government because he did not give the authorities sufficient notice that he had withdrawn his word of honor not to attempt to escape. In February last Mr. Gilbert made his second attempt to regain his liberty, but was recognized and was arrested, at Olten, Switzerland.

THE JEWISH PENTECOST

Feast of the Weeks Will Be Celebrated on June 7th

The Jewish Pentecost or Feast of Weeks (shebuoth) will be celebrated on the 7th of June. Its name is derived from the fact that it is celebrated seven weeks after the second day of Passover. All the biblical injunctions as to the manner in which the Feast was to be observed indicate that it was originally agricultural in character. It was in reality a season of thanksgiving for the harvests that had been reaped, beginning with the barley harvest during the Passover to the wheat harvest at the beginning of the summer. The ceremonial offerings prescribed were in keeping with the God-given gifts of the soil that had been gathered.

In post-biblical times this Feast was observed as the anniversary of the birth of Judaism with the promulgation of the divine Law at Sinai. On this "Day of the Giving of the Law," as it was called by the rabbis, the Ten Commandments constitute part of the Scripture readings in the Synagog. It is this historical aspect of the Feast that has been emphasized in the non-agricultural life, which the Jews were compelled to live for centuries.

When the Reform Synagog introduced the rite of Confirmation for the Jewish youth, the Pentecost, by virtue of its traditional association with the ancient revelation, was the day most naturally selected for charging the young boys and girls through an impressive public ceremony, with the meaning of the Jewish faith and with the duty of leading a high and religious and moral life.

The agricultural side of the Feast however, was not lost sight of, in that it was customary to decorate home and synagog with plants and flowers in season. In addition to a portion from the Pentateuch, the charming story of Ruth was prescribed in the Synagog because the idyllic scene of harvesting which it contains was in keeping with the celebrations of the Harvest Feast. Those observing customs that originated in post-biblical times add a second day to that enjoined in the Bible.

NEW BRUNSWICK MINISTER LOSES

Liberal Defeats Hon. P. G. Mahoney in Westmoreland—Big Turnover

(Special to the Examiner.)

St. John, N. B., May 30.—Westmoreland, New Brunswick, has stepped up alongside of British Columbia Manitoba and Peel, Ont., in rebuking graft in high places for to-day Dr Ernest A. Smith, candidate of the Liberal Opposition, converted a minority of 450 in the general election into a majority of 83, defeating Hon. P. G. Mahoney, the new Minister of Public Works in the Cabinet.

The campaign just closed was a most memorable one. Mr. F. B. Carvell, M. P., came from Ottawa to assist the Liberals. The chief significance of the result lies in the warning to the Clarke-Baxter government, which it is realised now has not long to live.

Since the day in April, 1914, that L. A. Dugal, one of the two remaining Liberal members in the Legislature, after the general elections of 1912, made his charges against Hon. J. K. Flemming, then Premier of the Province, of extortion of $100,000 from timber-limit holders, and of malfeasance in office in administering the Valley Railway funds, the revelations of political corruption and of exploitation of public moneys for private gain have been sickening.

Mr. George J. Clarke has succeeded Mr. Flemming as Premier, but several members of government remain, and all bear responsibility for the famous whitewash resolution rushed through the Legislature exonerating Flemming although he was condemned by the report of the Royal Commission. Many other scandals had developed since the Dugal charges were made.

To-day's election was rendered by the retirement of Hon. John Morrissy from the government, at Premier Clarke's request, after Hon. Mr. Morrissey had denounced members of the government and prominent members of the Legislature in a violent speech in the House. Trouble had arisen over charges made against H. M. Blair, Mr. Morrissey's Deputy, and the latter was also removed from office. Sensations came when Mr. Blair began to publish affidavits telling of alleged efforts made by Premier Clarke to enable him to go away quietly when the charges were made.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Rassbourgue, 39 Mears Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using one boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

NO CONCEALMENT, WHY THE SKIRT? HE ASKS WOMEN

New York, June 1.—Women might as well leave off the short piece of cloth serving some of them for skirts these days for all the concealment it affords, declared Frank E. Parsons, of the Parsons Art School, at the Astor Hotel, New York, last night before an audience of members of Women's Clubs.

Mr. Parsons left very little unsaid about his whole range of thoughts on the question of present day styles for women, and it was evident that he has been thinking along disapproving lines for a long time. Some of the staid, decorous delegates maintained a strictly dignified demeanor during Mr. Parson's talk but most of the five hundred women present apelauded him vigorously. He declared the purpose of dress had five aspects, the functional, the economical, the psychological, the artistic and the ethical, all of which are being violated.

"This is the season of riot and anarchy in woman's clothes," he said. "Women don't know how or when to wear the proper costumes. They wear ballroom dresses at eight o'clock in the morning and 'at home' gowns on the street. They are dressing regardless of cost and are slaves to styles instead of subjugating styles.

"If you could see yourself as men see you you would change your styles mighty quick. Women are not built for the present day modes. With the skirts worn, the high shoes and silk stockings make quite a display. In the days of old even Cleopatra, who was no model, had sense enough to save off her gold slippers when she appeared in public, which is more than women do to-day.

"Costumes are being designed to attract women; not to make women attractive. A true lady never seeks to be conspicuous, yet that is what women are doing to-day in dressing as they do. If you want your children to be real men ad women change the mode of dressing and cease making the church a setting for a display of the fashions."

The address was made at a showing of the "History of Costumes" from 1790 to the present day. Students at the Teachers' College of Columbia University paraded in costumes from 1790 to 1915, and professional models were the styles of 1916.

INFLUENCE OF THE WAR ON EDUCATION AND RELIGION

Subject of Splendid Address by Prof. Michael of Victoria University at Trinity Church Last Night —A Scholarly Examination of Present Conditions.

The influence of the war on education and religion was the subject of an exceedingly interesting address by the Rev. J. Hugh Michael, M.A., of Victoria University, Toronto, at Trinity church last night. In education he saw applied science more widely adopted as a result of the prevalence it had won for Germany. He pointed to the insidious danger into which she had fallen, the development of a rampant materialism that had deadened the nation's soul. Discussing the war's effects on religion, Prof. Michael indicated the growing tenecy to minimize religious differences, the straining to surmount them, and the realization of the obligation of religious division to the larger fulfillment of the divine command. Last night's meeting was a conference anniversary of the Sunday school, educational and Epworth Leagues and was provided especially for a consideration of these departments of the work of the Methodist church. His Honour Judge Deroche presided and a decidedly practical address on the problems and departments of the Sunday school was given by Rev. Herbert W. Foley, B.D.

Prof. Michael first reviewed the school year at Victoria University, of which he is associate professor of Old Testament, Literature and Exegesis.

Passing to the reflective portion of his address, he stated that the war had compelled attention to education in Germany, particularly to the applied science which had made that nation the power she is to-day. This was bound to have an effect on education in Great Britain and other countries. We must be on our guard against concentration for material ends. Germany had won a foremost place in the world of matter, but she had lost her soul in the process. She had become marvellously clever in handling material things, but exceedingly stupid in understanding soul. Every thing that brought her power was leading her to defeat for defeat she must be. Some one had said that the Germans know more psychology and less of human nature than any other people. German education was entirely in the hands of the Government which by this means could make the people believe anything.

War and Religion.

"There never was a time, Pro. Michael continued when the church of Jesus Christ was in greater need of efficient ministers than the present. An important part of the ministers' necessary equipment is a thorough education. I do not forget the grace of God, the power to lead men, the position of common sense, but I mention it in this way to concentrate attention. And this education must include a true knowledge of the new testament. Religious movements were going on around and about us. In some of them there was a measure of religion, but somehow the church is not in the heart of it." Prof. Michael dwelt upon Ruskin, which he said was attempting to fashion the minds of the people regarding the Christian church. The minister's duty was to count not set this work. Supercilious contempt would not suffice. The minister must know and teach the new testament. And to know it he must study it himself. Persons who judge the time spent in the study of Hebrew and Greek do not know what they are talking about.

Many people think that the minute study of the Bible came from Germany and in the tendency to put away all things German thought that this deeper study should go. Prof. Michael pointed out the importance of this Bible study and of valuable contributions to the work that were of great assistance. He observed that these could no more be despensed with than that the reformation should be repudiated because Luther was a German.

Since theology is the interpretation of life and experience and the war was influencing our lives and experience so it is bound to influence our theology. It will be revivified. People are asking great questions about God. Some ask why he didn't stop this war. The departure of our soldiers is awakening deeper thoughts of the future. We were getting hazy about the future. "Sometimes I wonder if God sent this war to cause us to think more about the future."

Prof. Michael remarked that he deprecated the tendency to speak of the soldier's salvation being assured because he has given his life. "I ask you kindly that at all moments of enthusiasm you be careful of what you say, lest it may not be regretted after the war". A deliberate decision to give oneself for an ideal, for a great cause would bring any young man near er to salvation was the belief Prof. Michael expressed. Salvation is not a matter of time and who knows what mighty changes go through the souls of these young men in a few tense moments. They may go through a grander experience than we do in a whole life time. As Jesus spoke to the penitent thief, who will say He is not in the trenches, speaking to the lads who give their lives for an ideal.

EMPHASIZE ESSENTIALS

The war was giving greater emphasis to the essentials of theology and thereby was bringing the people and church closer together. Prof. Michael mentioned J. H. Shakespeare's opinions to the problems of the free church es in England. Unless they unite, he had said, they were doomed. The Methodist church in Canada was heading fast for some of the difficulties the free churches in England had to contend with. There is no need for division to-day, said Prof. Michael. Besides the church can't afford to be divided. There is a financial waste, and in many other ways a waste that can't be afforded. A division does not conform with the mind of Christ. Prof Michael said he did not sing the line from "Onward Christian Soldiers," "we are not divided". He could not sing it. There never was a greater lie in a hymn. How can the church which has to struggle for its very existence, struggle for the salvation of the world. In Canada there has been a wonderful fusion. It had been a help, an example to the Old Country but if we carry on this welding a little further it should point the way more clearly to the Old Land. All the difficulties would vanish if we had a true baptism of the spirit of God. We must get nearer to Christ and nearer to one another. Why do we waste time with things that do not matter when there is a great work to be done?

Prof. Michael made an impressive conclusion in dwelling upon the division over non-essentials when there was a world of work before the Christian church at home, among the pagans, in the present and especially in the near future. The next fifteen years were found to be important ones. How can we afford to be divided over non-essentials proved a question that open en the way to deep and puzzling thoughts.

Rev. H. E. Sexsmith, Picton, President of Conference

ing, the depth and intensity of which the wisest and best have never dreamed and the Church must concentrate on issues which swallow up sectional prejudice and interest. She must have regard for the imperilled welfare of the race. In the presence of Him with whom we have to do, we must worship where we cannot comprehend, trust where we cannot trace, and be encouraged by all signs of advancement and unity.

Further on the address read—War is either a duty and the highest of duties, or a crime and the blackest of crimes. There is no middle way. We have no right to go to war unless under constraint of what is best and noblest, and most Christian in our hearts. I note with pride the number of young men who have gone from our parsonages, the ranks of our ministry and laymen from our homes. They "Fear God and honour the King," which in the days of Christ meant war, if necessary, and in our day, means whatever sacrifice it exacts, however long we may have to fight, even unto death. Many more must make the sacrifice if right may prevail. We cannot be defeated unless we are false to ourselves, our Allies and our God."

Church Union.

Thomas Aquinas said—"If I have God for my Father I must have the Church for my mother." Of course that statement has scarcely found an echo in many Protestant breast for the simple reason that ever since the Reformation within our circles there has been a steady dwindling of devotion and loyalty to the organized Church, and the time has come when that fact is so portentous that we cannot disguise it from ourselves any longer. The Protestant Church no longer controls the life of her people and they are under no necessary submission to her discipline. I am not stating this by way of complaint, I am simply stating it as a matter of fact, as every student of history knows. At the same time I acknowledge the Church to be my "Mother." While the Church has greatly broadened her freedom she has lost her visible unity, until there are little parochial patches. This lack of unity has lessened her power when at the present day we are facing the most tremendous social, moral and spiritual necessities and responsibilities. As a church we were prepared to climb down from individualism which makes us denominational, and unite with the Presbyterians and Congregationalists, as members of one body which Christ died to redeem and share a common life, a common hope, on a common ground of unification and of action, but the vote taken by the Presbyterians seems not to warrant this Union. Failing in the whole Heartedness shown by our Church the responsibility of delaying Union lies with them and not with us. It would seem to me that our duty is to carry on the work of the Church, everywhere, as we did formerly, but with greater devotion and zeal, if possible, believing that solutions will come as we progress."

Captain Kenny sketched the advances of temperance legislation and the evident approximation of prohibition throughout the entire Dominion.

Needs of the Church.

Passing on, he discussed the present needs of the church. "We need a mighty battle front and reinforcements for the positions most fiercely attacked. Practical education in our Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues must be continued. Another great outstanding need is to give the ministry of compassion and sympathy the place which Jesus gave it."

London Sunday Cars Have Been Cut Off

Citizens Will Have to Walk to Spite Railway Company.

LONDON, Ont., June 1.—The city of London and the Street Railway split in the negotiations over track extensions and additional equipment to serve the military camp. In consequence, the city has cut off the company's privilege to operate Sunday cars after next Sunday. Citizens are asked to walk on the Sabbath until the company comes to time.

When the table cloth is too worn to use cut it up into squares the size of napkins. They will be handy for the picnic basket and save your good napkins in many ways.

THE BROTHERHOOD.

Your British Isles, my Shakespere?
Yea, but not yours alone!
Far bugles, singing softly clear
Where June is Winter, meet mine ear,
And where the Maytime tempests moan.

Your British Isles, my Milton sweet
Yea, but not yours alone!
The drum's insistent, roaring beat
In every broad Canadian street
Has pride and fervour in its tone.

Your British Home, my brave Carlyle
Yea, but not yours alone!
In every soft, Pacific Isle,
In every Indian Temple-pile
The bold St. George is loved and known.

Your British Isles, my Waverley?
Yea, but not yours alone!
For every mermaid in the sea
Sings of the ensign floating free
In soft and tender monotone.

Your British Isles, my Thomas Moore?
Yea, but not yours alone!
For in the South I trace the spoor
Of Afric legions swift and sure
Into a jungle-land unknown.

Your dead are 'neath the Flemish sod!
Yea, but not yours alone!
Brothers in tears, beneath the rod,
Brothers in fight, before our God,
Brothers beneath the churchyard stone!

NEW ROAD MATERIAL WILL BE TRIED OUT

Board of Works Propose to Use Tarvia on Homewood and Belmont Avenues—May Pave Louis Street

COMMITTEE MEETING

City Engineer Parsons has been instructed to prepare an estimate of the cost of applying tarvia on Homewood Avenue and on Belmont Ave., from Hunter Street to Homewood Avenue. At last night's meeting of the Board of Works a report was read from the City Engineer, giving a quotation of ten cents per gallon for tarvia delivered in Peterborough. Tarvia is a road-making preparation similar in some respects to a heavy grade of road oil. A few other streets were mentioned for treatment, but the committee decided to confine the initial application to Homewood and Belmont Avenues, as most of the other streets named had received more than one coat of road oil.

Will Trim Trees.

The Canadian General Electric Company was given permission to trim a number of trees on the Monaghan Road and Smith Street, providing the company first obtain the permission of the property owners and do the work to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Illuminated Signs.

No action was taken in connection with the request of F. H. Hourigan for a rebate of the license fee for an illuminated sign on the grounds that the light was cut off. Mr. Hourigan also claimed that the sign, as an unilluminated sign, did not comply with the by-law.

Application Granted.

The application of Mr. W. H. Hill for permission to erect a third story on the eastern part of the Crown Block was granted. Mr. Hill proposes to construct a nine-inch wall placed on steel columns with footings on the ground.

Will Erect Poles.

The request of the Peterborough Utilities Commission to erect three poles on Cross Street, five on Downie Street, two on Stewart Street, and three on Bethune Street was granted.

Telephone Extensions.

Permission was also granted the Bell Telephone Company to erect poles on Romaine Street, Monaghan Road, Dickson Street, and Murray Street.

The City Engineer was asked to report on the cost of paving Louis St.

A New Sidewalk.

The Board will give notice of its intention to construct a cement sidewalk on the north side of Dublin St., from Aylmer Street to the Grand Trunk Railway tracks.

A little methylated spirit used to moisten the polishing paste intended for brass and copper goods will keep them from tarnishing for quite a long time.

The Havelock Standard says: The ravages of war were brought vividly before our citizens this week, when a cablegram came to Mr. A. Wallar on Sunday, announcing that his grandson, Pte. Cecil Duke, had been killed in action at the front on the 19th of May. Pte. Duke, who is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Duke of Banff, Alta., was born in Havelock about twenty-one years ago, his father at that time being the C. P. R. agent here. He enlisted at Calgary early in the war. He was a young man of many admirable qualities and the news of his death in action came as a great blow to his friends and relatives here. A memorial service was held in the Methodist church on Sunday evening, where singularly enough, he received the call to duty for the Empire from a sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. C. W. DeMille in the fall of 1914. The sympathy of all goes out to the bereaved parents and relatives in their sorrow. Mr. and Mrs. Duke had only two boys, the elder, Mr. Leslie, visited here last summer, and he is now also wearing the khaki at the front.

The 93rd Battalion recruiting headquarters are being removed from the rooms on Simcoe Street to the store at the corner of George and Hunter Street, until a few days ago operated by Mr. Louis Yeates as a shooting gallery. The new location is more central and gives the recruiting staff a more effective chance at the eligible material.

The 93rd is already starting in to make its mark at Barriefield. Local young men who want to join a unit that is going to bring credit not only upon Peterborough but on its individual members, should lose no time in consulting the recruiting staff. For the cap backs with '93' and 'Peterborough' on it, is going to be considered as the distinguishing mark of a crack regiment before Barriefield Camp is a few weeks old.

Pte. 'King' Dillon has sent home from Barriefield for his lacrosse stick, which means there is some excitement ahead. Pte. Dillon is bound to have the 93rd represented at Kingston by a good lacrosse team.

A well-known citizen who lives near Central Park, in speaking to the Examiner about the 93rd Battalion yesterday, paid the Peterborough Battalion the high compliment of saying that although he passed near and through the men every day he had never heard any profane or obscene language.

The Kingston Whig Says:

To-day and to-morrow, and for the next week or two the word 'fatigue' will enter a great deal into the issuing of orders for the duties for the day of the men of the battalions and departmental units at Barriefield camp. There are tents to be put up—the accommodation planned is not quite sufficient in some particular branch—there are floors to be put in the tents and buildings must be erected. Drains have to be enlarged and hundreds of other matters, small but important must be dealt with and labour is the only solution of the problem."

The roads through the camp are rather muddy, in fact very muddy, in places, but soon with some fatigue parties at work this condition will pass away. The matter reverts to the question of when the engineers will want the work done. The engineers now are themselves very busy on the hundred of things that must be attended to. Where the officers see that a little improvement is needed and they are in a position to do it, labour is brought into use.

A drain through the lines is found not to be deep enough, and a small party start in, and that little inconvenience is put out of existence.

There are hundreds of little jobs that require a few hours' work of from one man to a dozen or more, but the results are beginning to show, and in a very few days everything will be ship-shape, and the routine drill work may be started.

Barriefield War Camp, Wednesday May 31.—Yesterday was another rainy day in camp, and all over the grounds there was nothing but mud and pools of water. Every soldier was cheerful in spite of the unpleasant conditions and every unit in camp has decided to purchase lumber and build tent floors. Most of them are already busy making floors, and in a few days every tent in the camp will have a substantial floor that will keep the occupants out of mud and pools of water. It would only have meant a day's pay and allowance for every man in camp to have floors laid throughout the entire camp which should have been done with a question of quicks.

Pallisses have been refused to the men in camp, without any sensible reason being given for the refusal Pallisses can be made in the city for the paltry sum of 50 cents each, and should be supplied to the men without delay.

To-day the sun is shining on the heights, and old Sol was never so welcome with his smile as this morning. A few days of sunshine will dry out the camp, and make things tolerable for all. The atmosphere is cool, and there is a good wind blowing over the camp site, helping materially in the work of drying out the soil. It will be a few days before the camp gets into perfect working order, but when once started, it will carry on with clockwork regularity. "Ken" with clockwork regularity. "Ken" the headquarters mascot, owned by Colonel Hemming, made the rounds of the camp commandant yesterday, and sized up all the dogs, and decided to live at peace with a great many of them. All the battalions will be in camp to-day, and drill will start to-morrow. On Friday morning Colonel Hemming will inspect the troops and every man will be out, and every unit will march past in columns of route. It will be a sight worth seeing.

Another Peterborough boy to join an outside unit recently is Pte. Norman Meehan, son of Mr. Louis Meehan of Peterborough, who is now a member of the Bantams Battalion, in Toronto. There are three or four Peterborough men in that unit.

In an interesting letter received by Mrs. Wm. Henry, 1013 Water Street, from her son, Pte. Harold Henry of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., formerly of the 39th, Pte. Henry says:

"We have had a very bad trip in billets this time. It has rained every day since we came out. We are going into the trenches again the day after to-morrow. Well, I have been pretty lucky so far and hope to be the same until all is over. I think we'll win over here some time yet maybe another year and a half is what I figure it to last, but we all hope not that long. We will stay here until we wipe them out, and as long as there is a Canadian alive they will never break through our lines, for we are just the guys that can poke the steel into them.

Peterborough City and County residents who subscribed to the regimental fund for the 93rd Battalion will be glad to learn that the Peterborough Battalion is already beginning to appreciate the advantages secured through the fund. The first meal at Barriefield Camp was prepared on the field kitchen, and if the tents have to be supplied with wooden floors, as a Kingston despatch states, the expense of this will likely have to come out of the Regimental Fund.

Dunnville, Ont., May 31.—J. Oliver, of the 114th Battalion, was before Magistrate Hastings this evening, charged with desertion, carrying weapons and shooting with intent to kill. He was found guilty on all the charges and sentenced to two years with hard labour for desertion four years for carrying weapons and seven years for shooting. Oliver came here from Toronto about six weeks ago, joined the local Company and deserted soon after. When he was seen on the street here in civilian clothes, making his way to the station, Captain Stewart and Sergeant Harris approached him, intending to place him under arrest, when he opened fire on the two officers fortunately without effect. He fired seven shots before he was overpowered.

Kingston, May 31.—The hotelkeepers of this city held a meeting and agreed not to sell or supply liquor in future to any soldier in uniform except beer and soft drinks, from this date to the end of the year. They went a step further, and agreed not to sell whiskey to any person after 6 p.m.

Kingston, May 31.—The water supply for Barriefield Camp will be ready to-morrow. The artesian well which supplied the camp last year are not sufficient for double the number of men, and as 10,000 are to be encamped here by the end of the week an electric pump had to be installed on the river shore half a mile away. The city extended its power line to this pump.

The total Canadian casualties up to May 29th number 23,319. This includes 3,464 killed in action, 1,462 died of wounds, 686 died of sickness and 14,263 wounded.

Port Hope, May 30.—At the inquest last night to inquire into the cause of the death of the late Pte. Thomas Kerr of the 136th Battalion, the jury brought in a verdict that the deceased came to his death by carbolic acid, administered by his own hand while in a condition of depression due to too frequent indulgence in intoxicating liquors, notwithstanding that he was on the prohibited list.

Another soldier who left Peterborough with B Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, last year, has been reported wounded, in the person of Pte. Jack Sykes. Pte. Sykes came to Peterborough from Trenton to enlist, and made many friends in this city during the two months the Squadron trained here. Pte Sykes is twenty-four years of age and unmarried. His relatives reside in England. Just a few days ago the Examiner published a letter of sympathy from Pte. Sykes to the parents of Pte. Gordon Carveth, killed in action. During the past few days quite a number of casualties have been reported from the Mounted Rifles, three killed and five wounded being the total among the Peterborough Squadron recently.

Sergt. George Coleman of the 93rd Battalion, who is suffering from an injured knee, did not accompany the battalion to Barriefield on Tuesday, but will remain here until he recovers.

To win the high praise from railway officials of being the best-behaved battalion the G.T.R. has transported, and to be lauded by Kingston authorities for its fine type of officers and men is a pretty good day's work for the 93rd Battalion on their first day away from home. And the 93rd can be counted on to keep up the good work.

Mrs. Adam Davidson, 169 Charlotte street, has received an interesting letter from her son, Driver Adam Davidson, at the front with the Ammunition Column. He says in part:

"We have had a pretty tough time since we got over here in France! We are working day and night. We have been making a dug out for the signallers for the last week, and Fritz, as we call the Huns, has been (telling the play) all around us, but to-day he happened to be a little bit lucky by dropping a six inch shell 50 yards or perhaps a little further away, from where we are working, and it lit in between two dugouts, killing ten men. The poor fellows never knew what happened to them. I was over the way the other night and I ran into a lot of Peterborough boys. They were Earl Downey, Ned Simmons, Joe Reynolds, Bob Ryan and our friend Harry Gamble.

OARSMAN LOSES LIFE

Knocked Out of Boat at End of Race

NEW YORK, May 31.—The annual regatta of the New York Rowing Association, held on the Harlem River yesterday, was marred by the drowning of one of the competitors, near the close of the day's events. Melvin J. McKenna, stroke of the senior four of the Wahneta Boat Club, of Flushing, N.Y., was struck by the bow end of the four-oared shell of St. Alphonsus Boat Club, Boston, and knocked overboard. The body was not recovered.

McKenna's parents and several relatives witnessed the accident which occurred shortly after the boats had finished a hard race. The event was won by the University Barge Club of Philadelphia.

One of the classic events, the senior single sculls, was won by J. B. Kelly of the Vesper Boat Club, Philadelphia. Kelly outclassed his two competitors and won by more than a half dozen lengths.

HOLDS METHODIST RECORD.

Rev. Mr. Livingston Retires After 18 Years in One Church.

HAMILTON, May 31.—Poor health has caused the retirement of Rev. H. G. Livingston, pastor of Barton street Methodist church. For 15 years the longest continuous period a Methodist minister has ever served one church in Canada, he has been in charge of Barton. Using a gospel wagon in the early days, he built Barton up from a mission to one of the most important churches in Canada. It was the first to open its doors to foreigners. Free will offerings have always prevailed, and there has never been a fixed charge for any function within its doors. Mr. Livingston has welcomed over 2,000 new members, married over 500 couples, and baptized 680. Two hundred of his flock are in khaki.

When sprinkling clothes that have become too dry for ironing use warm water. It penetrates more quickly than cold and less of it is required, so that the ironing may be begun sooner.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK CITY, June 1.—Mexican Petroleum sold off 2 1-3 during the first half hour of trading on the stock exchange to-day, while Lehigh Valley and Reading monopolized the attention in railroad list, both recording substantial recessions. U. S. Steel opened up 3-8.

The market was firm and dull during the early afternoon with a few spurts of activity in special stocks. Marine Pfd. sold to 35 1-8. American Sugar Refining was up a point at 1[illegible]. Anaconda Mining advanced 2 3-8 to 101 3-8.

ROYAL THEATRE

The Dust of Egypt

Which throbs with originality. It is a story of the modern—and the ancient. In exactly one-tenth of a second you are dreamed back three thousand years and ushered into the royal room of Amenset, a Pharaoh's daughter where she sits enthroned in all the glory and wonder of a glittering Cleopatra.

Amenset is tired of splendor—tired of glory. Ami, the wise man of the desert is sent for.

He gives her two potions. The first potion will make the one who quaffs it Amenset's slave in a love that has never been surpassed. The second is a potion of a death sleep—that will last three thousand years.

The fair princess drinks the second potion, drops to her knees—and sinks away into her age long sleep.

Three thousand years later Geoffrey Lascelles, an American, is presented with an Egyptian mummy. The potion of the ancient wise man of the desert has done its work.

The beautiful daughter of the Pharoah awakes—shakes off her grave clothes, and awakens Geoffrey Lascelles.

Stunned and mute with surprise, Lascelles finally endeavours to care for her. He is struck with her and her beauty, but only the night before he has announced his engagement to Violet Manning.

The princess is discovered in his quarters. Violet Manning meets her. The princess rages—and serves Geoffrey the love potion.

MAY TEST THE VALIDITY OF THE TEMPERANCE ACT

Prominent Liquor Men May Take Steps to Have Courts Decide

The Toronto Star Says:—

Eminent legal advice is being sought by prominent liquor men of the Province with the object of taking steps to have the Ontario Temperance Act, under which prohibition goes into effect on September 16 next, declared unconstitutional by the courts. The information The Star received to-day on excellent authority.

The Star's informant made it plain that the Licensed and Allied Trades Associations of Ontario the organization of the liquor men, has no part in the movement which is being wholly undertaken by big liquor interests on their own account.

The basis of the appeal could not be ascertained, but it is understood one of the contentions will be that the Act should not be allowed to become operative without its approval of the people by referendum.

As the Ontario Temperance Act does not differ in any material form from the MacDonald Act of Manitoba, which the Privy Council declared to be constitutionally sound, it is difficult to understand where grounds for upsetting the Ontario Act exists.

"I do not think the last word has been said on the liquor question," said a prominent lawyer today, "but since the Privy Council has declared the validity of the MacDonald Act there seems little hope of any attempt to upset the Ontario Act succeeding, unless the Privy Council swallows itself as it has sometimes done."

If the attempt to upset the Act is proceeded with it will first come before the Ontario Courts and if a decision adverse to the application is given in Ontario courts appeals will be carried to the Privy Council in the hope of ultimate success.

The Manitoba Act was disallowed in the Manitoba courts, but finally upheld as constitutional by the Privy Council.

MILITARY NEWS

LONDON, Ont., June 1.—Lieut.-Col. J. J. Craig, seen to-day on his arrival here at the head of the 153rd Battalion from Guelph, from the command of which he has been removed by the order of the Minister of Militia, said his suspension was temporary, and he was going to Ottawa to take the matter up with Hughes. The trouble was due principally, he said, to the people of Guelph, who wanted a Guelph man to lead the battalion. He denied the rumours of unmilitary conduct toward Colonel Shannon, who commands the district. Senior Major Kelly Evans took command of the battalion on its arrival here.

Austrians Capture Fortified Towns

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, May 31.—Austrian troops under the Archduke Frederick have captured strongly-fortified towns in the Asiago and Arsiero districts, it was officially announced this afternoon from Vienna.

The Austrians have stormed and captured several important positions, including Monte Baldo.

The Italian official statement refers to the bravery with which the Austrians attacked in the valley of Lagarina, but claims that the attacks resulted in the annihilation of the attacking columns. The fighting, the report says, was fiercest around Col di Buole, where the Sicilian brigade and other troops made frequent sallies from the trenches, pursuing the enemy with the bayonet.

Between Posina and the Upper Astico the battle is developing. East of the Campiolia zone concentration of Austrian artillery fire compelled the Italians to evacuate a position on Monte Priafora, but a desperate counter-attack resulted in the position being regained. Later the Italians withdrew slightly on the southern slopes of the mountain.

The communication also admits the evacuation of Punta Cordin, on the plateau of Asiago.

A Declaration of War Between Greece And Bulgaria Seems Imminent

Greek Premier Declines to Receive Protest of Bulgarian Minister and a Tense Situation Has Resulted---Bulgars Continue Pillaging Greek Villages---Greek Troops Fire on Bulgarian Troops.

THE SITUATION IS GRAVE

ROME, June 2.—A declaration of war between Bulgaria and Greece is believed imminent in London and Athens.

Despatches from the Greek capital to-day declare that the Bulgarian Minister protested to King Constantine's Government against firing upon Bulgar troops by the Greeks on the frontier.

Premier Skouloudis refused to receive the protest. The curt refusal of the Greek Premier to entertain the Bulgarian protest has resulted in a tense situation.

In the meantime the Bulgars continue pillaging Greek villages.

SPRING SEEDING IS THREE WEEKS BEHIND

Many striking features stand out in the 'Sun's' second crop report for 1916, and the peculiar part of the thing is that general conditions of uncertainty seem to be the same all over the Province. So far as letters have been returned (and the response has been gratifying indeed) returns show that the conditions vary widely even on single farms and travelling through the country has shown the Sun that is so.

Fall wheat suffers from this variability as much as anything and the corrpesondents point out that it is from six to twelve inches high. Other districts could be pointed to where it is less than six inches and in many parts killed out entirely in the low spots. However, this is fortunately the exception.

The few dry days of last week dried things up splendidly, though they did not last long enough to clean up all the low, wet spots. Judging from observation, the Sun believes that the reduced acreage of fall wheat this year will be accompanied by a smaller yield per acre when the thin patches are taken into consideration. The longer the wet continues the more pronounced this feature will be.

A LATE SEASON.

As noted in the heading above this page, spring seeding is from one to two weeks late and in isolated cases will drag on even longer than this. However, an average of about two weeks will about hit it right and with good growing weather from now on, would not cause any particular suffering.

However, the wet has made the land hard to work, and has increased the labour necessary to prepare the soil for crops in many cases. Where grain was put in early it seemed to have suffered none too much from the excessive moisture, as a rule and has had a good start. It has been fortunate that the frequent rainfalls have been accompanied by a fair amount of sunshine to dry it up, and yet not too much to scald the tender crop.

SPLENDID PROMISE FOR FRUIT

All the southern part of Ontario, following along Lakes Ontario and Erie, report great promise for fruit crops. The more northerly parts also promise well, but at the time of sending out reports the bloom was not yet sufficiently in evidence to tell how the crop really promised.

In the real fruit belts everything looks well; spraying has accounted for tent caterpillars and this fact combined with the wet season, will prevent serious losses from the pest. In ill-cared for orchards the "tents" are reported freely and in some cases as serious.

CLOVERS ARE GOOD

Clovers have come through frost and wet with flying colours, and in the main seem to be in good shape. So much cannot be said for timothy which appears to be more patchy in many parts, and held back considerably in the northerly sections by wet weather. There is no ground for pessimism as yet, however, regarding the coming timothy crop.

THE WAR'S DIFFERENCE

Help is just as scarce as was anticipated, and this is proving a serious handicap in the face of increased work in putting in the crops. However, the Sun finds a determination to "carry on" doing the best possible. One man, whose two sons have just enlisted, says he is going to try and handle all the crops that he did when they were at home. It will mean more work, and the 'side-lines' will suffer or instance, when asked who will look after the bees, that hiseldest son had cared for, he replied with a smile, "I don't know." The bees were subsidiary, and it may be necessary for a new apiary to be started after the boys are through with Kaiser Bill.—Sun.

HYPHENATES ARE FLAYED

Col. Roosevelt Pays Special Attention to German-American Alliance

St. Louis, Mo., May 31.—Colonel Roosevelt dissected, flayed and excoriated the hyphenated American here to-day—in the city having the second largest German American population in the United States. The former president has seldom been so vitriolic as he was in denouncing the "moral treason" of hyphenates. He spoke at a luncheon of the City Club.

The "German-American alliance" came in for a large share of the colonel's wrath. He held this organization and its branches to be composed of people "disloyal" to the United States, and "unfit for citizenship." He made a powerful appeal for "America for Americans," while lauding in glowing terms the patriotism of immigrants who came to America, and, as citizens here, proved fealty to the stars and stripes by deeds of heroism and public service.

"Here in St. Louis, I wish to speak briefly on the subject of Americanism," the colonel began. "I stand for straight Americanism, unconditioned and unqualified, and I stand against every form of hyphenated Americanism. I do not speak of the hyphen when it is employed as a mere matter of convenience, although personally I like to avoid its use even in such manner. I speak of and condemn its use whenever it represents an effort to form political parties along racial lines, or to bring pressure to bear on parties and politicians, not for American purposes, or in the interest of some group of voters of a certain national origin, or of the country from which they or their fathers came. Americanism is not a matter of creed, birthplace or national descent, but of the soul and of the spirit."

In closing, his address he asserted: "The salvation of our people lies in having a nationalized and unified America, ready for the tremendous task of war and peace. I appeal to all our citizens, no matter from what land their forefathers came, to keep this ever in mind, and to shun with scorn and contempt the sinister intriguers and mischief makers who would seek to divide them along lines of creed, of birthplace or of national origin. I ask them to remember that there is but one safe motto for all Americans, no matter whether they were born here or abroad; no matter what land their ancestors came from, and that is the simple and loyal motto: 'America for Americans.'"

Between these two appeals, the colonel ran the gamut of denunciation on the one hand of hyphenates, of whatever country, and eloquent eulogy on the other of men like Jacob Riis, Colonel Goethals, Major-General Barry, Leonard Wood and scores of others of foreign birth or parentage who were real Americans.

"If the American has the right stuff in him," he declared, "I care not the snap of my fingers whether he is a Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant. I care not the snap of my fingers whether his ancestors came over in the Mayflower, or whether he was born or his parents were born in Germany, Ireland, France, England, Scandinavia, Russia, Italy, or any other country. All I ask of the immigrant is that he shall be physically and intellectually fit, of sound character and eager in good faith to become an American citizen."

Discussing the German-American alliance and its aims and published statements, particularly the Pennsylvania branch and its warning that leaders of national conventions be warned they must deal with a united German-American vote, the colonel asserted:

"Such a statement represents moral treason to the republic.....The programme on which it (the alliance) wishes American citizens to vote is one affecting Germany and only Germany. I do not in the least object to it because it denounces me. It has denounced Mr. Wilson as often and almost as savagely. One of its favorite forms of denunciation includes Mr Wilson, Mr. Root and myself as equally opposed in the interest of Germany."

Work Done By Girls and Women

130,000 More Employed in Berlin District Than in 1913.

During 1915 there were 66,000 more girls and women engaged in industry in the district of which Berlin is the centre than in 1914, and 138,000 more than in 1913, according to data contained in the January number of the Reichs-Arbeitsblatt. Part of the report reads as follows:

"As was only to be expected, there was a considerable increase in the number of women workers. The figures show that 763,000 women and girls were engaged in industrial occupations in 1915, as compared with 607,000 in 1914 and 625,000 in 1913.

"Generally speaking, unemployment among male workers decreased steadily in the course of the year. The average rate of unemployment at the beginning of August, 1914, was 2.9 per cent., when it suddenly rose, after the declarations of war, to 22.4 per cent. By September of that year it had decreased to 15.7 per cent., and by November to 8.2 per cent. Since June, 1915, the average unemployment rate has been 2.6 per cent.

"Industries engaged in making commodities for use in the war naturally have been exceptionally busy. Overtime was worked regularly in the iron industries, and large orders were placed with the copper mining companies. The potash manufacturers were busy throughout the year, though the customary slackness was noticeable in May and June. Smelters had to arrange for overtime, night shifts, and Sunday work. All the engineering companies were kept busy, as were also manufacturers of optical instruments. Chemical and textile manufacturers had also a good year.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It beats like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

"Who started this idea of turning over a new leaf at the beginning of the year?" "Eve, I suppose. She was probably just as crazy about new clothes as the rest of the women."

"You know that motor agent who's been pestering me to death for the last six months? Well, I finally got rid of him." "How did you manage it?" "Easily enough. I bought the car."

"Willie, that little boy you've been playing with uses bad words. I don't want you to play with him any more." "All right, mother. I won't. I've learned all the bad words he knows anyhow."

Mrs. D. Pogue Badly Injured Hit By Train Near Cobourg

A distressing accident occurred near Cobourg, when Mrs. Daniel V. Pogue, who resides on lot 5, con. 11, Ops, near Omemee, was seriously and perhaps fatally injured.

The unfortunate lady, who was visiting her daughter near that town, had called to see a child who was ill. It ehad been arranged that a relative would call for her a the close of her visit to bring her back to her daughter's home. She did not wait, however, but decided to walk back. While on the railroad she saw a train approaching, and it is understood stepped from one track to the other, but unfortunately took the track on which the train was approaching. Before she was able to step back again, the train struck her with great force. The engineer saw the accident, the train was stopped and the injured woman was taken to Cobourg Hospital. According to the reports received, Mrs. Pogue's left shoulder was terribly crushed, and is said that practically every bone on that side of the body was fractured.

The injured woman is still in a very serious condition and slight hopes are held out for her recovery.

Mr. Percy Pogue of Lindsay, is a son of the injured woman.

MOUSE AS ENGINEER.

Dug Spiral Groove Round Inner Surface of Deep Hole.

A field mouse which had fallen into a hole dug to receive a telegraph pole displayed great ingenuity and perseverance in effecting its escape, says a writer in the Chief Steward. The first hour or so he ran round the bottom of the hole trying to find some means of escape, but could not climb out. Then he settled down to business. He began steadily and systematically to dig a spiral groove, round and round the inner surface of the hole, with a uniformly ascending grade. He worked night and day, and as he got further from the bottom he dug little pockets where he could either lie or sit and rest. The telegraph workers who had noticed his plight, and were curious to know how he would escape, supplied the little engineer with food. At the end of two weeks the mouse struck a rock. This puzzled him. For nearly a day he tried to get under, around, or over the obstruction, but without success. With unflinching patience he reversed the spiral, and went on tunnelling his way in the opposite direction. At the end of four weeks he reached the top, and probably sped away to enjoy his well-earned freedom. His escape was not observed.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"O, Heaven, give him to me—some time!" she breather in a voice of humble prayer.

Nat Burns went back to his schooner, squarely defeated for the first time in his life. Humble, and cringing like a whipped dog, he made his dory fast to the Nettie's rail and slung aft to the solitude of his cabin. He was glad that even the cook was looking the other way.

"She has flouted me, and the whole of Grande Mignon will know it," he said to himself. "Then they will want to know why, but that is easy enough to lie about. Hang that Mallaby woman! Who would ever think she'd squeal! Yes, and Schofield, the smug crook! They're the two that are doin' the damage to me."

Nat's lifelong knowledge of Code's and Nellie's affection returned to him now with a more poignant pang of memory than he had ever experienced. With this hopeless egotism of a totally selfish nature, he laid his calamity in love to activity on Code's part. He was pretty well aware of Elsa's extravagant favoritism of Code, and he immediately figured that Code had enlisted Elsa on his side to the ruin of Nat.

"So I've got to beat 'em all now have I?" he asked grimly, his jaw setting with an ugly click. Schofield and Mallaby, and—yes—while I am about it, Tanner, too. The old man never liked me, the girl hates me, and I wouldn't mind giving 'em a dig along with the rest. Just to show 'em I'm not so easy an' peaceful as I look! But how?"

For a considerable space of time he sat there, his head low on his breast, and his eyes half closed as his brain went over scheme after scheme. The detective that Nat had brought from St. Andrew's stuck his head down the cabin and remarked:

"Look, here, Captain, I want to arrest my man and get back. Why don't you hunt up that ship and let me finish?"

"I've got something a lot better on hand, Durkee," remarked Nat with a grin, rising from his chair, a plan having leaped full blown into his mind. "Just stick along with me and you'll get your man, all right."

He went outside and called the men in with a revolver shot and a trawl crib run to the masthead. It was about noon when they came in, and, after eating, three o'clock passed before they had finished dressing down.

"Any of you boys run across a dory from the Night Hawk?" asked Nat, as the men came inboard with their shower of fish.

"Yes," said a youth, "I f'und one of 'em an' he told me the Hawk's luck was Jonahed this trip."

"Where's the packet lyin'?"

"About twelve miles sou'east near the edge of the Bank."

Nat went to the wheel himself.

"Up jib an' fores'l," he sung out, "and away 'em flat! Mains'l and top'ls after that! Raymond, overhaul the balloon, stays'l, and try'll! Mebbe we'll drive her a little afore we're through."

Burns found the Night Hawk in a patch of sea by herself, more or less deserted by the other schooners because of the Jonah report that had gone abroad concerning her. Her dories were just coming in from the day's work partially loaded with fish.

"Hello!" hawled Nat. "Is Billy Stetson aboard?" Billy was the skipper.

"You d'ye want to see him?"

"Yes; send him along over. It's mighty important, but I ain't goin' aboard no Jonah boat. Tell him he'll be glad he came."

Presently Stetson came and the two retired into the cabin of the Nettie B.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
THE RACE.

It was dawn of a heavy dark day. There was a mighty sea rolling and a forty mile wind off the Cape shore that promised a three day ruction. The Charming Lass at her anchor reared and plunged like a nervous horse.

Weighty with fish she struggled heroically up the great walls of water only to plump her sharp bows into the hollow with a force that half buried her. Between times she wriggled and capered like a dancing elephant and jerked at her cable until it seemed as though she would take the windlass out.

In the midst of all this Code Schofield struggled aft and began hauling forth the mains'l that at the first edge of the Bank had been relegated in favor of the triangular riding sail.

Pete Ellinwood saw him, and in a great voice hawled down the hatchway to the fo'c'sle.

"Salt's wet, boys; the skipper's haulin' out the mains'l!" At which there broke forth the most extravagant sounds of jubilation and all hands tumbled up to help bend it on.

The crew of the Lass did not know it, but Bijonah Tanner and the Rosan had actually been gone twelve hours, having stolen away from the fleet before dressing down the night before, when darkness had fallen. And so successfully had Jed Martin stolen Bijonah's thunder that he had left but three hours later—when the fish had been dressed.

Schofield was honest with himself, and he waited until morning to see if the great stacks of fish would not settle enough to allow of another day's work to be crowded in. But when he saw that the space above the fish was very small he waited no longer.

Four men heaved on the windlass brakes, and the others got sail on her as fast as they could haul halyards. She strated under jib, jumbo, fore and mains'l, with the wind a little on her port quarter and every fiber of her yearning to go.

When the sails were apparently flat as boards Schofield made Ellinwood rig pulleys leading to the middle of the halyards so that the men could sway on them. She was fit as a racing yacht; her load was perfectly balanced and she trimmed to a hairbreadth.

An hour later they snored down upon the Night Hawk, the last vessel at the edge of the fleet.

"Better hurry!" megaphoned Stetson, tickled with himself. "Burns cleared six hours ago for Freekirk Head with a thousand quintal. He's got Boughton sewed up to buy 'em, too."

"Bring her to!" snarled Code, and the Lass, groaning and complaining at the brutality, whirled up into the wind enough to take her sticks out. "Burn's going home, you say? And with fish? Where'd he get 'em?"

"From me. I sold him my whole load at a better price than I would have got if I had waited to fill the Hawk's belly and then go home. Gave me cash, and threw in a lot of bait. So I'll stay right out here and get another load. Pretty good, for a Jonah — what? Ha, ha!" The man roared exasperatingly.

"Damnation!" rapped out Schofield. "Lively now. Tops'ls on her, and two of you stay aloft to shift tacks if we should need to come about."

"Hey, you!" hawled Stetson as the Lass began to heel to the great sweep of the wind. "There's two ahead of him, Bijonah Tanner an' Jed Martin! Better hurry if you're going to catch the market!"

"Hurry is it," growled Code to himself. "I'll hurry so some people won't know who it is."

It was the first time that Code had had occasion to drive the Lass, for the Mignon fishermen heretofore had confined their labors to the shoals near home or, at farthest, on the Nova Scotia coast. The present occasion was different.

Between where he lay and the friendly sight of Swallowtail Light was more than eight hundred and fifty miles of wallowing, tumbling ocean. Treacherous shoals underran it, bristling rocks pierced up in saw-toothed reefs, the bitterest gales of all the year swept in leaden wastes.

It was a cutthroat business, this mighty pull for the market; but upon it not only depended the practical consideration of the highest market prices, but the honor and glory of owning the fastest schooner out of Freekirk Head. The task of the Charming Lass was delightful in its simplicity, but fearful in its arduousness.

Jimmie Thomas came aft and stood by the wheel on the port side. It took two men to handle her now for the vast, dead weight in her hold flung her forward and sidewise, despite the muscular clutch on the wheel, and when she rolled down she came up sluggishly.

"Isn't she a dog, though, Code?" exclaimed Jimmie in admiration. "Look at that now! Rose to it like a duck. See her now just a-playin' with them waves! Just a-playin'! Oh, she's a dog, skipper—a dog, I tell ye! Drive her! She loves it!"

"I'll drive her, Jimmie; don't you worry. Before I get through some fellers I know'll wish they'd never heard of driving." He motioned Pete Ellinwood aft with a free hand.

"Tell the boys," said Code, "that what sleepin' they do between here and home will be on their feet, for I want all hands ready to jump to orders. They can mug up day and night but let nobody get his boots off."

"Ay, ay, sir!" replied Pete involuntarily. This bright-eyed, firm-mouthed skipper was a different being from the cheerful, careless boy he had been familiar with for years. There was the ring of confidence and command in his voice that inspired respect. "Look out there! Jump for it!"

The head of the Lass went down with a sickening swoop and the sound of thunder. A great, gray-and-white wall boiled and raced over her bows. Ellinwood leaped for the weather rigging and the other two clutched the wheel as they stood waist deep in the surge that roared over the taffrail and to leeward.

"Pass the life lines, Pete," ordered Code, and all hands passed stout ropes from rigging to house to rail, forward and astern, so that there might be something to leap for when the Lass was boarded by a Niagara.

Ellinwood got out two stout lines and made one fast around Code's waist, leading it to the starboard bitt. The other fastened Jimmie to the port bitt, so that if they were washed overboard they might be hauled back to safety and life again.

"Looks like she was blowin' up a little!" remarked Pete later in the day as the Lass rolled down to her sheerpoles in a sudden rain squall. "Better take in them top-s'ls, hadn't ye, skipper?"

"Take in nothing!" snapped Code across the cabin table. "Any canvas that comes off this vessel between here and Freekirk Head blows off, unless we have passed all those schooners ahead of us. Haven't raised any of 'em, have you?"

"Not yet, skipper; but we ought to by night," said Ellinwood, as though he felt that he was personally to blame. "But let me tell you somethin', skipper. It's all right to carry said, but if you get your sticks ripped out you won't be able to get anywhere at all."

"If my sticks go, let 'em go. I'll take my medicine; but I'll tell you this much, Pete, that nobody is going to beat me home while I've got a stick to carry canvas, unless they have a better packet than the Charming Lass—which I know well they have not."

"That's the spirit, skipper!" yelled Ellinwood, secretly pleased.

There is no telling exactly what speed certain fishing schooners have made on their great drives from the Banks. Some men go so far as to claim that the old China tea clippers have lost their laurels both for daily runs and for passages up to four thousand miles.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Plumwescop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Cooley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES COOLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I was miserable, tired out and dragging around. My legs could scarcely support me. My husband had read about 'Favorite Prescription' and he got me to use it. I used four bottles and the results were surprising. I got stronger, was less nervous, my appetite improved and I felt like a new person. It is the best medicine for women I have ever heard of."—Mrs. A. C. Brown, 30 Clifton Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont.

There is nothing that will bring comfort and renew hope to the invalid so surely as good news. When the vital forces are at a low ebb and everything seems useless, a ray of joy and assurance will stimulate the weary body to new effort and energy. A letter from a loved one has caused the tide to turn in many a siege of sickness.

Dieter Pigeon, of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., has good news for every suffering woman. Write him to-day and tell him your troubles, and he will send you just the right advice to restore you to health and bring back the roses to your cheeks, and without charge. His "Favorite Prescription" has been the means of thousands of suffering women. Many grateful patients have taken Dr. Pierce's advice.

Mothers, if your daughters are weak, lack ambition, are troubled with headaches, lassitude and are pale and sickly, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just what they need to surely bring the bloom of health to their cheeks and make them strong and healthy.

It is not a secret remedy because its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Sold in either tablet or liquid form.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Display of Confidence

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

There are many unwritten stories about Mexico. Doubtless if an account of the happenings of that country of turmoil could be laid out before the novelist it would afford themes for countless novels of adventure.

At the time President Wilson issued his manifesto of advice for Americans to leave Mexico there were not only a number of foreign residents there, but persons engaged in building railroads, locating mines—in short, developing the country. From comparative peace everything was turned to a show of war. Soldiers rode in the railroad trains to protect them in case of attack, and a detachment of rural guards was located at every station. The Mexicans went armed; therefore foreigners felt constrained to do the same thing, for not to be armed was to be conspicuous.

Edward Griggs, civil engineer, was at this time engaged in locating a railroad. A man who is interested in a purpose is like a gyroscope. Revolving in a certain plane, it is hard to turn him to another plane. Griggs, when President Wilson's advice was promulgated, had nearly finished his work in Mexico and could not tear himself away from it. He strapped a revolver about him, as did the force under his command, and went on with his work. But neither he nor they had any thought of using their weapons. They simply were them because every one else did.

That Griggs might finish his work he was obliged to go over a certain section of the road that would pass through a mountain range. He was told that the region was infested with bandits who would not hesitate to take everything that belonged to him and if they deemed it necessary would murder him. But he must either abandon his work or go, so he went.

Taking with him a single assistant named Rodman, he started on horseback up the mountain, expecting at every moment to hear an order to stand and deliver his valuables. But the two rode on through the thick tropical foliage that lined the road without hearing anything more terrible than the occasional growl of a wild animal and were lulled to security by the frequent piping of birds. But when nearing the summit the blow fell. Ahead of them they could see a ranch house, and from it emerged four men who had evidently seen them approaching and, mounting horses, made straight for them. They were dressed in the tawdry Mexican costume, and before they reached the two wayfarers the jingle of their spurs and the gewgaw adornments they wore were distinctly visible.

It was evident to Griggs and Rodman from their faces as well as their actions that they belonged to that lawless element of Mexico which in peaceful times may by care be kept within the law and in troublous times are ready for plunder. They seemed to be especially interested in the travelers' horses. Griggs, who understood a little of the patois Spanish they spoke, heard them disputing as to which two should have their horses. One of them, called Jose by the others, seemed to be a leader. He stood aloof from the quarrel about the possession of the animals, sitting on his horse moodily watching the contest. Griggs, taking off his sombrero to this chieftain, politely begged that he might be accorded a few minutes' private conversation with him. Jose, not to be outdone in politeness, took off his own sombrero and, with a bow, replied:

"Si, senor." ("Yes, sir.")

The two men rode away for a short distance when Griggs drew rein and said:

"Senor, I have been told that there are some persons in these mountains who make a living by plundering travelers. Will you oblige me by taking care of the valuables for myself and my friend that they may not fall into the hands of these miscreants?"

While speaking he was taking his money from his pockets and his watch from his fob. The bandit took them, bowing low as he was handed each article. When the delivery had been made the two men rode back to the party, and Griggs said to English to Rodman:

"These gentlemen will keep our valuables for the present. Hand over the contents of your pockets."

Having thus robbed himself and his friend, he turned again to the chief.

"I would further ask your protection overnight. Will you allow us to remain in your ranch till tomorrow?"

"Si, senor," replied the chief, doffing his sombrero.

"You have greatly honored me, senor," said Jose when he had made his guests comfortable and set before them a jug of pulque. "May I ask how it is that you have intrusted your valuables to a stranger?"

"It is not only the honesty apparent in your countenance," replied the engineer, "but I am sure that you have descended from some grandee who was one of the conquerors of Mexico."

"How did you know that, senor?"

"By your noble bearing."

Here was a new sensation for one who had never before been trusted and who, like most other Mexicans, prided himself on being descended from one of the conquerors. He kept the travelers overnight, returned their valuables and the next morning sent them on their journey under an escort.

Women and Golf in Olden Days.

Clark, in his "Golf, a Royal and Ancient Game," printed a few decades ago, recounts how strangers at the old St. Andrews course abroad were given a trial on the famous holes, and if they proved to be of the tribe of turf diggers and sand lifters they were ignominiously thrust into the outer darkness of the "women's green." The accommodations accorded to women in the old days were in the nature of a sop to Cerebus, merely to keep them quiet and satisfied while the men indulged in the more serious pursuit of a serious business with a better equipment on a finer course. In the annals of one old golf club it is recorded that since a certain green was habitually flooded and generally useless it was recommended that a new hole be built in its place and the old green given over to the women.

NOTES ON POULTRY.

The pullets that will fill the egg basket in early fall and winter are the early hatched pullets.

The incubator is ready to use any time but with hens a desire to hatch cannot be hastened.

Select eggs for hatching uniform in size. Extremely small eggs or exceptionally large eggs should not be used.

Chicks should be left in the incubator thirty-six to forty-eight hours after hatching.

Keep the chicks well covered in cold weather while moving them to the brooder.

Keep the brooder in a sanitary condition. Impure air will ruin a fine flock of chicks in a very short time.

Make it a rule that every chick must come out from under the hover at feeding time.

Guard against sudden changes in the temperature. During cold weather locate the brooder indoors.

Keep the little chicks busy by feeding small grains in fine litter.

Chick size grit and fine charcoal should be kept before the young chicks at all time.

Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and General Stores.

Oust German Trade In the Antipodes

Final Blow Delivered by Government Liquidation of Great German Concern in New Zealand

Japanese Competing Keenly with Australians for Business in Former German New Guinea.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, June 1—German commerce in the Antipodes—and incidentally it is believed the Kaiser's privy purse—is undergoing practically its final blow at British hands, for under instructions from the Imperial authorities the New Zealand Government is liquidating the existing stocks and collecting the book accounts of the Deutsche Handels and Plantagen Gesellschaft preparatory to winding up the business of the company until after the war.

The Deutsche Handels und Plantagen Gesellschaft is much the largest concern of its nationality in the South Pacific and notwithstanding the war has been in progress a year and eight months, up to a few months ago it had done a flourishing business, partly through British sufferance and partly through defiance of British sway. The headquarters of the concern are in Hamburg, its capitalization is about $6,250,000, it received heavy subsidies from the German Government, and it is reported here that the Emperor is one of its stockholders. The New Zealand Government has received direction, however, not to include in the liquidation the sale of the company's lands, buildings or trade marks.

The General Manager of the Deutsche Handels and Plantagen Gesellschaft operated from Samoa, but the company through its sub-managers controlled very large interests throughout the Samoan and Tongan Groups and adjacent islands. Besides carrying on a large importing business it owned—and actually still owns—extensive and greatly profitable plantations in most of the South Sea Archipelagoes where it produced copra, cocoa and rubber.

Traded on a Vast Scale.

It trading was on a big and widespread scale. It has a fine establishment in Apia, and its branches were in keen competition with British firms, particularly in Nukualofa, Tonga. Its strongest competitor was the Sydney shipping and trading firm of Burns Philp & Co., a concern noted for its clash with German firms—the Jaluit and the North German Lloyd—in the Marshalls and Carolines about a decade ago. Numerous firms in Sydney and Auckland which were engaged in the "island" business before the war had dealings of one kind or another with the Deutsche Handels und Plantagen Gesellschaft, a fact which to a considerable extent explains why the Germans were able to operate long after the war had been in progress.

When there was agitation about this anomalous state of affairs, namely, the continuance of transactions with an enemy company the plea was set up that the German concern's ramifications were such that if business were not kept up with it Australia's and New Zealand's trade with the "islands" would be snatched away by American houses. But eventually the Dominion's Prime Minister, Mr. Massey, and others in the Government, made representations to the Imperial Government which have resulted in the action already referred to.

When the New Zealand forces occupied Samoa the German company was permitted to do business, but under supervision of the military administration. In Tonga, however, notwithstanding that native kingdom is a British protectorate there was no check upon the firm's activities. Some time later a British cruiser in examining mail from Samoa discovered that the Gesellschaft's General Manager, one Hansen, was smuggling letters to Germany through the United States, whereupon Hansen was arrested, tried at Apia, convicted, and sentenced to internment here in New Zealand. The next step was the appointment of receivers by the New Zealand Government to conduct the company's business in Samoa and Tonga. Tonga having decided to cooperate with the British as regards the Germans. But the fact that a German firm was being allowed to compete with British traders in the South Pacific caused so much irritation that liquidation was decided upon by the home Government.

The Military Governor of Samoa, Colonel Robert Logan, has announced that all shipments to enemy firms and persons in that erstwhile German colony are prohibited, which is expected to affect to some extent the carriage of goods by regular steamers from Sydney and Auckland to Apia; but generally speaking the suppression of the Deutsche Handels und Plantagen Gesellschaft is hailed as an excellent opportunity of replacing big German business by equally big British business.

Conditions in German New Guinea.

RABAUL, German New Guinea, June 1.—Many complex problems arising from the Australian seizure of German New Guinea and its present military occupation by the Commonwealth have been capably faced and satisfactorily settled by the Administrator, Col. S. A. Pethebridge of Queensland, detached from the Defense Department, in Melbourne late in 1914. But should the war last a great while longer trouble may arise over finance and currency. The German currency—silver and State bank notes—used under the military administration, depreciates at its face value from 20 to 40 per cent. outside German New Guinea.

Before the war the five big German trading companies operating in the colony acted virtually as bankers for their clients who were planters, native labour recruiters, storekeepers, paradise bird hunters and settlers. Large sums of money are locked up in German banks which is causing numerous planters to rue the day that they did not establish credits in Australian banks. Copra and all other German New Guinea products were customarily consigned or exported through the companies just referred to. The net proceeds, minus percentage commission, were credited to the consignee, who drew against them on sight, but the bulk of the money remained in German hands. The companies imported a certain amount of currency at regular intervals, but not enough nor in kind to meet wartime exigencies. The result is that that planters—even those with lucrative holdings—are now paying heavily in percentage in order to do business. But some planters and traders were fortunate enough to have opened ante-bellum accounts with Australian banks.

A big general business is springing up between Sydney and German New Guinea as an outcome of the needs of the colony. Australians, however, were beaten in this field in point of time by the Japanese. Soon after the Japanese occupation of the Ladrone, Caroline, and Marshall groups the Orientals saw the trade possibilities of German New Guinea and they established a direct steamer service between their country and the captured territory. Presently their operations were extended to Ra baul and with characteristic astuteness regular shipments of just the goods needed by this place and its environs were landed by them.

German New Guinea offers excellent opportunities for business in copra, rubber, cocoa, pearl shell, kapok, arrowroot, trepang, kava kava, sisal hemp, tobacco, rice, and Indian corn.

WHERE DRUGGISTS FLOURISH

How the Business Is Run in the South American Republics.

Latin Americans are great believers in medicines and, due to the scarcity of physicians, are obliged to "doctor" themselves. Pharmacy is consequently profitable. With the exception of modern Europe, Canada and the United States pharmacy is practiced in other lands of the world much as it was in the United States seventy-five or a hundred years ago, and this is particularly true of the republics to the south of us.

The individual druggist makes his own pills, extracts, tinctures, infusions and pulverizes his own crude drugs. Soda water fountains are few. The usual rubber goods, toilet articles, soaps, perfumes, instruments and sundries are carried.

Each druggist makes a line of his own specialties which he pushes. In addition to the standard drugs and medicines, he also carries remedies and medicaments known only in his immediate vicinity. They are mostly of Indian origin, compounded from roots, herbs or other ingredients, produced only in the country where he lives. These find a ready sale among all classes.

Superstitious ideas are prevalent, and these are frequently taken advantage of by the unscrupulous. One pharmacist made a fortune selling Indians, half castes, and whites, for that matter, too, "pink love powders" and "white love powders." The white love powder was pulverized sugar, while the pink love powder was made of the same material colored. Indians would walk hundreds of miles to buy this precious powder.

How a Meaning Changes.

"Cheat" is a word that now has a very ugly sound. To cheat a man is to defraud him. Originally the word conveyed no such meaning. The old word "escheat" referred to the dues that fell to the crown. It came from the French echoir (Latin, excadere). The modern meaning that attaches to the word tells a sad tale of the extortion and greed that must have been practiced in collecting the dues.

RARE PORCELAIN SOLD.

Still Plenty of Cash in London to Pay for Art Treasures.

LONDON, May 31.—The three days' auction of the collection of rare porcelains formed by the late Sir Trevor Lawrence was begun on Monday in Christie's. Bidding was high and well sustained. The top price was $6,230, for a set of three vases and covers. The vases, eleven inches in height, are of hexagonal shape and taper toward the base. They are finely painted with birds, trees, and insects in scroll panels on a dark blue scale pattern ground. Another agent gave $2,254.25 for a dessert service painted with exotic birds on white ground in dark blue and gold.

HON. MR. BELAND FREED.

Ottawa, May 30.—A London cable says that word has been received from Paris that Hon. Mr. Beland, M.P., has been released by Germany, and is leaving for home by way of Holland. Beland was taken prisoner while serving in a military hospital in Belgium and the repeated efforts to secure his release have hitherto been fruitless.

A Quebec despatch says that friends of Beland have received a postal card dated in Berlin, saying he is now out of the interment camp and living in Berlin. In a hidden corner of the card Beland asks that his friends in Canada send him regularly each week at least two loaves of bread.

"How did the snowstorm affect the train service out your way?" "Didn't affect it all. It merely gave the company a good excuse for the trains being as late as usual."

FEEDING HUNGRY YOUNG IRISH—For some days during the recent Irish Rebellion, food was practically cut off from the poorer districts of Dublin.. Picture shows the beginning of a joyful dry bread banquet by hundreds of hungry youngsters, gathered together in a narrow street and supplied with bread by the clergyman in the centre of the group.

A NEW PICTURE OF THE ASQUITH FAMILY—Picture shows the Premier with his wife and two daughters in the background as they were leaving St. Paul's Cathedral after the unveiling of the tablet to Captain Scott.

Blind Soldiers Taught To Read, Work, Fence, Box

Among those wounded in the war, writes a contributor to the Paris Temps of May 2, none appeal to our tender sympathies more than the poor soldiers whose sight has been destroyed. Their loss is irreparable.

All our genuis and science, triumphant in heading a thousand other kinds of wounds and afflictions, stand baffled before these extinct luminaries. In some cases a bullet in the temple had severed the optic nerve, in others a shell fragment may have ripped out the entire eyeball, leaving only a gaping red socket. In both instances the damage is irremediable so far as human skill is concerned, and the time is long past when the God-man went about restoring sight in a miraculous manner to the blind of Palestine.

In the asylums, where charitable people are solicitously surrounding the blind soldiers with all possible comforts, these unfortunates are taught to read by means of raised letters and they devote hours every day to this study. Many of them are also endeavoring to learn some new occupation by which they may earn a meagre living afterward. But although study and eager practice at some kind of light work attract their interested attention during the greater part of the day, there is one thing for which these blind soldiers feel a craving, and that is muscular activity.

They experience a desire to use their surplus strength, of hustling about, for it must not be forgotten that they belong to a generation which has practised athletic sports from childhood. In school they played ball and later they took up boxing, wrestling, swimming, cycling and other forms of healthy exercise. When their country called them they were drilled in the manual of arms and military evolutions for months, and came to look upon grim warfare itself as the greatest of all sports. Up to the very time of the fatal shot which robbed them of their sight they were constantly busy engaging the enemy. Now these same vivacious youths are huddled together in some charitable shelter, subdued in spirit and not daring to indulge in that expansion of strength which their seething vitality demands.

This sad predicament impressed itself on a young fencing master to such a degree that he evolved a scheme to arrange fencing bouts in which the blind men could take part, thus providing for them a sportlike recreation and a healthy outlet for their stored up activity. Fencing, one will inquire in astonishment? But that is a sport which more than any other requires acuteness of sight, quick perception and all that. Very well, that may be so, but take a look nevertheless, into the fencing quarters of the blind soldiers in Rue de Rquilly and watch them disport themselves at the game.

It is a roomy, well ventilated hall, taking up almost the whole little summer house in the hospital garden, where our blind wards are learning the art of parrying and feinting. The instruction, of course, is especially adapted with due consideration of the defects of the pupils, who are expected to gain some skill in the manly art only gradually, by perseverance and frequent practice. Still, results are already being obtained. Look, for instance, at that blind soldier, who without any aid went to his place on the bench a little while ago. Now the instructor calls him and he gets up, making his way to the teacher, guided only by the latter's voice. Another command and the blind soldier turns half around and puts himself in guard position. By special direction of the teacher the fencer lowers the point of his foil in a direction toward the left shoulder of his opponent. During the bout the blind fencer keeps his foil in touch with that of his adversary as much as possible, so as not to run the risk of being disarmed. On the whole his aim is to keep on the offensive all the time, and his adversary, even one with perfect eyesight, will find the blind fencer an opponent far from negligible.

When you see two blind men fencing it reminds you strangely of our duellists in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries of D'Artagnan and others, who fought in the obscurity of narrows back lanes, but with as sanguinary effect as if they had battled in broadest daylight. Although he does not see his adversary, the blind fencer notices and watches all his movements through the contact with his foil. In this the intensified sense of touch in a blind person is most remarkably demonstrated. Seeing them exchange thrusts and parries so quickly imagine that these men had the use of their eyes.

Teaching fencing to the blind soldiers gives rise to still further possibilities of providing adequate exercise and active diversion for these poor war victims, since boxing, wrestling, jiu-jitsu and similar sports may be just as easily taught them. A sage has once said that the greatest misfortune that could befall any one is to become dead to the world before the expiration of one's natural life. Such a fate no longer threatens the blind French soldier, whose confidence in himself may be renewed by his participation in practically all kinds of athletic recreation that are open to his more fortunate fellow men.

The Racking Pains of Sciatic Rheumatism

Were Well-nigh Unbearable—After Five Years of Suffering Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Medicines

For downright excruciating pain few ailments can be compared to sciatic rheumatism. Since this condition of the sciatic nerve denotes exhaustion of the nervous system, the logical cure is found in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to nourish the starved nerves back to health and vigor.

Reports are continually coming in to us regarding the splendid results obtained in the treatment of sciatic rheumatism by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after each meal and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally as a means of arousing the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby keeping the system freed of pain causing poisonous impurities.

Mr. W. J. Talbot, Edenwold, Sask., writes: "It is a great pleasure for me to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food as a cure for Sciatic Rheumatism. The pain I have suffered has been well-nigh unbearable. It would start in the hips and run down the legs to the toes, gradually getting worse. The nerves contract until one is practically useless. My doctor tried many different treatments, but could only afford relief for a time.

"For about five years I was subject to this trouble with severe attacks which would last about two months. The last attack I had was shortened to two weeks by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. This treatment was continued until I was satisfied that the cure was lasting."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. H. E. Wooley, J.P.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six for $2.50. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmason, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This pattern is so designed that serge or wool checks or plaids will give an effective model, but for outdoor and school wear for spring the more durable tub fabrics, such as rep, ratine, linen and galatea, will give a frock that will be most satisfactory, because it can always be kept in spick and span condition, this due to its being easily laundered. Of course, for summer the figured and flowered lawns and other like fabrics are more airy and attractive, but also more perishable.

This little dress claims the right to be called fascinating, with buttons in groups trimming a box pleat that extends down the centre front to where a belt marks the joining of a two piece skirt. A unique feature is the tab at either side of the front, which holds the belt decoratively and also forms the pockets. Contrasting goods, so popularly used for giving style note, form the collar, cuffs and belt of the model.

The pattern is cut in sizes 6 to 12 years. To reproduce in size 8 years will require 2¼ yards of 44 inch material with ⅝ yard of contrasting goods in 36 inch width.

When ordering remember to give name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Lemon Rub Last Memory of One Leaving Germany

WARNEMUENDE, Germany, June 1.—The last impression of a traveller leaving Germany nowadays is likely to be that of a "lemon rub"—a measure intended to bring to light or efface, as the case may be, such maps and military information as may have been entrusted to the suspect's skin.

According to the German frontier survey officers, the practice has been common enough, but recently great vigilance at all borders points has discouraged such a method of getting information out of the country.

The purpose of the lemon rub is to develop the drawing of writing upon the skin or remove the chemical in which through to action of acetet agent would become visible. Lemon juice, or its principal constituent citric acid will do this without injuring the skin or causing pain.

At a certain frontier front the name of which was not given, 127 persons were detained and treated to the lemon rub in March, and one of the officers said that a number of long-term imprisonments had resulted.

He also explained that while the actual spying was being done by men, the information obtained was in most cases carried out of the country by women, so that for some time it has been very difficult for women to get permission to leave the Central Empires, and quite recently the order went out that no women who could not be vouched for by some responsible official was to be given permission to use the Balkan train.

On the whole, it has become almost impossible to cross a border of the central group of belligerents. A veritable gauntlet of examinations has to be run by the would-be-travelled before the necessary papers are obtained. These permits and rules have now been standardized in Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey. Getting them is equally difficult in all these countries.

The number system in use to some extent is of special interest. Hardly those people who travel a great deal of who have been indiscreet in conduct and language are given numbers. The number is known to every frontier post and police and military headquarters of the Central Power group and it sticks to the traveller like his shadow. The number shows to what extent and in what respect he is obnoxious and fixes his treatment at the border automatically.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine loosen the cough loosen, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. H. Moore, Sherbrook, N.S., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

June 4, 1916.

The Call of the West—Acts 15:36-16:15.

Golden Text—Come over into Macedonia and help us. Acts 16:9.

1 Verse 36. Why is it generally necessary to follow up any good work which we have commenced if we would make it a success?

2 Verses 37-39. Why would you say, or not, that it would have been better if Barnabus had first consulted Paul, in the matter of taking Mark?

3. Barnabus was a relative of Mark; are we as good judges of the fitness of our relatives for an office as we are of the fitness of others? Why?

4. Why is nepotism in government appointments looked upon with suspicion?

5. What good reasons did Paul probably have for not wanting to take John Mark with them? (See Acts 13-13.)

6. If a man shows lack of courage or tact, or persistence, in one position to what extent does that disqualify him for another position?

7. If Paul and Barnabas had been exact duplicates of the man Jesus, is it probable or not, and why, that they would have had this dispute about Mark?

8 Verses 40-41. This dispute between Paul and Barnabas resulted in two missionary deputations instead of one, would you therefore say, or not, and why, that God sometimes uses disputes between good men to work out good results?

9. Chapter 16:1-3. Why would you say it is the duty of ministers and other Christians to be on the lookout for young men who are fitted for the ministry, the same as business men look out for good salesmen?

10. What can you say for, or against Paul circumcising Timotheus, in view of the decision of the Council at Jerusalem? (See Acts 15:1-20.)

11. Verses 4, 5. What were the decrees.....of the elders which were at Jerusalem," which they were teaching the young Christians to keep, and are these decrees still binding on Christians?

12. What "decree" did Jesus teach beside the duty of loving God with all our heart, and our neighbor as we love ourselves?

13. Why will a church sound "in the faith" always be a magnet to draw others to it?

14. Verses 6-8. Why did the Holy Spirit forbid them to preach in Asia and Bithynia, and would they have sinned if they had preached in either of these places?

15. When we are providentially hindered from doing certain good works, is that the Holy Spirit hindering us? Why? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

16. Verses 9, 10. How many methods can you recall which God adopts in leading us?

17. Why have we a right to comfort our hearts with the belief, that God will in every emergency, guide us as to what we ought to do?

18. Verses 11, 12. What reason is there to think that God directs the main course of the Christian with absolute accuracy in spite of wind and sea?

19. Verse 13. What is one of the first things an earnest Christian looks for when he moves into a new community?

20. Verse 14. What reason is there to think that busy women are generally more spiritual than those who have but little to do?

21. Why is it easier for God to open the heart of an industrious person than that of an idler?

22. Verse 15. If a person is inhospitable or stingy, is that a sure sign or not of ungodliness, and why?

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the table and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

URGES EVERYONE TO QOICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

Drink Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast to Wash Out Poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It clears out all the sour fermentation, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

BERLIN REPORTS BIG NAVAL BATTLE

SAYS AT LEAST NINE BRITISH SHIPS LOST

GERMAN ADMIRALTY REPORT TERRIBLE SEA FIGHT NEAR SKAGRACK ON WEDNESDAY

Enemy Claim That the British Losses Included the Battleships "Warspirite" and the Battle Cruisers "Queen Mary" and "Indefatigable" as Well as Two Armoured Cruisers, a Small Cruiser, and New Destroyer Flagships---German Statement Also Admits Loss of a Number of German Vessels.

BRITISH ADMIRALTY ADMITS SOME LOSSES

TORONTO, June 2.—The outstanding fact gathered from the German official statement on the Skakrak naval fight is that the Germans were driven back to their base.

The losses on both sides were apparently heavy, but the Germans were defeated in what was probably their main object—the raiding of the British east coasts or an excursion in force into the Atlantic to capture or sink transports of Canadian troops. In some quarters it is thought that the British fleet may have cleared the way into the Baltic by this action.

BERLIN, June 22.—An engagement between the German High Seas Fleet and the main part of the English fighting fleet, in which more than eight British vessels were destroyed and many badly damaged, was announced in an Admiralty statement to-day.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The British and German high sea fleets clashed in the biggest naval engagement of the war on Wednesday, May 31. The engagement, starting in the day time, continued throughout the night.

Nine British warships, a submarine and numerous smaller British vessels were sunk, according to a German Admiralty statement recived here via the Sayville Wireless this afternoon.

The German report admits the loss of two German warships, and a possible loss of a third, with several torpedo boats unaccounted for. The German statement was issued following the return to its base of the German High Seas Fleet.

No report has come from British sources.

The scene of the engagement, the greatest sea fight of the war, was near Skagrak.

The greatest of the British ships reported lost are the battleship Warspite and the battle cruiser Queen Mary, and Indefatigable.

The German's heaviest losses were the battleship Pommern, a pro-Dreadnought of the Deutschland type, the cruisers Wiesbedan, and the protected cruiser Frauenlob, the latter reported missing.

The Germans made no estimate of the number of their torpedo boats lost. Their estimates of the British losses in small craft is covered by the phrase, "a large number."

German estimates of British losses are apparently based on reports of British sailors picked up by German ships.

An intimation of the probable extent of the British losses is contained in the statement that only two survivors of the great battle cruiser Indefatigable were rescued by the Germans.

The German official statement asserts that the German fleet had returned to its base. This statement carried the suggestion that possibly the British had pursued the Germans, despite their losses.

This might account for the delay in the report from London. The German statement says that the British force was "considerably superior."

The German Admiralty statement under date of June 1 said: "During an enterprise directed northward our High Seats Fleet on May 31 encountered the man part of the English fighting fleet which was considerably superior to our forces. During the afternoon between Skagrak and Horn Riff, a heavy engagement developed which was successful for us and continued also during the night.

"In this engagement, as far as known until now, we destroyed the large battleship Warspite, the battle cruisers Queen Mary and Indefatigable, two armoured cruisers, apparently of the Achilles type, one small cruiser, new flagships of destroyers, Turban, Ant, Nestore and Alcaster, a large number of torpedo destroyers and one submarine.

"By observation which, it is clear, is free to objection, it is stated that a large number of British battleships suffered heavy damage from the fire of our ships and attacks of our torpedo boat flotillas during an engagement which lasted during the entire day and all night.

"Among others of large British ships, the battleship Mariborough was hit by a torpedo. This is confirmed by prisoners.

"Several of our ships rescued parts of crews of sunken British ships. Among those rescued were two survivors of the Indefatigable.

"Among our losses was the small cruiser Wiesbaden which was sunk by British gunfire during the day engagement, and His Majesty's ship Pommern, which was sunk during the night engagement by a British torpedo.

"The fate of His Majesty's ship Frauenlob is as yet undetermined, and there is possibility that this boat has been lost together with a number of torpedo boats which have not yet reported, and whose fate is unknown.

"The High Seas Fleet returned to its base to-day."

Skagrak is a broad arm of the North Sea between Norway and Jutland. It is 150 miles long and 80 miles wide. With Cattegat, the Sound, and Great and Lisle Belts, it constitutes the channel connecting the North and Baltic seas.

The Warspite was a Dreadnought of 27,500 tons, was 650 feet long, 94 feet beam, and had a draught of 27½ feet. She carried eighteen fifteen-inch guns, sixteen six-inch guns, 12 anti-aircraft guns, and four torpedo tubes. She was built in 1912 at a cost of two and one-half million pounds. She carried 1,500 officers and men.

The Queen Mary was a battle cruiser of 27,000 tons, was 725 feet long, beam 87 feet. Her armament, eight thirteen-inch guns, sixteen 4-inch guns, and three torpedo tubes. She had a speed of 27 knots. The Queen Mary

The German and British lists agree on the sinking of the Queen Mary and Indefatigable, British battle cruisers. The British also admit the loss of the battle cruiser Invincible. The German list claims the destruction of the British super-Dreadnought Warspite, but the British list did not include the Warspite. The total number of men on the British ships sunk, if they were carrying normal complement, was 6,258, excluding the crews of two destroyers with unrecorded complements.

The German Admiralty admitted the loss of one battleship, one cruiser and several torpedo boats, with on other cruiser and several torpedo boats being missing.

LONDON, June 1.—The Queen Mary, the Indefatigable, and the Invincible, battle cruisers, and the cruisers Defence and Black Prince wer sunk, according to a British Admiralty announcement.

The known British destroyers lost included the Tipperary, Turbulent, the Fortune, Spearowhawk, and the Ardent.

According to the Admiralty the British fleet consisted of the cruiser fleet, consister of battle cruisers and light cruisers, supported by four battleships and a flotilla of destroyers, torpedo boats and submarines.

The British Admiralty makes no claim regarding the number of enemy vessels sunk, confining itself to its statement that "the number of enemy destroyers sung was unascertainable, but was undoubtedly large."

The British Admiralty says that the balance of the squadron has returned safely to port. It states that the Germans were aided greatly by "low

PTE. G. ROBINSON WELL KNOWN RUNNER KILLED IN ACTION

Plucky Little Long Distance Man Who Was a Contestant in the Examiner Road Races Loses His Life at Front on May 25th

ANOTHER ON LONG LIST

As game an athlete as ever pulled on a running shoe, George Robinson, the little, long-distance runner who used to take part in the Examiner road races, proved just as game when the call to the colours tested the manhood of Peterborough. Early last year he enlisted here with the 57th Regiment quota in the 39th Battalion. To-day comes the tragic news that No. 412519, Pte. George Robinson, Canadian Infantry, was killed in action on May 25th.

The sad intelligence will bring regret to a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Pte. Robinson was born in England, but for a long period had been a resident of Peterborough, living just at the east side of the Locks Bridge, where his wife and children still reside. By the sporting fraternity Pte. Robinson will be well remembered by his connection with the Examiner's Lakefield to Peterborough Thanksgiving Day race, in which he invariably was a starter. He lacked the speed of Wilson, Adams, Thorpe, Howard, Smoke and other star contestants and never succeeded in getting better than third place, but he yielded nothing to any of them in gameness, and you could always count upon him finishing. No matter who fell by the wayside it was a safe bet that Geo. Robinson, with his pony-like stride, and cheery grin, would come trotting over the finishing line. He was a starter one year in the famous Hamilton Herald around-the-bay race, and was awarded a special medal.

Baseball fans will also remember Pte. Robinson and hear with sorrow that he is one of the "unreturning brave." His face was a familiar one at Riverside Park during the Canadian League games as for one season he conducted the refreshment privileges at the ball grounds and kept the fans supplied with ice cream cones, peanuts and soft drinks. Always smiling and cheery he made many friends who will unite in expressions of sympathy to the bereaved wife and children.

Pte. Robinson went overseas with the 39th Battalion and after some further training at Sandling Camp was sent to France along with about a dozen other Peterborough boys to reinforce the 25th Nova Scotia Battalion. He was with the same unit as Ptes. Edward Thebeau, Harry Amos and Jack Garrett, three other Peterborough boys recently reported wounded.

PETERBORO' BATTALION RAPIDLY SETTLING DOWN TO THE NEW CAMP LIFE

Little Discomforts of First Few Days Are Disappearing ---Fourth Field Kitchen Has Arrived in Camp---Yesterday Was Pay Day For the 93rd---Some Gossip of Local Recruiting---To-day's Military News.

Special to the Examiner:—

BARRIEFIELD WAR CAMP, June 1.—Peterborough's soldiers are rapidly getting settled down to the routine of camp life and the discomforts of the first couple of days are disappearing especially as the bright sun of the past couple of days has dried up the grounds and made the conditions under foot much more conducive to comfort—It would perhaps have been better under the circumstances if the arrival of all the battalions into camp had been delayed another week, which would have given ample time to make proper arrangements but as it is the camp will soon be in shape and ready for the summer.

The Field Kitchen of the Peterborough battalion have been decidedly useful since the 93rd reached camp The central kitchen of the battalion was not completed and ready for use but with the three field kitchens supplemented with cooking on shallow trenches, Sergt Cook Wride and his staff were able to look after the needs of the inner man. A fourth field kitchen arrived this morning so that the battalion is now fully equipped with these useful travelling "cookeries"

Lt.-Col. Johnstone made a close personal inspection of the battalion this morning, scrutinising every man closely and at its conclusion complimented the men on their clean neat appearance. The battalion were hard at work drilling this morning and to-morrow, Friday morning will with the other units in camp march past Col. Heming, D.O.C. in column of route.

To-day was pay-day for the Peterborough battalion a day late, owing to some of the paymaster's baggage going astray. The usual bright smile that seems a permanent thing on payday was in evidence throughout the 93rd.

Sergt. Mackin has his canteen open and fitted out and is doing excellent business.

Several of the boys are in hospital, the number including Bandmaster Fred Walne who has an injured knee.

The men are all served with their meals in mess time and eat their food where they like. They find this quite a change from the long tables in the armouries.

A number of the advance party including Ptes. Parks, Goggins Black and King to-day on leave for Peterborough.

The many friends of Bandmaster Tom Smith of the 93rd Band will sympathize with him in the loss of his father who died in Peterborough today. Bandmaster Smith has returned to Peterborough for the funeral.

Officers and men shared alike in the little discomforts of the first couple of days. The officers' mess was not completed and it was leaky in spots, However, all ranks took things cheerfully and if there was any complaint among the men. Some one in the advance party would end up saying, "You should have been down here last week".

The recruiting staff left behind by the 93rd Battalion, is doing good work. Among the recruits secured by the 93rd in the last couple of days are Geo. Irwin, the well known barber, A. McColl, who has been an employee of B. F. Ackerman and Co. for the past twenty years, Gordon Elliott, another Ackerman Co. employee, and a brother of Lance Corp. L. Elliott of the 93rd, Fred Doughty, his son William Doughty and T. J. Quinlan, all Peterborough residents. The high reputation already won by the 93rd is having its effect.

Driver A. ("Buster") Leach, who left Peterborough with the 33rd Battery, and who has been invalided home on account of ill health, left to-day for Toronto to report to the military authorities after spending six days leave here. He will be sent to the Gravenhurst Sanitarium for treatment. His legion of friends will wish him a pleasant stay there and a speedy recovery in health.

The list of Peterborough boys who have enlisted in outside units is continually increasing. Among the latest is Sam Mills, son of Lt.-Col. Jos. Mills, and brother of Lieut. Bruce Mills, who has enlisted with the 146th Battalion, Kingston. Another is Wilfred Patterson, son of Mr. Geo. Patterson of this city, who has joined a Saskatchewan Hospital Unit, enlisting in Regina.

The new recruiting rooms at the corner of George and Hunter street are now in full swing and with their catchy window displays and bright posters are attracting considerable attention. In the window a pair of khaki trousers is hung alongside a petticoat and the young man not yet in uniform is reminded that he should don the latter if he does not want to enlist. The new quarters are ideally situated and the recruiting staff is making the best use of them.

Most citizens of Peterborough miss the 93rd and their feelings in this respect is shared by "Jack," the lame collie dog that unofficially attached himself to the battalion a few months ago. "Jack" was a daily visitor at the armouries and dined regularly in the kitchen. Now that the battalion has gone, the collie has joined the recruiting staff and may be seen limping along in the wake of one or other of the men with the red, white and blue rosettes on their caps. "Jack" pays no attention to civilians but will follow a man in khaki anywhere.

The Campbellford News says: Dr. Bonnycastle who left Campbellford a year ago to serve at the front in the Army Medical Corps, returned to Campbellford on Saturday night for a short stay. His many friends were delighted to see the Dr. again, and also pleased to hear of his promotion from the rank of lieutenant to that of captain.

On the expiry of his term in France, he was transferred to the Canadian Corps and expects to leave soon for Valcartier camp, where 45,000 troops will be in training.

The Dr. was tendered an informal banquet by a number of friends on Monday evening.

In the absence from the city of Majors Cameron and Eastwood, Capt. Kennedy, recruiting officer for the Queen's Field Ambulance, has been acting as medical examiner of the recruits for the 93rd Battalion.

It speaks well for the good conduct and gentlemanly behaviour of the 93rd Battalion that although between 500 and 600 men were quartered in the armouries for over six months, the amount of damage done to the building is not worth speaking of, a couple of broken windows being the sum total. When the "clean-up" squad in charge of Lieut. Might is through with its work, the armouries will be as clean and in as good condition as before the 93rd occupied the building.

The wounding of Lieut. Douglas Huycke is only the second casualty reported among the local members of the 33rd Battery. Gunner Fred Eggleton was reported wounded some time ago.

In addition to the 93rd Battalion, 255th Battalion, Queen's Ambulance unit and the 74th Battery, the Cobourg Heavy Battery, which has been called upon to recruit another draft of fifty men for overseas service, is also advertising for recruits in Peterborough. Several local men have joined the Cobourg unit.

A number of the 93rd Battalion who went down to Barriefield with the advance party are home from Kingston on leave.

Word has been received by a relative here that Sergt. Piercy of the 21st Battalion, who, as reported in The Examiner a few days ago, has been wounded, is making good progress in hospital.

Pte. A. E. Bartley, a Peterborough member of the Mounted Rifles, who was officially reported last week as suffering from shell shock, has written home to say that his spine has been effected to some extent as a result. A shell burst close to Pte. Bartley and Pte. Harland Martin, also of Peterborough and both were affected by the concussion, although Pte. Martin has recovered and gone back to the trenches.

Victoria Harbour, June 1.— Armos Arbour, the well-known hockey player, will shortly begin training for the biggest game of his career. He has enlisted in the Victoria Harbour detachment of the 177th Battalion, C.E.F. and will be wearing the King's uniform about June 15th.

Arbour was the sensation of the N. H. A. last winter, and at the end of the season considered one of the most

Jury Is Dissatisfied With Investigation

Inquest Respecting Death of Edward Welsh Was Concluded in Millbrook Last Evening—Interesting Sidelights on the Importation of Beer into the Cavan "Dry Belt."

INQUEST CONCLUDED

MILLBROOK, June 2.—Claiming that the circumstances leading up to the death of Edward Welsh had not been thoroughly investigated, a Coroner's jury last evening brought to a conclusion, the inquest that was held in connection with the tragic death of Edward Welsh, whose badly mutilated body was found last Sunday morning on the bridge crossing the middle road a few yards south of Cavanville. Some interesting evidence concerning the importation of liquor into what is designated as a dry belt on the prohibition map was revealed.

The inquest was to have been held in the undertaking parlours of Wm. J. Gillott, but as many could not gain admission, the hearing was held in the courtroom of the Town Hall Coroner W. W. McKinley of Port Hope, presided. County Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr of Cobourg appeared for the Crown, while Mr. James Kesler and Mr. George Thornton appeared for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

After all the available evidence had been heard the Jury retired, in charge of Constable Raper, and after a few minutes' deliberation, returned the following verdict:

"That Edward Welsh came to his death by being run over on the C.P.R., at the point where he was found, but we find that the circumstances leading up to his death have not been thoroughly investigated."

THE EVIDENCE

The first witness examined by Crown Attorney Kerr was Benjamin Raper.

Ques.—Mr. Raper, you are counties constable and you summoned the jury to appear before Coroner McKinley, and they are all qualified. When did you first see the body?

Ans.—About 10 after 10 a.m. on 28th of May.

Ques.—Where was the body at that time.

Ans.—Lying close beside the bridge of the C.P.R., east side of the bridge, in the Township of Cavan.

Ques.—Was the coroner there at the time?

Ans.—No.

Ques.—Will you describe condition of the body.

Ans.—Body was lying beside track, covered with a sheet. It seemed to be pretty well mangled. I noticed both feet were off and he had a gash in his throat, and back of his head crushed.

Q.—What age was he?

A.—I cannot say, but his brother said 36 years.

Q.—Did he appear to be that age?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you acquainted with the deceased?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever know him to be under the influence of liquor?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What effect did liquor have on him?

A.—It seemed to make him drowsy.

Q.—Did you see his body viewed by the jury?

A.—I did.

Q.—On what day?

A.—On the 29th of May.

Q.—Did you examine the body at any time?

A.—I did.

Q.—What injury did you then find?

A.—I found that he had his left leg cut off about the ankle and the right leg off about the knee, his head was cut, but not out of shape, a small bruise on his left arm and slight bruise on the body.

Q.—Did body appear to you more like a body that had been struck by a train or body that had been run over?

A.—It appeared to me to be run over.

Q.—Did it appear to you to look like a case where a person walking towards or away from the train would be struck?

A.—No.

Q.—A person struck by train would have many bones broken.

Q.—Did you notice whether deceased had been drinking lately?

A.—I have not been with him.

Q.—Where did deceased make his home?

A.—At Mr. Paul's.

Q.—Is Mr. Paul's east or west of where the body was found?

A GRANDFATHER'S CLOCK PRESENTED TO THE I.O.O.F.

Presentation Was Made Last Evening at the Regular Monthly Meeting —A Gift From a Late Member of the Lodge

THE INSCRIPTION

This memorial clock is the gift to Peterborough Lodge No. 111, I.O.O.F., by our late brother Benjamin Cooney, who was a devoted member of the Lodge for 28 years.

Died May 29th, 1915.

Dedicated June 1st, 1916.

The foregoing is the inscription on a magnificent solid mahogany Grandfather's clock with chimes, presented to Peterborough Lodge I.O.O.F. at their regular monthly meeting last night. The presentation was made by Bro. Harry Long, representing the estate in carrying in carrying out the last wishes of the late Bro. Cooney. During all the years that he was a member of Peterborough Lodge he was always an active participant in the affairs of the Order. On Decoration Day the flowers of his beautiful garden were always at the disposal of the Lodge members, and they will be greatly missed in the years to come. The late Bro. Cooney was the oldest Oddfellow in Peterborough.

It was his request to his executors that the presentation be made at the meeting of the Lodge nearest to the first anniversary of his death. The presentation and dedication last night was a very great surprise to the members generally.

Stands Seven Feet High.

The clock stands about seven feet high, and is of very highly polished mahogany. The dial is white, with raised gilt figures. The interior of the clock is equipped with very mellow Westminster chimes. The more one looks at the beautiful piece of workmanship the more he admires it. Many of the members stayed late to listen to the beautiful chiming of the bells, and to express their brotherly thoughts at the magnificence of the gift.

During the dedication services "Nearer My God to Thee" was sung, and at the conclusion, "Blest be the tie that binds."

PEACE CONDITIONS.

Peace depends upon international understandings and undertakings. There can be no lasting peace from any treaty unless all the signatories are honest, will live up to the spirit of the conditions they subscribe to. Germany cannot be depended upon to keep her pledged word. She has shown such utterly bad faith in countless ways, that it would be the height of folly to trust to her word or have any expectation that she would observe any treaty she signs if she had the power, as she would have the will; if her ambition and interests so suggested, to break it. A playful proposal to curtail the power for evil of an undesirable dog is to cut off his tail just behind the ears. A similar means to curb Germany's power from upsetting the peace of the nations, standing near er nations, and setting the world by the ears, is to utterly destroy her power to terrorize and tyrannize over other nations. Germany cannot be trusted as a signatory to any peace treaty so long as she retains the power to outrage its conditions. Germany is, as she has shown herself, false and hypocritical all through. She was preaching peace while under cover of her pretensions she was preparing for the most monstrous and outraging war in the world's history. Her ways are ways of crookedness, and all her paths are war—in her own interests, regardless of all the laws of humanity and human and national rights. In her diplomacy and in all her dealings she has shown herself to be crooked and unworthy of trust. Germany has had her own way for the last time. She had her way in bringing on this war; but she will not have her own way in ending it. The allied champions of the national and human rights, Germany has outraged, will fight on till they have conquered the power to impose the terms of peace that the interests of the world demand. There will be no peace till Germany is deprived of the power to make war and enact outrage of the national autonomy of weaker countries. The snake must be killed, not merely scotched; the fangs must be drawn, not merely filed.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TO-DAY.

To-day is the fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Ridgeway, where the rabble forming the Fenians in raid ing "force" met the ready volunteers of Canada. This battle, or skirmish who not a very brilliant or important one. Its first importance was that it put a stop to the invasion. But its far more important meaning was that it brought out the fighting spirit of young Canada, and showed how eager they all were to rush to the defence of the country. "Rush" is the right word, for on that occasion young men volunteered, not individually, but as regiments and battalions. At the time of the raid the 47th Regulars were stationed in Toronto, occupying the old Parliament buildings, and the site of the Lieutenant Governor's residence. A military school was held there and about fifty cadets were in training to qualify as officers. A Peterborough citizen, who was a member of the class, relates that fifty years ago yesterday the commandant of the school lined up the cadets in line and asked every one who was willing to go to the front to take one pace forward. The whole line took the step as one man. This is mentioned to show the patriotic spirit of the militia forces in 1866. It was not an exception, but an example of what every one of the militia regiments was willing to do, and did do. t was a demonstration that our militia regiments were not mere show forces, but forces that could be depended upon for the defence of the country. The same spirit remains, and has been, and continues to be, splendidly in evidence, till to-day. The young men of Canada have realized that they would be defending their homes as effectively and fully as faithful in the cause of Empire protection and the freedom it represents, by fighting in Europe, as if they were drawn up in arms at any point of our three thousand miles of international frontier, to repel a hostile invader. The fighting spirit is what counts—the spirit that puts loyalty to home and country in action; it is what nerves the arm and inspires the action. The manifestation of that spirit is what the anniversary of the Fenian raid of fifty years gone com

THE MUNICIPAL MILLENNIUM.

We have had the air charged with an aroma of the millenium the past few days, and that has set our thinking that Peterborough would think the municipal millenium had come, if we could rise to, and arrive at, the aesthetic status of St. Thomas, Ontario. In a Conservation journal of recent date there appear pictures of the streets of St. Thomas, showing the presence of blooming flower plots upon the street boulevards. It is to be assumed that the public respect these ornamental features and of their streets. They must do so or there wouldn't be enough left of them to show in a photograph. What would be said in Peterborough to any one proposing to place flower plots in our boulevards? He would be regarded as an absurd idealist. How long before vagrant dogs would root them out? How long before people as conscienceless and disregardful of beauty and the pleasure and rights of others, as the dogs, would steal the bloom, if they did not steal the plants "holus-bolus?"

If we could look to the City Council for leading in this and similar matters, if we could hope for the miracle that a portion of the public would not destroy such ornaments and delights; if we should come to the plane of public sentiment where all our people would be respectful towards public beauty of lawn, grass and flower, we should feel that the municipal millenium had come. We don't expect the authorities to emulate the example of St. Thomas when they won't even level and seed the boulevards on the streets in the west end, which were paved last year. If the city authorities would in these maters, show that they care for these things, the example they would set, the authority behind it, would have its influence upon the public attitude towards the city beautiful that would change and improve conditions to a marvellous degree.

Two of the ministers attending the present conference, who, from the nomadic life of the Methodist minister, see many places, state that they do not know a city in Ontario so plentifully beautified with trees as Peterborough — not even London which is called the "Forest City." We have not to thank the City Councils of the past for a single tree planted on our streets, nor can we thank them for any policy of city adornment. It is the spirit of the mass of the people that has made Peterborough as attractive as it is in summer. It is the bad few, the degenerate remnant, who are the vandals, and who feel encouraged in their vandalism because that they feel that they have no cause to fear the authorities, who, if they have not the taste and will to add to the beauty of the city, will not feel much concern in case of its destruction.

Mrs. John Sweeney, 209½ Hunter Street, has received the following message of condolence from Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence:

Dear Mrs. Sweeney, — Will you kindly accept my sincere sympathy and condolence in the decease of that worthy citizen and heroic soldier, Private Herbert Joseph Sweeney.

While one cannot too deeply mourn the loss of such a brave comrade there is consolation in knowing that he did his duty fearlessly and well and gave his life for the cause of liberty and the upbuilding of the Empire.

Again extending to you my hearty sympathy.

Faithfully,
SAM HUGHES.
Major-General, Minister of Militia and Defence.

The trainings at Barriefield camp will be carried on as before in such a way that the entire syllabus as laid down by headquarters will be gone through by every drilling man in each battalion. The training will of course, be directed from the office of the General Staff Officer at headquarters and each battalion commander will be held responsible that the work is well covered. All are on an equal footing in this regard and the competition should bring good results.

Mrs. I. Darrah has received the following letter from her son, Pte. Dave Darrah, of the Mounted Rifles:

My Dear Mother,—Just a line to let you know I am still alive and well, and hope these few lines will find you and all the rest in the same condition. We are having lovely weather over here at present, and I am sure you must be having the same over there, and I wish I was there to enjoy it; but if we keep on the way we are going I don't think we will have any chance of getting back. I suppose Mrs. Delaney has already had the sad news that her son, Pte. N. E. Darling, was killed in action on May 14. I was not with Norman at the time, but I was sleeping with him three days before he was killed and on May 16th he received a letter from his mother and from you; and one or two other letters. I also received a parcel and Norman and I had a good time that night, eating chocolate, smoking cigars, and writing letters. If I am not mistaken, Norman answered your letter and also his mother's that night. If I were allowed to I could tell you where he was killed. In fact I could tell you the whole story, but I am not allowed to say anything about it. I can assure you that Pte. N. E. Darling was buried with every respect from B Company of the 1st Battalion, Canadian Mounted Rifles. You can give my deepest sympathy to Mrs Darling, and I will write her at my first opportunity.

Among the recruits Capt. Kennedy has secured here for the Queen's Field Ambulance unit are two young probationers in the Methodist Church who have been attending the Bay of Quinte Conference here. The two, Rev. Wm. Mair, of Melrose, in Belleville district, and Rev. Robt. Benson, of Wesley, in Peterborough district, have decided to don the khaki and go overseas with the Queen's units.

PROMISE AND POSSIBILITY OF A NEW DAWN FOR IRELAND

Not for many years has there been such cheering news from Ireland. In that land of strange paradoxes the unexpected is once more taking place. Out of the chaos of an abortive insurrection is emerging a new Ireland. At a time when the fortunes of the Irish national cause appeared dark the magic wand of a Welsh Celt has brought to view hidden depths of sentiment and feeling that make possible the fruition of Ireland's most cherished hope: the union of North and South.

There is a Celtic flavor about the mission of Lloyd George in Ireland which augurs well for the future of that country. At fairs and markets, in private deals of various kinds, and in the arrangement of marriage settlements, a third party is invariably introduced to bridge over the yawning chasm, to "split the difference," and to clinch the bargain. In all transactions of this kind terms are dictated on each side with the knowledge that the result will be a gradual approximation to a final settlement. It is thus the Irishman, be he from Ulster or Munster, sells his horse or cow and sometimes disposes of his daughter's hand in marriage. While each is holding out in the hope of gaining an advantage, a wily diplomat will bring the parties together. A warm handclasp is the only bond. For generations attempts have been made to bring North and South together. But always some fatal impediment to union was raised just as the banns of marriage were being proclaimed.

The way to reconciliation has had to be cleared by fifty years of legislation. The chief obstacles to national unity have been removed by the passing of the Catholic Emancipation Act, Irish Church Disestablishment, Land Purchase, the University Act, and the modification of the Accession Oath of the Sovereign. The bitterness which these controversies aroused in the past defeated every effort to effect a junction of the opposing Irish forces. The final obstacle—the cross-currents of British party politics—has been swept aside with dramatic suddenness. An awakened conscience stirs all parties in Britain following the tragic events of Easter week in Ireland. British statesmen now recognize the truth of Chamberlain's contention in 1893, when he declared: "Our task in Ireland will never be completed until we have enlisted on the side of the English government and people the interest and influence of the bulk of the Irish nation." Nothing but the echoes of past controversies remain to excite distrust between North and South. If Lloyd George succeeds in bringing Unionist and Nationalist together Ireland will never again turn back to the barren wilderness of internecine strife and dissension.

In stepping into the breach as intermediary, Lloyd George is completing his great task as a Liberal reformer in the life of the Asquith regime. With the return of peace the Asquith Government, associated with the rise of Democracy in 1905, will have rounded off a fruitful and memorable period in British history by the settlement of the Irish problem. It is altogether fitting that Mr. Lloyd George is identified so closely with this latest and most hopeful effort to remove the Irish problem from the path of progress as the Empire enters upon a new and uncharted era. As president of the Board of Trade, he visited Belfast in 1907, to urge the claims of Irish Nationalism. From a Liberal platform he invoked the genius of national democracy as the abiding spirit of Irish unity. His message then, delivered with the intense passion of one who was entering on the great task of social reform, and who felt that the inmost soul of the New Liberalism was the creed of oppressed nations and peoples, appeals to-day with unabated force:

"Whatever you do, consult the Irish people. Ascertain Irish opinion. Consult the representatives, North and South—bearing in mind that the Northern democracy is now clothed and in its right mind, and is determined to co-operate in every effort based on the democratic principle of trusting the people and aiming at advancing the happiness and prosperity of all the people."

Comrades in arms in the dogged retreat from Mons, sharing in the glory of Gallipoli and the Balkans, and winning fresh laurels for their country on the immortal plains of Flanders, the men of North and South no longer represent two Irelands, but one. They can feel to-day as they never felt before that

"In fortune and in name we're bound
By stronger links than steel,
And neither can be safe or sound
But in the other's weal."

BRITISH EMPIRE OWES ENORMOUS DEBT TO FOREIGN MISSIONARIES

Rev. Dr. Endicott of the Methodist Mission Board Presents Clear Cut Case For the Maintenance of Missions This Year—Work of Inestimable Value

ADDRESS AT GEORGE STREET CHURCH

The Missionary Anniversary of the Bay of Quinte conference in George Street Methodist church last night was featured by the address on "The Contributions of Foreign Missions to the upbuilding of the British Empire" by Rev. Dr. James Endicott of Toronto, and by the report presented by Mrs. A. W. Grange, representative of the Women's Missionary Society to the conference, in which she sketched the activities of this departure of the church during the past year and appealed for continued and increased support. Mr. T. H. Everson of Oshawa performed the duties of chairman in almost acceptable manner and during the evening the George Street choir displayed its musical powers in solo and choral contributions that were much appreciated.

Dr. Endicott made a preliminary statement of the contributions received by the Missionary Society during the year. Three weeks ago the receipts were $30,000 less than at the corresponding date a year ago. But on Wednesday night, June 1st, they were $7,000 ahead of that date last year. Almost $7,000 had been received up to one week ago, and on June 1st the society was able to report more money in the treasury than it had ever had before. As far as the Bay of Quinte conference was concerned the report of last year compared with that of to-day showed between $1,000 to $1,200 to the good. Reviewing the prospects of missionary givings from the Dominion this year Dr. Endicott states that there would be a deficit from British Columbia where Methodist who had given most generously in former years were now without the means to maintain their record. Some men in that province who had splendidly supported missionary work were now without a dollar. Alberta and Saskatchewan were expected to make increases. Altogether the four western provinces would probably take an aggregate increase of $5,000 this year. But Newfoundland and some parts of Ontario would show decreases.

It is nothing short of amazing the way the churches in all lands have rallied to the cause of God this year. Dr. Endicott mentioned the sacrifices in the Old Country and the magnificent responses of the London, Anglican and Wesleyan churches.

MISSIONS AND THE EMPIRE

But it was in his striking unfolding of the service foreign missionaries had rendered the Empire that Dr. Endicott aroused the greatest enthusiasm. Incidentally his words had the effect of creating a new appreciation of the missionaries, their unsung achievements and accepted sacrifices Dr. Endicott plainly announced the object of his address. During the next year claims on the people would be heavier and more insistent. There will be a tendency to challenge the appeals for aid to foreign missions and men may say that they can't give for patriotic purposes and for the Empire and at the same time give as much to missionaries as they have in the past. It will be a question of whether they will give to the Empire or to missions. And it was an unequivocal answer to this prospective objection that Dr. Endicott made the burden of his address. Because of the inestimable services of foreign missions to the Empire their claims could not be reasonably weighed against the claims of the Empire.

No man is a friend of the Empire who is unfriendly to missions. The object of sending out missionaries is not imperial but solely religious. The missionary's motives are that being a Christian and a servant of God he feels himself a debtor and goes out to pay his debt, to minister to the ends of the earth. That is the elementary reason, but incidentally missions saved the home church. Dr. Endicott said that without foreign missions it was a question whether we would have had a home church by this time. He illustrated this idea by an interesting reference to William Carey, the pioneer of modern missionaries, who couldn't get a passage to India from England, and had to cross to New York and proceed from that port. The church had made an enormous journey since those days nearly one hundred years ago, and foreign missions had saved it from becoming parochial, petty, small and mean and had awakened it to a broader realization of its work.

CHARACTERS OF MISSIONARIES

Missionaries had rendered a conspicuous service to the British Empire because they were the choicest spirits of the church. Dr. Endicott referred to the names that are associated with various countries. Gen. Gordon, Roberts, Kitchener, Cecil Rhodes and other greatly gifted men and associated with Africa and if we were to select one name of our race to stand for Africa it would not be one of these but by universal consent the name of David Livingstone would be selected to represent our civilization, our learning, our character and our religion.

"Go to India and I doubt if the same is not true," Dr. Endicott continued. "I question if you wouldn't make a mistake if the name of one were chosen above William Carey." The same was true of China. God has been very generous to the foreign field. He has given men and women remarkably gifted. They have faced every hardship and difficulty. There are no deeds of heroism to eclipse what the missionaries have manifested.

To-night some missionary is somewhere rendering a service to Great Britain that couldn't be paid for; that couldn't be performed by others. They are of the greatest value to Britain as agents and are even ready to put their services at the disposal of the government. Dr. Endicott cited examples of this service. Besides, from no class had there been such a high percentage of enlistment as from the sons of missionaries. Every son of military age was in khaki, thousands of missionaries and their sons are in the ranks.

Empire building to which foreign missionaries had contributed so much for Britain was dwelt upon at length by the speaker. Where even our missionaries had gone they have been absolutely devoted to the people they entered among. The old imperialist, in foreign lands asked what he could get out of the people, the missionary wonders what he can do for them. Christian missionaries will save us from the infamy of even exploring any people. Dr. Endicott said they were the first to complain of any abuses or wrongs that might be employed in foreign lands. Hence there was no reason whatever for putting the claims of the Empire against the claims of missions. We can make good our case that the British Empire owes a tremendous debt to them of missions. The best men of the Empire acknowledge it gladly. We ought to boast of it. The missionaries in foreign fields have turned potential enemies into friends.

Twin Corner Stones of St. James' Methodist Church Laid Yesterday Afternoon

Event Was Marked By the Presence of a Large Number of Visiting Ministers and Laymen---Church Had Its Inception in 1900 When Fifty-one Persons Worshipped in a Tent---Stirring Addresses.

Another milestone in the history of St. James' Methodist church was reached yesterday afternoon when the twin corner stones of the new edifice were laid in the presence of a large gathering of ministers, laymen and others. The ministers and laymen present, represented a large section of the members of the Bay of Quinte Conference which is being held in George street Methodist church. The first official act of the Rev. M. E. Sexsmith of Picton following his elevation, earlier in the day, to the presidency of the conference, was to give an address at the corner stone laying of St. James' church. The erection of this new edifice at the corner of Aylmer and Romaine streets, was made possible by the magnanimity of the officials and congregation of Trinity Methodist church, who some months ago donated to St. James, the building then known as Charlotte street Methodist church. During the winter months the building was taken down and removed to the present site of St. James' church.

Paved the Way.

The new structure will face on Romaine street. The building at present used by the congregation of St. James' church will be situated at the rear of the new building and will be converted into a Sunday school hall. The whole will provide ample accommodation for the work of St. James' for many years to come. The church, which had its inception in 1908, has had an eventful career.

The Rev. H. M. Manning laid the foundation of the St. James' in 1909, worshipping in a tent at which fifty-one persons were present. A Sunday school was started with an attendance of thirty-nine, which has grown until now its various departments includes over five hundred members. The church membership numbers nearly three hundred members. The Sunday school hall was built in 1912 at a cost of fifteen thousand dollars. The erection of Trinity Methodist church last year paved the way for the trustees and congregation to donate the old Charlotte street church with its entire equipment to the people of St. James.

Twin Corner Stones.

Two corner stones were laid, one by Mr. B. F. Ackerman at the north-west corner of the new structure and the other by Mr. W. G. Morrow at the north-east corner. A box containing the following articles was deposited in the north-west corner stone by Mr. Charles Kitney.

Contents of Box.

A copy of the "Christian Guardian."

A brief history of the church from its inception 1908 to the present
Names of the members of the Quarterly Official Board, the Trustee Board, the Building committee, the Sunday school staff, the officers of the Ladies' Aid Society and the pastor in charge, Rev. B. Greatrix.

A ceremony commenced shortly after four o'clock with a brief address by Rev. Benjamin Greatrix, pastor of St. James' church in which the speaker reviewed the efforts that had been put forth and the gratifying results that had been achieved.

Address by Capt. Kenny.

A stirring address was given by Rev. (Capt.) H. B. Kenny, retiring President of the Bay or Quinte Conference. Capt. Kenny urged his hearers to remember the ideals for which the church stood and to be firm in the faith of the Lord. He congratulated the pastor and congregation of St. James' church for the success that had attended their efforts to meet the needs of the community served by St. James.

This was followed by the presentation of the trowels by Messrs. Alvah Wilson and A. E. Prest to Messrs. W. G. Morrow and B. F. Ackerman respectively. The stones were then declared to be well and truly laid and ddeicated to the church of God.

Mr. D. W. Dumble gave a short address in which he commended the efforts put forth by the people of St. James church. Mr. Dumble referred to George street Methodist church as the pioneer church of the city and recalled some of the successful efforts that were made to establish Charlotte street church and subsequently St. James.

Mr. Dumble was followed by the Rev. M. E. Sexsmith, newly elected president of the Bay of Quinte Conference. The speaker congratulated the congregation of St. James' church for the success that had attended their efforts to enlarge their scope of activity. He exhorted them to make the most of their opportunities and prosecute the good work they had inaugurated.

The ceremony was brought to a close by the rendition of the National Anthem, followed by the Benediction.

Supper was served in the basement of the present St. James' church by the ladies of the congregation.

The Building Committee.

Following is the Building committee:

Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Mr. W. G. Morrow, Mr. Frank Kitney, Mr. Alva Wilson, Mr. J. O. Fife, Mr. Thos. Brown, Mr. Samuel Deyell, Mr. A. E. Prest, Mr. H. C. Robinson, Rev. B. Greatrix, pastor, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Treasurer, Mr. A. Fife, Recording Secretary.

A DECISION GIVEN ON FRIENDLY SUIT

Which Affected An East City Piece of Property

A friendly action of Wright and Fowler, in which the purchaser sought to get a clear title to his Hunter street property, Ashburnham, was decided by Mr. Justice Sutherland in Toronto Wednesday. The judgment reads:

Re Wright and Fowler. — J. G. Smith for executrices, moved for order construing will of John T. Wright, of Peterborough. J. A. MacIntosh for purchaser, F. W. Harcourt, K.C., for children of H. M. Fife.

Judgment: I am of opinion that the will must be construed to give Alice Hamilton Wright a life estate and Harriet Marion Fife an estate in fee simple, subject thereto, and that the two joining in a conveyance of the lands in question can give a good title in fee simple to a purchaser. As no costs are asked there will be no order as to costs."

The presence of the words "or her heirs" instead of "and her heirs" caused the litigation.

Goodwill and Bennett were counsel for the estate.

City Must Pay For Wrong Arrest Policeman Made

MONTREAL, June 2.—The city of Montreal has to pay Jos. Labreche $300 for a wrong arrest made by one of its constables, according to a judgment rendered by Mr. Justice Panneton. The plaintiff was arrested by Constable Bois, since deceased, on a charge laid under the Federal law. Although the city disclaimed any responsibility, it was shown that the constable had previously been at fault in the execution of his duties; and in spite of this fact the city had still kept him in its employ. Mr. Justice Panneton held that the city was responsible for the constable's action in this case, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

ACCIDENT TO MISS EDITH TULLY

Horse Was Frightened by an Automobile—Three Stitches Were Required to Close One of the Cuts

Miss Edith Tully, of Smith Township, met with an accident while driving to the city yesterday. It appears that Miss Tully was met by an automobile which had loaded in it some pumps and steel rods, which frightened the horse Miss Tully was driving and threw her upon a pile of stones near the highway, badly cutting up her face, so that she required the attention of a physician. Three stitches were required to close one of the cuts, and Miss Tully was otherwise very badly shaken up, and her buggy was completely wrecked.

It is expected, however, that Miss Tully will be able to leave her home in the course of a week or ten days.

Had a Picnic At Chemong Park

Yesterday afternoon the Young Ladies Bible Class of St. Paul's enjoyed a picnic at Chemong Park.

There were about 50 in the party which was conveyed from the church to the park in autos.

The afternoon was spent in games, (chiefly a baseball match) gathering wild flowers, etc., and was completed by a dainty lunch about 6:30.

A very enjoyable afternoon was spent and the young ladies desire especially to thank those who drove them to the park, viz: Mrs. E. F. Mason, Mrs. M. Comstock, Mrs. Paul Trebilcock, Mrs. T. Barrie, Miss Reinhardt, and Messrs. S. D. Hall, H. O. Fisher, Dr. Park, Dr. Moir, A. F. Hagerman, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, S. J. Keyes.

Jones—I suppose, merely as a matter of parental duty, I shall have to take that boy to the circus.

Mrs. Jones—But I don't want him to go this year.

Jones—Then I shall have to go alone.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—All honour to the brave boys of the four Peterborough Companies who went to the front just half a century ago to fight for the defence of Canada against the Fenians. However, then, as now, there were a few who did not rise equal to the occasion and accompany their comrades-in-arms. It is pleasing to notice that the survivors of the gallant band still hold their annual re-union in commemoration of that event which constitutes one of the interesting chapters of Canadian history. May they keep it up until the last survivor shall have crossed the bar.

Fired with patriotic enthusiasm, kindled by the wanton invasion of our peaceful shores, three of us set to work and formed a company of our schoolmates who averaged about twenty years of age, for the purpose of offering our services. We drilled diligently under three military instructors, and when we became proficient we sent to Ottawa for our uniform and arms, but to our disappointment we were notified that our services would not be needed, as there were sufficient to repel the invaders. However, we had the satisfaction of knowing that if we had not been soldiers in time of peace we were willing to do our "bit" when the bugle sounded.

Apologising for recalling this episode in that eventful crisis, I am dear sir,

Yours truly,
J. GREEN.

Firemen Have A Workout

During the early hours of the morning the Fire Department had a call to the corner of George and King streets, where a fire was discovered in the rear of the premises at the northwest corner. The fire is said to have originated from a heating vat used in the manufacture of mineral waters. The firemen laid a line of hose, and after about an hour's strenuous work, the fire was extinguished. The interior woodwork was damaged. The damage will be light.

$700,000 Is The Objective This Year For Missionary Work of The Methodist Church

But There Will Be No Cutting Into and No Division of Patriotic Giving—Civic Welcome Yesterday Afternoon—Report of Publication Committee.

OTHER ITEMS FROM CONFERENCE

"We refuse to make an appeal to our people that would seem to cut in to our patriotic giving," said Rev Dr. Endicott of the General Mission Board, Toronto, at this morning's session of the day of Quinte Conference. During the past two years the Board decided to make no expansion that could possibly be avoided No reinforcements are being sent to the mission fields, no buildings erected there. Young men that have wondered whether they should enlist for service in Flanders and France, or for foreign missionary work, were left to decide for themselves but were told that enlistment for military service would be looked upon only with favour. Dr. Endicott said that no appeal for men or money would be made that would even seem to say don't give for patriotic purposes. But it was necessary not only to show loyalty to King George; but also to King Jesus. A man would not prove his loyalty to the one by being disloyal to the other. "We can't possibly get the money we need unless we gird ourselves with new energy and mobilise our resources.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Conference Missionary Committee reported as follows:

Organization, Rev. W. D. Harrison, chairman; Judge Deroche, Secretary.

The total amount raised for missions this year, in all Conferences, was about $630,000. An objective of $700,000 was recommended for next year; also that a determined effort be made in each district to secure an increase of 10 per cent. this year over last year.

That during the coming Conference year special attention be given (1) to a systematic canvas of every congregation in support of the General Missionary Fund; (2) to the introduction of the weekly offering envelope system for missions wherever possible, in all our churches. (3) To careful preparation for special appeals at the time of the missionary anniversary, according to discipline, and that in connection with each Financial District meeting there be held a spiritual and missionary conference, at which adequate consideration be given to the missionary situation within the bounds of the district, and arrangements made for a definite missionary campaign, in which the urgency of the present situation be laid before every congregation.

SYSTEMATIC INSTRUCTION.

In the discussion of this report Rev. R. G. Peever emphasized the importance of systematic missionary instruction in the Sunday Schools.

Major Clarke stated that special instructions ought to go out to strengthen the hands of the pastors that missionary interests may not suffer in these days. The idea was getting abroad that missionary giving could be set aside for patriotic contributions. If this idea prevails the missionary cause will be the first to suffer.

PUBLICATIONS' REPORT.

Rev. Dr. Crews of Toronto, editor of the Young People's publications, (he said he was editor of sixteen separate periodicals) won a round of applause when he reported that although there had been a decrease in last year's business and profits, the same grant of last year to the superannuation fund of $23,000 had been made. Whatever happened, he said the Publishing Committee felt this fund should not suffer in the least.

The Christian Guardian's subscription list numbers 26,075, an increase of 544 for the year. There has been considerable loss however due to the decrease in advertising, which is just about one-half of that of former years. The "Onward" put on 2,610 new subscribers last year, making a total of 109,975. The Sundays School publications have a total issue of 6,854.

Dr. Crews referred to the new Methodist hymn book, now preparing which, he said, the Church would be proud of. He could not definitely state when they would be completed, probably within a year.

PRESIDENTS ELECTED.

The resignation of Capt. Keasy as Chairman of the Cobourg District, was received, and Rev. Dr. Shorey was elected to succeed; Capt. Garbutt's resignation was similarly received, and Rev. W. G. Clarke, Captain and chaplain of the 236th Battalion, Northumberland and Durham was elected to succeed him as chairman of Bowmanville district.

ORGANIZATION OF CONFERENCE.

The complete organization of the Conference is as follows:

General Supt.—Rev. G. D. Chown D. D.

President—Rev. M. E. Sexsmith.

Secretary—Rev. S. T. Tucker.

Asst. Sec.—Rev. M. W. Leigh, B.A.

ALBERT COLLEGE MEN IN KHAKI

One hundred and thirty-five of Albert College's men are on the Empire's honour roll according to the report of Rev. Dr. A. N. Baker, its principal. Dr. Baker said he had been most cordially received in the various districts he had visited last year in the interests of the college. The faculty has been strengthened, if possible, and the evidences of Albert Colleges advantages were shown by the various examination results reported. Dr Baker's report was adopted and as an appreciation of his work Rev. S. C Moore moved, seconded by Rev. S. F. Dixon—a complimentary resolution acknowledging Dr. Baker's successful work.

ENDOWMENT FUND.

F. F. O'Flynn, K.C., Bursar of Albert College, Belleville reported $74,600 already received of the proposed $100,000 ndowment for the college which it was hoped would be completely realized during the coming year.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Rev. S. T. Bartlett, General Secretary of Sunday Schools and Epworth Leagues made an impressive appeal for greater appreciation and support of this important branch of the church work. To obtain a higher ideal of religious education, and to develop this ideal the methods of the workers must be commensurate.

Rev. H. P. Kennedy an old Peterborough boy now on missionary work in the United States was introduced to the conference this morning. He briefly referred to his work and spoke of the importance of the sessions of the conference.

Miss K. Morton, evangelist was also introduced receiving very cordial greeting.

TRIBUTE TO MR. BAMFORTH

At the suggestion of President Sexsmith, the conference paid a nice tribute to Rev. R. Bamforth when on a motion by Rev. H. H. Goring, seconded by Major W. G. Clarke he was requested to take a place on the platform as an evidence of "our deep regard for him as a devoted servant of God and a faithful brother."

CIVIC WELCOME

Rev. R. G. Peever introduced yesterday afternoon a delegation from the City Council composed of Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Dobbin, Stratton, McIntyre and Weir, who presented to the conference Peterborough's heartiest welcome and good wishes. Mayor Duffus was introduced as a good Christian, Roman Catholic gentleman. On behalf of the city he conveyed the warmest greetings, a cordial welcome and the earnest hope that the conference would be fraught with a full realization of its aims and objective. Of Peterborough's clergy, Mayor Duffus said he had a high regard. He had personally received many kindnesses at their hands! Of the success of their work, the results were apparent. In recruiting, they had given of themselves all they had and materially assisted in enlisting Peterborough's splendid battalion. The fact that no regiment was morally better than the 93rd spoke volumes for the work of Peterborough's ministry.

The Mayor made a reference to the necessity and desirability of unity at this time. He called upon Ald Dobbin to present an immense key that would open any and every door in Peterborough to the members of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

The civic key was of prodigious dimensions. It was of wood and nearly as tall as Ald Dobbin who made a few pertinent remarks appropriate to the occasion.

PRESIDENTS REPLY

The city fathers had been warmly received and it remained for President Sexsmith to express the appreciation of the conference of the welcome Peterborough had extended. It was a necessarily large key because it represented this city's love and largeness of heart. He referred to the manly and generous spirit the Mayor had shown in his remarks and stated supported in the fullest measure the idea that we must be specially united at this time. The men at the front are standing shoulder to shoulder and at home we should get just as closely together.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Rev. Mr. Grelis, Rev. J. R. Gall of Gilmour street and Rev. Robt Pagan welcomed the conference on behalf of the ministerial Association and likewise drew a hearty response for the visiting ministers and clergy.

visibility," which probably means that the British ships were caught square on the glow of sunset and made great targets for the Germans, who had the failing light at their backs.

PARIS (French Official Communique), June 2.—A pitched battle between German and French aeroplane squadrons in which two enemy machines were brought down, was reported to-day. One German machine was so badly damaged by the fire from French aeroplanes that it fell near Etaine. Two other French machines attacked the Fokker, and by circulating constantly closer to the enemy aircraft forced it down, and finally riddled it with bullets. It fell near Bouconville.

By a violent infantry attack French troops progressed 1,000 yards into German trenches south of Caurette Wood. The German attack between Caurette Wood and Cumieres was checked by a curtain of fire.

On the right bank o. the Meuse an extremely violent battle went on all day from Thiaumont Farm to Vaux.

Southeast of Douaumont fort the Germans penetrated into the southern part of Caillette Wood, and also made progress on the shore of Vaux Pond.

At all other points along the line the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses. Douaumont, already subjected to the explosions of thousands of shells, was again under fierce artillery fire.

Basis of Agreement Has Been Arrived At

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, June 2.—The Evening Standard makes the statement that a basis of agreement has been arrived at for the settlement of the Irish question, that the proposed Irish Parliament will be set up immediately, Ulster being excluded.

The Parliament, this newspaper says, will be made up of the present Irish representatives in the British Parliament.

Kitchener Cheered By the Commoners

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 2.—Lord Kitchener was cheered to the echo to-day when he arrived in Committee Room 14 of the House of Commons to give the members a chance to question him on the status of the war.

The visit was announced several days ago by Premier Asquith as a result of Churchill's attack. More than 200 members packed the Committee room.

Lord Kitchener made a brief speech and then for two hours answered the questions fired at him. Many of the members took part in the heckling. The Press was barred from the committee room in which the meeting was held.

50 of the 93rd Volunteer For The Pioneers

Special to The Examiner:

The following wire has been received from Capt. J. H. Burnham this afternoon:

"An officer from Ottawa, at a muster parade, asked for volunteers for a pioneer battalion, sailing June 14, hurriedly called for by Britain. Fifty of the 93rd have volunteered. Send us recruits to make up. I volunteered for the pay department, but am not needed yet. It is an honour for a battalion to help at any time and in any way.—J. H. Burnham."

ALGONQUIN PARK.

Just the out-of-the-way sort of place that appeals to the lover of God's out-of-doors, and to those who desire to get away from the worries of business. Two thousand feet above sea level—the highest point in the Province of Ontario—the air is pure and bracing and the nights cool. Splendid hotel accommodation at the "Highland Inn" at Algonquin Park Station, or at the novel log cabin camps on Smoke Lake and Island Lake. City conveniences in a delightful wilderness. There are 1,000 lakes and rivers in Algonquin Park and unlimited opportunities are afforded to the angler, camper and canoeist in its confines of 1,730,000 acres. The Doctor

The average man will give an Attorney from $3,000 to $5,000 together with the life time of praise to keep him out of the penitentiary for from two to ten years, yet at the same time will raise a phosphorescent glow and a kick that can be heard around the world, if the doctor charges him $50 or $100 to keep him out of hell for a lifetime. AT THE OVAL SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

St. Andrew's Tennis Club and the George Street Club have arranged for a friendly tournament in mixed doubles at Nicholls Oval to-morrow afternoon. All players who wish to take part in the tournament should be at the grounds not later than 3 p m. Any details may be secured by 'phoning Mr. Walton, at 1521 or J. E. Smith, at 606. The games will be arranged so that all players from each of the clubs will be able to participate.

Q.—You would think the engineer would know?
A.—I have never known of anyone standing up being killed without the engineer knowing it.

University Club Formed

New Organization Consists of Graduates From English and Canadian Universities

A score of University graduates and fellow-students met last night and decided upon carrying the University spirit with them while following their regular vocation in life. Both English and Canadian Universities were represented at this gathering, and these boys have been placed here on the manufacture and inspection of munitions in the past six months.

A vote was taken, and everybody present was unanimously in favour of forming a club. From that time on the old college feeling of a reunion burst forth, wafting itself away as it mingled with the cloud of mild tobacco, which at times became so dense as to remind our representatives of Oxford and Cambridge of a real London fog.

By the deciding vote of the chairman, the name "University Club" was chosen in preference to "Varsity Club." The following officers were elected:

President—T. Dearden.
Vice-President—W. Powell.
Secretary—L. Badgley.
Treasurer—R. MacLaren.

It was carried that a committee be selected from time to time from members of the club to arrange tennis tournaments, motor parties, picnics, motor boat outings, dinners, etc. That the membership fee be left over until the next meeting, and that the number of members be limited to 20.

The University Club intend to open up a club-rooms here, and will welcome any University man who comes to this city as a stranger. It is their intention to secure a list of suitable rooming and boarding houses and to help the University men in every way by making them feel that they have friends in their fellow students and graduates.

THE GERMAN FLEET IS FORCED TO RETURN

SEVEN GERMAN SHIPS HAVE BEEN ACCOUNTED FOR

LOST SHIPS HAVE BEEN REPLACED BY THE BRITISH

In Confirming the Loss of Several Battleships the British Authorities State That the German Fleet Has Been Driven Back to Their Base---Activity of the Enemy is Construed As An Attempt to Break Out Into the Atlantic and Menace Shipping.

SUNK WHILE IN TOW

LONDON, June 3.—Latest official statements admit the loss of eleven warships of the British High Seas Fleet with six others missing. Between six thousand and seven thousand British seamen lost their lives. German losses according to the British statement, were about half these. The German fleet was apparently driven back to its base. The British cruiser "Warrior" was sunk while returning to the base in tow. British Admiralty assures the British people that other ships have taken the place of the lost, and there is no danger of the Germans breaking out. It was evidently the intention of the Germans to bombard the British east coasts or sink Canadian transports in the Atlantic. Zeppelins took a prominent part in the action.

NEWS CALMLY RECEIVED.

LONDON, June 3.—News of the Skagerack naval battle was calmly received by the British people. There is a general feeling that though the losses were heavy, they were necessary to stop the dash for the open sea of the strong German squadron.

ATTACKS WERE REPULSED.

PARIS, June 3.—Germans making concerted attacks all along the line were repulsed at all points.

LONDON, June 3.—Later British statement says that the German Dreadnought Derfflinger or Lutzow, of 26,600 tons, was sunk in Wednesday's naval engagement, making seven German ships in all that were lost. The main british battleship fleet was not engaged, as the Germans retreated to Heligoland when it appeared. Neutral merchantmen report this morning htat the British pursued the Germans to within a few miles of their own port, where the British were stopped by mines.

LOSSES MUST BE EXPECTED.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 3.—Captain Guiness, who is here recruiting for the British navy, says battles must be expected, and heavy losses too, as the German fleet will eventually make a desperate attempt to get out.

ATTEMPTED AN ENTERPRISE.

LONDON, June 3.—German official statement admits that the Germans were attempting "an enterprise to the northward," and were stopped by the British.

DETECTIVE ONLY FEIGNED DRUNKENNESS

LINDSAY, June 3.—The Ontario Licenses Board has made up its mind regarding the case of Alexander Coorian, the detective who went to Omington to round up "blind pigs" was subsequently convicted and fined by a Magistrate on a charge of drunkenness. From information which the License Board obtained, any drunkenness Coorian took was to carry out successfully his mission as a detective and the board also hold the view, as the result of what has been stated to them, that Coorian was pretending drunkenness.

STINGING NEURALGIA

The Trouble Due to Nerves Starved For Lack of Good Blood

An eminent medical writer has said that "neuralgia is the cry of starved nerves for better blood." The one great symptom of this trouble is pain, fierce, stabbing pain, that almost drives the sufferer frantic. The one cause is poor blood; the only cure is to enrich the blood. Heat applied to the inflamed nerves will give relief, but does not cure. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills furnish the blood all the needed elements, and the blood conveys them to the nerves. The only way of getting food or medicine to the nerves is through the blood, and the only way to reach the blood is through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In this way neuralgia, sciatica and other nerve disorders are promptly cured, and the whole system benefited and strengthened. Mrs. M. Gleason, R. R. No. 1, Uxbridge, Ont., who was a great sufferer from neuralgia, says: "I suffered intensely from neuralgia for four years. My blood was thin and I was completely run down. I suffered intense pain all the time. At different times I consulted three doctors, but their treatment did no more than give me temporary relief. Then I tried different medicines, but the result was the same—they seemed no good in my case. I was growing steadily worse, and finally could not leave the house nor do a bit of work. The last doctor I consulted could no nothing for me but give me morphine tablets to ease the pain, and by this time I had about resigned myself to a life of pain. Then one of Dr. Williams' almanacs came to our house and I read of similar cases cured through the use of Pink Pills. I got three boxes and before they were all gone the pain began to decrease, and I began to have a better appetite. By the time I had taken six boxes I was again a well woman, and my neighbours could hardly realize that such a change could be made in so short a time. Later I was bothered with eczema and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me. I have found these Pills worth their weight in gold and I cheerfully recommend them to all who are ailing."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ASKS WHY ESSEN IS IMMUNE.

British Interest in Firms There Suggested as the Reason.

The London Times, in a recent issue, reporting the House of Commons proceedings, says:

Mr. Balfour, replying to Mr. Ginnell, who asked if he would explain why Essen had been immune from attack by British aircraft, said: "I do not think it would be desirable to discuss military operations — actual or possible — by question and answer."

"Has the immunity of Essen any connection with the financial interest in subsidiary firms held by members of the British Government?" Mr. Ginnell asked.

No answer was given.

France Will Award Diploma of Honour to Families of War Victims

"In the French Journal Officiel of May 1 a decree is promulgated according to which a diploma of honour will be awarded to the families of officers, soldiers and sailors who have died in the service of their country since the beginning of the war.

"When this law was before the Chamber of Deputies," says a writer in the Paris Temps, "a member took occasion to express the hope that this diploma would be distributed with more discrimination than was the War Cross shortly after its institution. And nobody seemed to realize that the condition of death for obtaining a diploma obviously extended the possibility of favoritism in the distribution.

"As to the War Cross, this decoration has perhaps been lavished too generously on officers who never have been away from general headquarters or whose duties keep them always in the rear, but whom the authorities wished to distinguish, just the same, for some reason. Yet whose fault is it if any abuses have occurred? Mr. Millerand's instructions were that the decoration should be bestowed on officers, sub-officers and soldiers who had been mentioned in the order of the day of the army, and this provision was subsequently extended also to the divisional, brigade, and regimental orders of the day, whereby making abuse possible, if not directly provoking it.

"However, it should rather be stated that the distinctions of the War Cross have been conferred on altogether too few persons, and that those deserving from among the multitude of heroic soldiers whose deeds of valor most often are left unrecognised.

"In the remarks of the Deputy referred to is traced a spirit of excessive criticism, which is met with quite often these days. There are people who would even go to the length of asserting that death itself on the battle field is no proof of courage, since it might be the result of an accident or occur in the course of a precipitous retreat. But it was not by hiding or turning tail that our armies became victorious on the Marne and the Yser or that they have been able to withstand the flower of Germany's armies at Verdun these last months.

"When all mankind is proud of valiant France it is a shame to raise suspicions and disgruntled complaints or to listen to such here at home. Those who do so will have good cause for remorse later on. They will feel it especially when in visiting French homes in the future—alas! too many of them—they will recognize in a place of honour the significant diploma, To the dead in the great war, from their grateful country. Alongside of it they may many times find a cross of merit earned by an ancestor of the family during the First Republic or maybe an officer's commission signed by the First Consul—patents of nobility, indeed, which surpass any pretentious titles ad aristocratic distinctions, because they do not signify a spirit of conquest or desire of material gain, but a championship of liberty, a dis-interested heroism, a sacrifice for the triumph of a just cause."

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

BEES ROUT CONSTABLE.

Force Him to Retreat Before Serving Attachment Writ.

Constable J. A. Rivera, of Redlands township, Cal., went to the Santa Anna River "wash" to attach property in a case in which Louis S. Fletcher is the plaintiff. Mr. Rivera did not attach the property, for before he had a chance to do so the property attached him. The property consists largely of bees, and Constable Rivera was severely stung.

The owner of the apiary had been working among the bees, and had them stirred up to a fighting point. He was covered with mosquito netting, and when Constable Rivera announced he proposed to attach the property the owner shouted, "Come ahead!"

The constable was not protected, and the bees considered him easy prey. The constable retreated, but he now proposes to visit the apiary at night, stop up the hives, and so remove the stands when the bees are helpless.

Butter in the Duchy's Control

LUXEMBURG AUTHORITIES ALLOW PRODUCERS 44 CENTS A POUND.

All butter produced in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg must pass through the hands of the Government Central Buying and Distributing Committee, which regulates the price and undertakes to furnish every community with the quantity required, according to a report printed in the Frankfurter Zeitung of Feb. 15th.

The producers get 44 cents a pound for home-made butter and 46 cents for that made by creameries, which is resold by the Central Committee at 46 and 49 cents, respectively. The communities, in their turn, are allowed to add necessary expenses to the ultimate retail prices.

Dairies are forbidden to supply their employees with more than one-third of a pound of butter a week for each member of their families. The correspondent adds that under these circumstances the export of butter is impossible, but he does not say whether these regulations are due to the German occupation.

Doctor Says Phosphorus and Iron Makes Your Nerves 200% Stronger in Ten Days

Iron For Your Blood and Phosphorus For Your Nerves, Make You 200 p.c. Stronger in 10 Days.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, Specialist, of this city, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron, and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food simply passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation people become generally weakened, nervous, and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at nights; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless; but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your lagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of worse ills later on. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Bonised Phosphorus with Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous wrecks and run down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance, and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, blues and other troubles in from ten to fifteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in pale cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth, and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—Bonised Phosphorus with Iron recommended here, is not a patent medicine nor a secret remedy, but one which is widely known by both doctors and druggists who will tell you that one dozen of this newer form of iron is worth a whole bottle of some medicines. It is dispensed in this city by T. C. Watson two doses at 50 cents a box.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

(To be continued.)

One ambitious man hazards his opinion (and he is one who ought to know) that a fishing schooner has done her eighteen knots or upward for numerous individual hours, for fishermen even on record passages, fail to haul the log sometimes for half a day at a time.

Schofield however took occasion to have the log hauled for one especially squally mile, and the figures showed that the Lass had covered fifteen knots in the hour—seventeen and a half land miles.

She was booming along now, seeming to leap from one great crest to the next like a giant projectile driven by some irresistible force. She was canted at such an agle that her lee rail was invisible under the boiling white, and her deck planks seemed a part of the sea.

The course was almost exactly southwest, and the first day the Lass roared down the Atlantic, passing the wide mouth of Cabot Strait that leads between Newfoundland and Nova Scotia into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. They passed one of the Quebec and Montreal liners and took pleasure in shooting the schooner under her flaring bows.

The next morning at seven, twenty-four hours out, found them three hundred and fifty miles on their course, but what was better than all, showed three sails ahead. Then did the crew of the Charming Lass rejoice, climbing into the spray-lashed rigging, and yelling wildly against the tumult of the waters.

Nor did the wind subside. It had gone to forty-five miles an hour overnight and in land locked harbors the shippers of big steel passenger vessels shook their heads and refused to venture out in the gale.

At full as could be judged, the Nettie B., Rosan and Herring Bone were nearly on even terms, twenty miles ahead, all with every stitch set, and flying like leaves before a wind.

"Bend on balloon jib!" snapped Schofield when he had considered that task before him. Pete ran joyfully to execute the order, but some of the men hesitated.

"Up with her!" roared Pete, and up she went, a great concave hollow of white like the half of a pear. The Lass's head went down, and now, instead of attempting to go over the waves, she went through them without argument.

Tons of divided water crashed down upon her decks and roared off over the rails, the men at the wheel were never less than knee-deep. The sheets strained, the timbers creaked, and the sails roared, and back of all were the wind and the North Atlantic in hot pursuit.

By noon it could be seen that the three vessels ahead were beginning to come back, but with terrible slowness. Code, lashed in the weather rigging studied them for more than an hour through his glasses. Then he leaped to the deck.

"Hell's bells! No wonder we can't catch 'em! Burns has got stays'ls set and I think Tanner has, too. Could not see Martin. Set stays'l, all hands!"

At every rail her sheerpoles were buried, and it seemed an open question whether she would ever come up or not. It was at this time that Tip O'Neil, a daring young buck of Freekirk Head, performed the highly dangerous feat of walking from her main to her fore rigging along the weather run, which fact shows there was foothold on her uppermost side for a man crazy enough to desire it.

That Ellinwood and the daring Jim-nie Douglas were thoroughly in accord with Schofield's preposterous sail-carrying was a foregone conclusion. But others of the crew were not of the same mind. An hour more here or there seemed a small matter to them as compared to the chance of drowning and leaving a family unprotected and unprovided for.

Schofield sensed this feeling immediately it had manifested itself, and he called his lieutenants to him. He wished to provide against interference.

"House the halyards aloft!" he commanded, and at this even those two daring souls stood aghast for it meant that whatever the emergency no sail could be taken off the Charming Lass. With the end of the halyards aloft no man could reach them in time to avert a catastrophe.

"You're sure drivin' her, skipper!" roared Pete in amazed admiration. "Up them halyards, go. Oh, Lord, but she's a dog, an' she'll stand it."

So up the halyards went, and with them went a warning that whoever jumped to loosen them would get a gaff-hook in his breeches and be hauled down ignominiously.

This time when the log was hauled for the hour from three to four in the afternoon it showed a total of seventeen knots, or a fraction under twenty miles for the hour. And best of all the three flying schooners had come back five miles. By ten o'clock that night Code judged that they had come back five more, and knew that the next day would bring the test.

They were not in over-deep water here, for the coast of Nova Scotia is extended for miles out under the sea in excellent fishing shoals and banks.

At Artimon Bank they switched their course to the westward so as to pass inside of Sable Island and round Cape Sable in the shoalest water possible. Down across Western they roared, and almost to LeHave before midnight came.

Now it is one thing to sail like the Flying Dutchman with the sun up and one's eyes to use, but it is another to career through the night without taking in a stitch of canvas, trusting to luck and the Providence that watches over fishermen that the compass is good and that no blundering coasters will get in the way.

When dawn broke wild and dirty, the Charming Lass was reeling through the water less than a quarter of a mile astern of the Rosan and the Herring Bone. Through the murk Code could see the Nettie B. three miles ahead.

An hour and she had drawn abreast of her two rivals; another hour and she had left them astern. Day had fully broke now, and Code, grinning over his shoulder at the defeated schooners, gave a cry of surprise. For no longer were there two only. Another, plunging through the mist, had come into view; far back she was, but carrying a spread of canvas that gave indications enough of her speed.

But Code spent little time looking back. He gripped the wheel, set his teeth, and urged the Lass forward after the Nettie with every faculty of his power. After that terrible night the crew had lost their fear and worked with enthusiasm.

Some hands were always at the pumps, when they could be worked, for besides the drills from the leaky gathering below, Code feared the vessel had spewed some oakum and was taking a little water forward. Now, too, the horrible stench of riled bilge-water floated over all—compared to which an aged egg is a bouquet of roses.

At eight o'clock that morning they rounded Cape Sable at the tip of Nova Scotia, and laid a course a trifle west of north for the final beat home. There was a hundred miles to go, and Burns still held his three mile lead.

By heroic and loaded only with ballast, the Nettie was a better sailer in a beating game, for she was older and heavier than the Charming Lass. But now she had but a thousand quintal of fish compared to the sixteen hundred of her rival. This difference gave the Lass much needed stability, without which she never could have hoped to win from the Burns schooner.

The two were, therefore, about equally matched, and it was evident that the contest would resolve itself into one of sail-carrying, seamanship and nerve.

"That other feller's comin' up fast," said Pete Ellinwood, and Code looked back to see the strange schooner looming larger and larger in his wake. He knew that no vessel in the Grande Mignon fleet could ever have caught the Lass this way he had been driving her, and yet she was not enough for him to get a good view of her.

"If she's a fisherman," said Code, "I'll pull the Lass out of the water before she beats us in."

It was killing work, the last beat home.

"Hard-a-lee!" would ring the command and some men would go down into the scuther of the lee-rail and haul in or slack away sheets, while others at the mastheads would shift top and stay sail tacks.

Her head would swing, there would be a minute of thrashing and roaring of gear, and the gale would leap into her sails and bend her down on her side again. Then away she would go.

The station of those on deck was a good two-handed grip on the ringbolts under the weather-rail, where, to great way the slope of the deck, they clung desperately for fear of sliding down and into the swirling torrent.

Hour after hour the Nettie and the Lass fought it out and hour after hour the gale increased. Hurricane warnings had been issued all along the coast, and not a vessel ventured out, but these staunch fishing vessels cared not a whit.

It was evident, however, that something must give. Human ingenuity had not constructed a vessel that could stand such driving. Even Pete Ellinwood began to lose his heartiness as the Lass went down and stayed down longer with each vicious squall.

"Shut up, Pete!" said Code when the mate started to speak. "No sail comes off but what blows off, and while there's all sail on the Nettie I carry all sail if I heave her down for it. Watch him, he'll break. Burns is yellow."

The words were a prophecy. He had hardly uttered them when down came the great balloon jib of the Nettie B. At once the Lass began to gain in great leaps and bounds. They were fifty miles from home and two miles only separated them.

But fortune had not finished with Code. Half an hour later there came a great sound of tearing like the volley of small arms, and the Lass's balloon jib ripped loose and soared to heaven like some gigantic wounded bird.

"Let it go, curse it," growled Code. "Anyway, I didn't take it down."

The loss of her big jib was the only thing that saved the Lass from being hove down completely, for two hours later the gale had reached its height and she was laboring like a drunken man under her staysail, topsail and four lowers.

Twenty miles from home and the two schooners were abreast, tacking together on the long leeward reaches and the short windward ones, as they made across the Bay of Fundy.

"Look at her comin' like a race-horse!" cried Ellinwood again, and this time Code recognized the vessel that was pursuing them. It was the mystery schooner, and in all his life at sea Code had never seen a vessel fly as that one was flying then.

"Wonder what she's up to now?" he asked vaguely. But he gave no further thought to the matter, for the Nettie B. claimed all his attention. Suddenly from between the masts of the Burns schooner a great flutter of white appeared as though some one had hung a white sheet from her stay.

"Ha, I told you he was yellow!" shouted Code in glee. "Somebody's cut away one edge of the stays'l. Now we've got 'em!"

And they had; for within a quarter of an hour they left the Nettie B. astern, finally defeated, Nat Burns' last set of treachery gone for nothing.

But the mystery schooner could not be denied. Though the Lass made her seventeen knots, the wonderful Mallaby schooner did her twenty, with everything spread in that gale; and when the white lighthouse of Swallow-tail Point was in plain sight through the murk, she swept by like a magnificent racer and beat the Charming Lass to moorings by twenty minutes.

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McIlwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Hand Feeding Baby

Troubles and Failures.

Some of the causes of these can well be guarded against. Ordinary cows milk is contaminating—it contains too much indigestible curds, too little milk sugar, and is generally acid. To correct these faults it must be modified, and as with nearly all the foods are indigestible. Consider these points, and when selecting an alternative to the natural food make sure it closely resembles mother's milk. Physicians' Dietary is most valuable.

Condensed Milk, as usually given, errs in that it contains too little cream, and has large quantities of preservative sugar added, and as with cows milk the curds are indigestible. Consider these points, and when selecting an alternative to the natural food make sure it closely resembles mother's milk. Physicians' Dietary is most valuable.

Simplicity and Success

When baby is very young or delicate he should be given the 'Allenburys' Milk Food No. 1. This food is identical in composition with maternal milk, and can, if necessary, be given alternately, so alike are the natural and the prepared food in this instance. It is pure, completely nourishing and digestible.

After three months the Milk Food No. 2 follows. This food can be adopted at this age if breast feeding has ceased, or in place of other substitutes which it is desired to discontinue. The Food No. 2 contains all the essential additions to form bone, nerve and muscle.

When a farinaceous food can be given the Allenburys' Malted Food No. 3 provides what is necessary in an ideal form.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REESOR

NOSTALGIA.—Do you know that "homesickness" is classed as a disease under the name of Nostalgia. Well, if you want to verify the fact just look in the dictionary, possibly you might have to go to the doctor's office and examine a medical dictionary where you would also find that a high degree of Nostalgia or homesickness is called Nostamania.

There is a certain instinct born with us that makes us love and desire to remain at or near the place we call home. In some the desire is great, in others it is so feeble that it is hardly felt.

Several years ago I was in a company of gentlemen in Baltimore, Maryland, and a discussion of the merits of various localities became quite spirited. The average Baltimorean will draw himself up to his full height and tell you with a flourish of pride that he is "to the manor born." I have never asked one of them just what he means by that expression, but he means it all right, and if you transplant him after middle life he suffers with Nostalgia. One of the men present at that time had been born and reared in Virginia where the pride of ancestry and home is even greater than in Maryland. He had been in business in Baltimore for several years, but when asked where he liked best to live he said, "I would rather be at home in old Virginia if I had to live on peanuts than anywhere else on the earth with every luxury you could name." He remained in Baltimore, however, for the sake of his children and the schools. I wonder how many children every fully appreciate the sacrifice of their parents.

The Agricultural Department at Washington sent out 55,000 letters to people living in the rural districts, mostly farmers' wives, seeking information about the home life and surroundings. Loneliness was the one great cry. Isolation and the lack of social and educational opportunities cause homesickness for young wives In many cases they are kept so busy from daylight to dark that there is but little time for brooding, but in time the loneliness and homesickness tells and the young wife droops and fails in health. The family doctor can find no symptoms of disease and in many cases may brutally call it lazziness.

I have seen some desperate cases of Nostalgia, some of which have been quite easily cured by a brief return to the old home where the surroundings are seldom what are pictured by one that has been away for a long time The young wife is nearly always cured and eager to return to the new home and her husband, after a two or three weeks stay in the old home.

The telephone, the automobile and the social centres now being established by the Agricultural Department, will in time make country life much more attractive and livable than it has been in the past.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if the same are addressed to 'Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with four cents postage.

Dear Doctor: I have a friend who like myself works in the harvest field of the Canadian West. He dreams every night. What is the reason? He is big, strong, and so far as I know, in good health. Can a hearty supper or a hard bed have anything to do with it?

Why does a person feel more tired in the morning when he gets up than in the evening when he goes to bed after a hard day's work? Tell us the cause of foul breath and a coated tongue. Is it the fault of the muscles that the wrists ache? It is very hard for me to go to sleep in the evening; though I am very tired and work hard. Please tell me what a person ought to eat to gain strength. Do you consider electric belts helpful in certain diseases? Several people I know have been benefitted by their use. Last year I bought Volume 2. I loaned it to a friend and cannot get it back again. What is the price of the new book? I value your lectures, and it would be a pleasure to meet you personally at some time.—J. G.

Answer: Undoubtedly it is too much supper that is responsible for the dreams in your friend's case. Tell him to eat only a few easily digested foods such as milk, bread and butter and a little fruit, and he will soon stop the dreaming. He should wait at least three hours after eating before going to bed.

Nervous disorders, eye strain, stricture of the sphincters, phimosis, etc., are often followed by such symptoms as tiredness in the morning. Indigestion constipation, liver and kidney troubles as well as other ailments, may cause similar symptoms. Four breath may be due to many causes. Catarrh, decayed teeth, constipation, indigestion, liver derangements, worms, can all be held responsible for it. When the tongue is coated it shows that the digestive or eliminating organs are inactive. It also happens quite frequently in the case of fever. Certain waste matters are present in the alimentary canal and the involved organs cannot remove them without help. The tongue is a true barometer of the condition of the alimentary canal. If the tongue is coated there is a large amount of waste matter present; if it is clear the alimentary canal is also clear.

When working hard it happens that the wrists ache, and especially so in harvest time when they as a rule are strained considerably. After a hard day's work be it physical or mental, you are likely to be restless and unable to sleep at all. This is due to overworked nerves. It is not say to tell what diet a person should follow in order to gain strength. Give me details concerning the case in question, and I shall gladly make suitable suggestions. In some cases cereals are best, in others fruits, vegetables, nuts, etc., and in a third case, lean meats, milk, etc. Each individual case requires almost invariably individual attention.

I do not consider electric belts as valuable as their manufacturers maintain. Electricity has mostly a stimulating influence on the system. The fact that there are some who appear to been benefitted by the use of electric belts shows that they were in need of wet more than a stimulant. The price of the Vol. 2 is $3 as before. The supply of the last edition of the book is getting low but there are a few hundred left yet. The Vol. 1 costs 1 and by purchasing same you are entitled to a certificate of membership in the Home Health Club.

TWO IRISH MOTHERS.

"Mother, I hear the bugle's voice,
The roar of throbbing drums—
And I hear a struggling Country call
To all her fighting sons."

"By the blood of an ancient race
And the pride of an ancient name,
I would not have thee bide at home
Though my heart should break in twain."

That night I heard the banshee wail—
The night he marched away—
My eldest son, my gallant lad,
Through lanes all sweet with May.

They have brought a bright blade home!
O Mother Mary, ease my pain!
Far in an alien land he lies
Who ne'er will come again!

* * * * *

"Mother, I hear a mystic voice
Whispering imperiously:
'Arise and cast the Tyrant off—
Thus Erin shall be free!'"

"My son, my son, my only son,
'Tis the voice of death and shame,
That strives to lure thee from the love
Of loyalty's fair name."

Again, again the banshee wails!
God, have pity! pity and save
The soul of one who passed to-night—
Who fills a traitor's grave!

New York, June 1.

Quite as important as the June bride just as daintily dressed in misty white and her future is equally as promising.

It is no longer considered the proper thing for the graduate to be elaborately dressed in silk or satin; many of the dainties frocks are fashioned by the graduate herself, from the sheer voiles, organdies, nets, or from the dainty flouncings of lace or embroidery. The high schools favor the idea of the graduate fashioning her own dress; some go as far as to suggest the material and the cut for the entire class. Perhaps this does not appeal to the average girl, with her ideas of individuality, but the notion of making her own frock should appeal to her for this very reason, that she may add little distinctive touches which bring out her own personality.

SIMPLICITY IN CUT AND MATERIAL.

The very simplest, most youthful models are chosen for the June graduate. They are usually of organdy, or one of the sheer cottons, very sparingly and simply trimmed. Crepe de Chine or one of the very soft taffetas or satins may also be used, if preferred, but the cottons are more in vogue and daintier.

Commencement Frock of Voile.

Net, which is such a general favorite for the trypical summer dress, is quite as well liked for the graduation dress and proves extremely practical. White cotton net, combined with taffeta, voile, or organdy, fashions the daintiest of graduation frocks; one which may be worn later for summer afternoons, or the dance.

Skirts are short, sleeves range from the short puff, so charmingly in keeping with bouffant skirts of the moment, to the three-quarter or full length sleeve or organdy, net, Georgette or chiffon. Round necks are particularly modish, although the square neck and the V are also liked. If one wishes to be at the height of the mode, the graduation frock must boast a hooped petticoat. These are so softly boned and so unobtrusive that the frock loses none of its simplicity but gains in grace.

SHOES, GLOVES AND A FAN

White kid pumps and white silk stockings are dainty and carry out the "all white" notion; black patent or kid pumps and black stockings, however, are in quite as good form. White silk gloves, if any gloves are worn, are better than kid, being cooler. A small white fan may be carried, both for use and ornament, for fans are extremely dainty this summer. Feathers are being used in the new fans. There are small ostrich feather fans and plain cock feather fans in white and colors. The small spangled silk fan is still favored. Any of these make most acceptable gifts for the graduate. Although the plainer the hair is dressed the lighter, a bit of tulle or a single comb may be worn, and Colonial silver or rhinestone backs may adorn the pumps. Very little jewelry, if any, is permissable; a small brooch or a tiny Lavalliere is quite enough.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S BRASSIERE OR BUST SUPPORTER

By Anabel Worthington.

So that the lines of this brassiere would insure the comfort and express the style intended for stout figures it was designed and fitted over a live model; it should therefore find much favor among those who find the ready made undergarment wholly unsuited to their special needs. To aid in the fit and fall of the dress or waist this design will prove most satisfactory.

The front yoke is one noticeable feature; the low, round neck takes a V shape at the back and is finished with edging, as are the armholes. Two darts in each front near the waist add much to giving the figure greater contour. The closing is with tapes tacked to the lower back corners and drawn around the waist to tie in front. An eyelet is worked in the front tab for attaching to the corset. Use any of the wash materials that you prefer.

The pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. To make a brassiere in size 36 that will be a duplicate of the design you will need but ¾ yard 36 inch material with 1½ yards of edging.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

HOW THE WAR AFFECTS POOR

INQUIRY MADE IN BREMEN REVEALS THEIR SUFFERINGS

How the combination of high prices and limited incomes has restricted the standard of living among the poorer residents of Bremen is brought out by an inquiry made by the trade union and Socialist organizations of that port and published in the Vorwarts of Berlin.

Among the 787 households covered by the report there were sixty-eight, embracing 260 persons, in which no meat at all was purchased, and in the rest of the families the average expenditure for meat was put at about 25 cents a week for each person. The average amount spent by each family a week for butter and other fat was 20c. Of the 787 families, 45 used no milk, while the per capita per week expenditure of the others for milk averaged 4 cents. The average consumption of potatoes per family was five pounds a day.

Nearly one-third of the families investigated had weekly incomes of less than $6, of which $1.25 went for rent after deducting expenditures for rent heat, light, etc. the average amount available to these 228 families for food and clothing was $3 a week. In the case of eighty-one families the weekly income ranged from $3.75 to $5, and there were fifty-two where it was put at from $1.25 to $3.75. The size of the families averaged four [illegible]

CAMP BORDEN SPECIAL.

New Train to Serve Great Military Camp.

The Grand Trunk Railway will place in service Thursday, June 1st, 1916, a new train which will serve the newest and largest military camp in America.

"The Camp Borden Special" is the name given to this train, and it will run daily between Toronto and the new military camp at Angus, near Allandale, in Simcoe county, Ont., where 40,000 Canadian troops are to be trained for overseas service this summer. The camp special will be a limited train, making few stops and carrying standard passenger equipment, express and mail cars.

Its schedule is as follows: Leaves Toronto 6.40 a.m. making stops at Parkdale, Davenport and Allandale, arriving at Camp Borden at 9.10 a.m. The special will leave the camp each day at 5.00 p.m. on its return to Toronto, making stops at Allandale, Davenport and Parkdale, and will reach Toronto at 8.30 p.m.

The new train will provide excellent facilities for the relatives and friends desirous of visiting soldiers in training at the camp, while the Canadian Express will handle the express service that will operate on this train. The district in which the camp is situated is a picturesque one, this being the Pine Plains region of Ontario. The Grand Trunk Railway System has built special lines into the camp, which has an area of 20,000 acres.

GAINING IMMUNITY FROM DIPHTHERIA

Physician Tells of Recent Experiments and Discusses Use of Antitoxin

HEALTH OFFICERS MEET

Hear Papers Dealing With Treatment of Communicable Diseases.

TORONTO, May 31st.—Health officers from all parts of Ontario were present at the first session of the fifth annual conferanpe of their association at the Convocation Hall of the University of Toronto. Two hundred and fifty registered before the close of the afternoon sitting. The programme comprised papers dealing largely with the treatment of communicable diseases. To-day the discussion concerned questions of sanitation such as the purification of water supplies, the treatment of sewage and the best methods of collecting and disposing of garbage.

Lake Waters Polluted.

Dr. A. J. Macauley, medical health officer of Brockville, presided at the meeting in the absence of Captain A. W. McPherson, of Peterborough, who is now at the front. Dr. Macauley commended the provincial health authorities for providing for the free distribution of anti-toxins in Ontario. He pointed out that the high prices at which many anti-toxins were formerly sold placed them out of the reach of very poor patients. He also contended that the results of the inoculation of soldiers of the overseas forces had demonstrated the value of the anti-typhoid serum. He called for concerted action by health officers and medical men to educate the public to see the necessity for the purification of water supplies, declaring that the waters of the Great Lakes and the River St. Lawrence were polluted and should not be consumed in their raw state.

Two papers at the morning sitting dealt with measles and the period of quarantine for such cases. They were delivered by Dr. A. D. Smith, of Mitchell, and Dr. M. B. Whyte, of the Toronto Isolation Hospital, respectively. There was some difference of opinion as to the proper length of the quarantine period. Another paper by Dr. V. A. Hart, of Vespra, raised the question, "Should the breadwinner be quarantined?" and caused a lively debate. The subject is one which the law leaves the medical health officer to answer, except in cases of smallpox. It was later referred to by Dr. F. A. Dales, of Stouffville, who, in the course of an address embodying suggestions for the improvements of association meetings, expressed the opinion that if a wage-earner was quarantined, he was quarantined for the public interest, and, therefore, should be paid by the public.

Treating Diphtheria.

Dr. W. H. Park, director of the laboratory of the Public Health Department of New York City, gave an interesting address on "Modern Methods of Diagnosis and Treatment of Diphtheria." He held that the entire quantity of antitoxin required in the treatment of a case of diphtheria should be given at the first injection. It could do no harm to give the full dose at the outset, and it might do harm not to give a large enough one. Dr. Park said that in ordinary cases he favoured the subcutaneous or intramuscular injection of the serum, and that in cases which it appeared might end in death he advocated an intervenous dose, with a small subcutaneous injection. By the Schick reaction, obtained by the injection of a small dose of diphtheria bacteria, it was possible to determine the susceptibility of an individual to infection. Eighty per cent. of the adults who had in Dr. Park's experience submitted to the test had been shown to be immune from the disease. It was possible, Dr. Park said, by the use of 1,000 unit injections of antitoxin to produce temporary immunity in a great many instances. By the use of an injection of diphtheria toxin, neutralized by antitoxin, however, it was possible, he said, to bring about active immunization of apparently long duration.

Dr. G. S. Cruickshank of Windsor, precipitated a discussion by his paper on "Tonsils and Adenoids." To prevent the spread of disease of the tonsils, he said, there should be proper ventilation of sleeping rooms and school rooms. The giving of "comforts' to infants, he asserted, should be prohibited because those soothing devices collected dirt and germs. The teeth, too, should be properly cared for. Dr. Cruickshank said that no one had yet discovered what the tonsils were for, and he added that there could be no doubt of the wisdom of removing them after a child reached ten years of age. This opinion aroused some debate and a number of physicians disagreed with it.

Have County Officers.

Dr. F. A. Dales, of Stouffville, suggested that the association should discuss such subjects as the quarantine regulations. It might be wise to divide the organization into two sections, one for the discussion of the problems of cities and large towns, the other for the consideration of the problems of small towns, villages and rural municipalities. He said that the Government had done well in creating health districts in the province. It could take another step forward by placing an expert at the head of each county, perhaps two in thickly populated counties, to educate the public in health matters. Dr. Edgar Brandon followed with a paper on "Deductions of a New Ontario Medical Officer of Health."

Views From Two Fronts.

Two lectures illustrated by lantern slides were given in the public meeting in the evening. Major W. D. Sharpe, R.A.M.C., of Brampton, spoke on sanitation in Greece, telling of the epidemic of typhus there and showing a great many interesting views taken in Salonica, and in the Balkan States. Capt. Ruggles George A.M.C., of Toronto, who went to the front with the 3rd Battalion, C.E.F., showed pictures of the first Canadian contingent, taken at Valcartier Camp, on the transports crossing the Atlantic, in Salisbury Plain and in France.

Enver Bey's Horses Cross Desert Shod With Gold

'Myriam Harry' in the Paris Temps tells of her impressions of Enver Bey during the war between Italy and Turkey, when he suddenly appeared one night at one of the French military posts in Southern Tunis and as mysteriously fitted away.

"Around us," she says, "there were only sand dunes, some wandering native camps and some scouts with blue capes watching the trail leading to Tripoli, and in the contryard of the station two mitrailleuses and twoscore sakhiers sent from Gabes.

"The day had been a picturesque and exciting one. A Jew had been arrested for selling field glasses and Italian maps; a Greek had been charged with selling contraband goods, and a Bedouin shiek had been sentenced for stirring up his tribe to cross our frontier and rally under the flag of Enver Bey.

"The evening was gloomy and oppressive. The Simoon was blowing so fiercely that it stretched a burning yellow cloud between earth and sky. Every time the cook opened the door a yellowish whirlwind entered with him. There was sand in our plates and sand at the bottom of our glasses. Even the amiable gayety of the officers was beginning to calm down when a blue scout came in, important and discreet, and whispered something to the lieutenant commander. He went out. We heard a few words and then the officer came back, bringing with him a guest, covered with sand and wraped up like a woman. But when he had removed his white burnous and his veils, we understood from his uniform and his strapped boots that he was a Turkish officer.

He was small, thin, but well built and appeared to us very young, with a short mustache whitened by the sand and his cheeks glowing as if they were powdered with gold from the dust of the simoon. He excused himself for his appearance and for circumstances which prevented giving his name to us. He spoke French well. I noticed the fineness of his hands, and from the energetic way they broke bread or placed his glass on the table I felt that, in spite of his age and the absence of gold lace, he was a leader.

CHATTED OF THE BOULEVARDS

"He lightly chatted about Paris the boulevards and the theatres with the air of being a man of the world in this out of the way hole in the desert. But, one of the lieutenants having spoken to me in Arabic, he became suddenly grave.

"You know Arabic, Madame?"

"A little; I was born in Palestine, in Jerusalem.

"At Jerusalem!" he cried. "That is also a holy city for us, the city of the Friend of God, that is to say, of Abraham. You have seen the tomb of Omar! Abraham! And our mosque of Omar! Then, Madam, you are almost a "hadjia" and have the right to wear the green turban."

"And when I told him I have travelled as a child in Arabia with my father and lived among the Bedouin tribes and that as a poor young girl in Paris I always had dreamed of returning to Arabia, as a prophetess, living on the charity of Allah, he grew excited and cried:—

"Ah, Arabia, cradle of Islam. And the Arabian race, enduring as the rock! If you knew what could be done with it! If it were altogether no nation in Europe, however powerful in warlike material could conquer a bit of the land where the grain has sprouted under the benediction of Islam."

"Astonished at this outbreak of fanaticism, the officer looked at each other. He noticed it and became silent, but soon began to speak again of his love for France and his admiration of the French.

"An alliance with France would be the salvation of Turkey," he declared and, raising his glass, drank to the French army.

"The lieutenant commander wanted him to pass the night.

"No, no, impossible!" he said. I must go. My caravan ought to be refreshed by this time, and he wrapped himself in his mantle.

"The simoon having relaxed, we accompanied him to the outskirts of our post, where horsemen, veiled like him, awaited him. He thanked the officers warmly for their hospitality bade good by to us, leaped on his horse and galloped off on the trail to Tripoli to rejoin his convoy of flour, which he said was sheltered in a ravine. Turning an instant, he waved his hand and cried to me in Arabic:—

"Meeting you is a happy omen, O daughter of Syria."

"Returning to the post, in our guest chamber with my companion, we could not sleep, and ascended to the roof. The April moon shone on a dusty landscape where nothing moved except on the crests of the dunes some little eddies of sand. Suddenly we saw away off on the Tripolitan trail a long convoy which had the appearance of a ghostly caravan. At its head I recognised the mysterious horseman, then his companions and then an interminable line of mules, marching one behind the other at an awkward gait while sparks seemed to fly from their shoes.

HORSES SHOD WITH GOLD.

"That is queer," said my companion. "One would say they were marching on pebbles and yet there is only sand on that trail."

"Yes, I replied," it is very strange. It must be glow worms that the mules have crushed, and which stick to their shoes.

"But there are no glow worms in this desert."

"Then the dunes are phosphorescent like the sea. Perhaps the simoon has made them so, for one would say that the animals are walking on gold, unless that young officer is a mahdi who makes stars appear under his feet."

"But the caravan had disappeared."

"It was a long time afterward that we learned that our fugitive guest was none other than Enver Bey and that he was returning from a trip to Berlin, where he had obtained from the Emperor—notwithstanding the fact that Germany was the ally of Italy—a million in gold and encouragement to resist in Tripoli. To bring this gold, which was contraband of war, into Tunis Enver had conceived the idea of shoeing with gold the horses of his convoy of flour and his mules. That was the caravan he had left near our post, and it was that which we saw going off in the night like a fairy cortege."

HITS WEALTHY AMERICANS.

London, June 1.—"A considerable number of wealthy American women, who married Englishmen and are living in this country, including several peeresses, will be hit heavily by the new income tax on American securities." So announces the London Daily Express, and adds: "Their incomes are derived from American securities but the securities are held by trustees on th other side of the Atlantic and accordingly they cannot offer them to the government. Yet no exception is to be made in such cases, which have apparently been overlooked. One American woman who is spending $25,000 a year in war charities in this country states that when the new tax is enforced she will be compelled to stop spending anything in this way."

PRE-NATAL POWER IN BIG CIRCUS ACTS

Hundreds of Peformers Run Ancestry Far Back Along Caravan Trail to Sawdust Ring

EQUESTRIANS, TUMBLERS, AND AERIALISTS BEGIN AS BABIES, TRAINED BY PARENTS FAMOUS IN SAME LINES.

"Who's Who in the Circus" is one of the books yet to be written. The material is abundant and alive with interest. The things needed are a publisher and somebody to write the truth about the hundreds of men and women aristocrats of the big tents. Down in Madison Square Garden with the Barnum and Bailey Circus are enough eligibles to fill many pages of such a book, said yet as Orrin Davenport, the equestrian, said yesterday, they are only a small part of the world's great circus family.

Every afternoon and every night thousands look on delightedly while the circus man and the circus woman do again and again the things of variations of them that made their fathers and mothers and grandfathers and grandmothers before them famous in the circus world, for, as Jay Rial is proud to tell the circus performer is born to his profession in nine cases out of ten. The equestrian, the aerialist, the contortionist, or the clown who cannot trace his circus ancestry back at least two generations is by all the rules of circus zoology a newcomer.

STILL A HORSEMAN AT 80

For instance, take Orrin Davenport the equestrian, who is of the fourth generation of the famous horseback Davenport family. More than a century ago there lived in Savannah, Ga., a wonderful horseman named Davenport, a real old-time Georgia name that is still to be found in the directory of nearly every town and hamlet in Georgia. Orrin Davenport's father was the second of the line riders, and to-day at the age of 80 years he is still in the game, being director of the Davenport training quarters near Chicago. Orrin's own son, a boy of 8 years, is now in school and is soon to begin his training under the direction of his grandfather Mrs. Davenport, who appears with her husband at the circus, is of the famous Beldini family of equestrians who like the Davenport's, have been circus [illegible]

Then there is Miss Ella Bradna, another famous rider and driver who was taught by her equally famous mother and who as a little girl was thrilled as her grandmother won the applause of the circus-going world.

"My maternal grandmother," said Miss Bradna yesterday, "was a really great performer, and so was my mother.

She forgot to mention, that she, herself is one of the recognized stars of the sawdust ring.

Edwin Hanneford, of the Hanneford troupe, should take a page in the Circus "Who's Who." His act is the most startling of all the riding numbers in this year's circus. Edwin is 24 years of age and a native of Yorkshire, England. For two hundred years the Hannefords have been of the circus. He was born in a circus van when his father and mother were stars in Lord Stanger's Circus.

FIRST RODE AS A BABY.

"The first thing I remember as a boy, was my father and my mother who were billed as 'Hanneford and Scott' England's Champion Riders'. My mother as a girl was with Scott's Circus, then second in importance to Lord George Stanee's great show. My own debut was made in Liverpool in 1897 with the Grand Circus. I was hardly more than a baby and there was a string tied to me fastened to a ring above, so that if I tumbled I would not fall to the ground and be trampled to death by my horse. My mother handled the string. I remember that when my act ended and the applause followed, my mother gave me a piece of candy to pay me for kissing my hand to the crowd. Since that day I have been riding steadily and I suppose if good luck stands by me I shall still be at it some fifty years hence, at least I hope so. I am of the seventh generation of Hanneford riders."

Fred Derrick, the trainer and rider of circus horses, traces his circus history of both sides back to the eighteenth century, while James Fillis, Jr., whose father is Chief of the Cavalry School in Petrograd, Russia, reaches back still further in circus history. Some of the elder Fillis's books on riding are published in every language. The first of the Fillis circus riders appeared in France before Napoleon's time. Later the family moved to Russia, where it has remained to this day one of the most prominent names in the horse training and riding life of that nation of great riders.

A RELATIVE OF DAN RICE

And some of the acrobats boast professional ancestory even more ancient than do the riders. For instance, the Melitte head balancers, two of them, father and son. They are the fellows who awe the audiences by standing on their heads on trapeze bars high in the air while those trapezes are swinging across the Garden at dizzy speed. Dan Rice, the most famous of all clowns of the olden days was a grand uncle of the elder Melitte. Eight generations of this family have made show history.

Every one of the Silbons and the Siegrists, the fourteen men and women who make up the Siegrist-Silbon troupe of aerialists, was born to the circus. Since long before the civil war their names have been household words in every town in America to which the circus came, and generally before that the Siegrists and Silbons were famous in England and on the continent of Europe.

The Dekoses, the acrobats who [illegible] one another, are just beginning to write their circus history. The father of the Dekoses now with the circus was a plumber in Brussels, [illegible] grown. Joe Dekos, the senior member of the present troupe, ran away from home to be a circus performer, when he was in his teens, and he made a success of it that when the other brothers were old enough to go into the ring they didn't have to run away from willing parents.

"Then there is the little Spanish acrobat, Senorita Lupita Perez; the Belfords, and scores of others, of every one of whose many interesting things might be written.

Just a word about the clowns. Lou Ducrow the "Daddy of Clowndom" is an Englishman, and has been in circus business for more than fifty three years, always as a clown. His father and his grandfather before him were clowns. Valdo is another [illegible] time clown, and so is "Buck" Baker whose right name is Myron Baker, the inventor of half the clown acts in the circus. The big peace ship "Europe II", the steam roller which runs over real clowns and crushes dummy ones, the motor cycle baby carriage with its doll twins, and the "old jitney bus" are all Bakers inventions.

There are a very few of the men and women who are going into the "Who's Who of the Circus" when it is written. Some day Jay Rial may write that book, and if he does it will be worth reading.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Turn In the Tables

[Copyright, 1 5, by American Press Association.]

My dear, what I have to tell you I would only confide to my bosom friend. A terrible blunder for which I alone am responsible has made a great change in my life. I can never think of it without horror, shame, mortification, humiliation—indeed, every frightful emotion for which there is a word in the English language. And yet I confess that this incident has brought me the most exquisite happiness. I have to announce to you, my dearest, sweetest, loveliest friend, my engagement. Bob has won my consent at last.

But I must admit that Bob took an unfair advantage of me. While I love him and feel that he is the one man to make me happy, I can never forget that he turned to his own account this frightful fatality to compel me to accept him. True, I had all along intended to do so. But you know how sweet it is for a woman to have a man humble himself before her, tell her that without her he will become a wreck, implore her to have mercy upon him. All this I might have had were it not for my mistake.

I had kept Bob dangling for a year. I had given him but little hope. I confess that his pain was my pleasure. When he fretted I laughed at him, when he rebelled I assumed a haughty tone and asked by what authority he presumed to dictate to me, and never after the slightest sign of independence on his part did I restore him to favor except he came to me through the valley of humiliation.

Now, when I consider that he not only compelled me to desist from such treatment, but assumed to make conditions; when I think that he got me, so to speak, in a hole, acted in a mean, contemptible, selfish, disgusting, brutal—

But I am forgetting that I am engaged to him and love him devotedly. It is dangerous for me to give you this story, for in the telling of it I am liable to wish that I had my lover on a spit roasting him before a slow fire. However, since I must tell somebody and you are my own true, loyal friend, I will hurry through it lest my indignation get the better of me and I send Bob about his business.

You must know that Bob and Alice and Sue and Lillie and a lot of boys and girls were together on the coast. Well, we came home in the same train, making the journey in the night. Alice and I occupied a lower berth, while Sue and Lillie did the same. The boys bunked together, except Bob, who took a berth for himself alone. We were a merry party on the train, talking and laughing, till a disagreeable old man—why are old people permitted to live, I wonder?—called out from his berth that the fool killer was coming through the train. Thinking that this might possibly be a hint for us to get into our berths, we did so, and the car soon wore the silence of slumber. Of course the silence of slumber is different in a sleeping car from a nursery. A number of people snored frightfully.

In the middle of the night I awoke with a terrible thirst. I was in my wrapper and had my slippers on. I crawled over Alice, who slept on the outside, went to the end of the car to the cooler, got a drink and started back.

Now, these sleeping cars, when one wishes to find one's berth, are perfectly awful. I was lost. I looked for the porter, but he was not visible. I peeped into several berths, in each case seeing a stranger asleep. Then it occurred to me that my berth was the fourth from the rear end of the car. Acting on this, I made a plunge. A figure rolled in the bedclothes was on the outside. I climbed over it and had one hand and knee on one side of it, the other hand and knee on the other side, when the sleeper stretched forth a hand, pulled the curtain aside, and the horrid lamplight shone down on the face of—

How shall I ever get the story told? What was I doing? What frightful fate had possession of me? There beneath me lay a man—not only a man, but the man whom I had been persecuting. I was getting into bed with—oh, horrors!—with Bob. He was looking up into my eyes, I down into his.

"Mercy!" I cried and, rolling out into the aisle, rushed back to the other end of the car. There I found the porter coming in at the door, and he put me in my berth.

Of course I didn't sleep a wink. How could I? The next morning Bob made no reference to the matter by look or word till we were all at breakfast in the dining car. Then he said:

"Anybody sick in the night?"

I knew what was coming, flushed crimson and gave him an imploring look. But he kept on making all kinds of innuendoes without telling on me till I was almost frantic.

Well, when we went back into our car we found the berths put away, and Bob took a seat beside me. Assuming an independent tone, he said that I had one more chance, and one only, to be his wife. I must decide then and there. If I refused to give him a definite answer the story must come out.

What could I do?

We are to be married in April, and I wish you, of course, to be first bridesmaid. I have not yet decided whether the wedding shall be at the church or the house. Bob came in yesterday while I was planning my trousseau and seemed surprised at my entering on the work so soon. "But," he said, "it is certainly time for a girl who is in the middle of the night"—

You should have seen the look I gave him.

TWO FACED JANUS.

He Was the Ancient Sun God as Well as the God of War.

Poor old Janus! Do you know how shamefully posterity has maligned him? You have heard all your life that January was named for the Roman god Janus and that Janus was the god of war; hence the first month of the year must be turbulent. Or perhaps you have gone deeper into the significance of the first month's name and have been told that it was given the honor of heralding that gory god because he had two faces, one looking into the past and the other looking into the future, as the first month of the year naturally would do. But through it all you have held rigidly before you the fact that he was the patron, the inventor, perhaps even the instigator of war.

As a matter of history, Janus was a venerable and thoroughly established deity before the little band of Trojans carried eastern culture to Italy, when the primitive Italians had not begun to suspect that war was an institution which called for a "goat." War needed no justification or excuse. Men fought because that seemed the only thing to do. As for Janus, he was their greatest sun god. He presided over the rising and setting of the sun, and hence he was the god who looked after the propitious beginnings and happy endings of all undertakings. He was represented with two faces, which looked to the east and the west. His temple in Rome was closed only in time of peace, and as there seldom was peace it was usually open. Hence he was called the god of war.

HINDUS TAUGHT US SOME THINGS

The recent observance of "Indian Day" has served to stimulate greatly the popular interest in the history and achievements of the aboriginal inhabitants of America, says the Troy Times. And study of the subject is bringing out a vast amount of information serving to correct many erroneous impressions concerning the character and capacity of the red man. While it is certain that a large proportion of the Indians could be designated as savages, with all that the word implies, there were red men—and women—who had many redeeming qualities and who created and maintained highly organized and admirably regulated communities.

It is also a fact that some of the Indians followed pursuits strikingly similar to those which engage the attention and energies of their white successors. We are not greatly given to thinking of the aborigines as farmers; yet there were successful agriculturists in the days before the palefaces attained their present supremacy. Clarke Wissler, Curator of Anthropology, in the Museum of Natural History, New York City, is an authority, and he has written a paper showing that not only have we borrowed from the red men the American grain known as maize or Indian corn, the greatest and most important of all our cereals, but we have copied the Indian methods of cultivation and of preparing and eating corn, and have adopted many traditions and social customs associated with the grain. The researches by Mr. Wissler prove that those methods, traditions and customs were the same throughout the whole country, from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf; hence he concludes that the observances were perfected in one locality and then distributed over the continent—a striking example of organized and co-operative effort.

When it comes to examining maize culture as it has been carried on by Americans for generations, Mr. Wissler shows how completely our ancestors took over the aboriginal practices, and how closely these practices have been adhered to ever since. Our farmers formerly planted, and many still plant maize in hills; this was the universal Indian mode; four or five grains were let fall at regular intervals of about three feet. Any farmer boy who has "dropped" corn at spring planting time will recall the process. The Indian hoed the earth over the dropped grain and later up around the growing stalk; that has been the procedure by American farmers since the earliest days of white occupation. The idea of drawing the earth around the stalks is carried out even in using the mechanical cultivators of the present day. The parallelism persists all along the line.

The Indian used a husking pin of wood or bone; the white farmer copied the practice, although later he may have introduced an improvement in the shape of husking pins of iron or other metal because such implements were more efficient and enduring. The Indian used a "crib" for storing his corn, the structure being raised on posts to keep the contents dry and out of reach of rodents. The white man followed the fashion. The Indian planted beans, pumpkins and squashes between the rows of corn. So did the white man. The Indian knew how to test his seed corn and to give it preparatory germination in warm weather. The white man learned the trick.

Even the methods of cooking corn have been transmitted to us by the Indians, and we have appropriated the Indian names for some of the succulent dishes in which corn plays a part, including "hominy" and "succotash." Cornhusk mats formerly were common in farmers' houses, and in form and structure they were the same the Indians used to make. Even the "husking bee," once a leading social function, was of Indian origin.

More minute investigation may reveal other remarkable facts indicating how much the American people owe to their aboriginal predecessors. But the story so far as has been made known is instructive and suggestive, and furnishes reasons for having a higher opinion of the Indians than many of us have entertained.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid and poisoned. If the kidneys fail to act properly the skin becomes sallow and pimply. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

MAY WAS WET MONTH.

Toronto, June 1.—"Fine weather today and gradually getting warmer," is the forecast of the weather man. The mean temperature of the month of May is 54, or two points higher than normal for this month. On the other hand this month has been the wettest since 1912, 5.68 inches of rain having fallen or 2.73 inches more than the average.

Rain fell on 16 days during the present month and until yesterday there were 307 hours of sunshine. The normal sunshine for May is 219 hours so that the sunshine to-day will make this month a normal one. The highest temperature was 81 on the 24th of May and the lowest 30 on the 19th.

In Peterboro the rainfall was not so heavy, totalling 3.73 inches. The highest temperature was 77 degrees and the lowest 29 degrees. The month on the whole was backward.

supreme in the two essential features which make for the success of a life insurance company, i.e., the careful selection of risks and the judicious investment of the reserves for the protection of the policyholders. During 1915 the mortality experienced by The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company was but 60% of the expected, being a continuation of the favorable death rate experienced during the twenty-nine years existence of the Company.

The average rate of interest earned on the Company's investments during 1915 was 6.63%, which is possibly the maximum that can be expected, consistent with safety, in the investment of trust funds. The great care taken in the investment of the funds of the Company is exemplified in the following table of classification:

Cheerful as the June Sun

So many homes lack proper heating that it is often thought houses must either be cold in winter or hot and stuffy. Yet the heating of a home can be like the natural warmth of June—the air as warm, as healthfully humid, as fresh and pure.

The Sunshine Furnace radiates the healthful heat of the sun. Pure air is sent evenly over the house, warm, fresh—and clean. The dust and fine ashes, so often seen whenever most furnaces are shaken down, never get out of the Sunshine Furnace.

Dry air not necessary

The Sunshine Furnace supplies air as balmy as summer. This comes from a large water pan so located that it can be refilled easily.

Firing up and closing the dampers of the Sunshine Furnace does not send coal gas into the house. The volume of gas freed from the new coal is drawn off up the chimney. The Sunshine not only keeps the whole house warm and cosy, but continually circulates clear, pure air.

McClary's

Sunshine Furnace

The Sunshine does not cost you more than many furnaces that are not as good. Our Heating Engineer will tell you what a thorough heating system for your home will cost. More than that, he will tell you, without charge or obligation, how to plan your heating system so as to get the most out of it with the least expenditure. If you send the coupon to-day we will send you our booklet "Sunshine." At the same time, ask for special information about heating your own house.

Kindly send me without expense on my part:—

1. Your booklet on the Sunshine Furnace.
2. Also forms for filling out, so that your heating engineers can tell me how to order and install a system that will properly heat my home.

Fight For Blockhouse of Avocourt Replete With Thrilling Incidents

How a daring lieutenant colonel in the French army met his death after a brilliant and successful attack on the block-house of Avocourt, an incident of the fighting around Verdun and how the news of his death was broken to his son, himself an officer, is recounted in the latest issue of the Nouvelles de France. The article reads as follows:

"The retaking of the blockhouse of Avocourt on March 20th is one of the most successful episodes connected with the battle of Verdun. Following the German advance in the woods of Malancourt and Avocourt, on March 20, we lost this very important position. It was necessary that we retake it. The operation to this end was given over to Colonel C—, commander of the — brigade of infantry, and was effected on March 29, at half-past 4 in the morning.

The first ranks of the leading battalions, which formed the line of attack went to the edge of the woods and with iron hatchets cleared the remains of the wire entanglement so as to make way for the artillery.

"The enemy only awoke to the situation some distance from the outskirts of the woods. A hand-to-hand combat then took place all along the front, and ended with the capture of some of the trenches. We took possession, on the other hand, of a sixth of the prisoners, not wounded with their captain; eight rapid-firing guns, ammunition, etc. At 9 o'clock in the morning the whole of the blockade was in our hands.

"At half-past nine the temporary calm on the front ceased. The Germans, with hand grenades, came to the attack furiously, especially on the west side of our works. Each attack was repulsed and was followed by a new attack. The enemy put up an extraordinary resistance. They seemed to calculate on the exhaustion of our forces and ammunition. In the rear some hand grenadiers approached our lines against some accessory distances that as yet were imperfectly organized. From this point they launched themselves on us. At a few points they penetrated our positions or engaged us in hand-to-hand combat, but they were never able to overcome our fearless line of defence. The fire of our rapid firing guns mowed down our uncertain assailants, while the barrier of our hand grenades of which an enormous detachment had fortunately been provided kept at a safe distance the hand grenades of the enemy. Finally the fire from our artillery, uninterrupted for three hours, constituted a powerful attack which prevented the enemy from bringing up reinforcements, and broke down the elements of attack that had played themselves out.

"At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the attack was broken. The enemy retired, leaving before our lines heaps of dead and wounded. Without taking any rest, our men went about the task of making new defensive dispositions. For one has to be a labourer as well as a soldier, in these modern battles, which seem never to come to an end.

"When the enemy retired their artillery started. The heavy German pieces went into play, bombarding without any let-up the positions we had gained. New counter-attacks were started as night fell.

"As regards the amount of energy that is needed by a detachment in order to maintain a position that has been assaulted and won, too much cannot be said. One great hard effort is easily obtained, but the effort that unceasingly continues, the durable effort, the tenacious effort, the effort that is renewed again and again and that seems never to be accomplished, is the one that merits admiration.

"The Lieutenant Colonel de M— was killed at 4 o'clock the next afternoon in the blockhouse of Avocourt, which he had conquered, by a shell which struck at the same time the Major of Staff who accompanied him. He had led in the fight with his habitual calm and fearlessness.

"Besides, he had a son who was serving as sub-lieutenant in another regiment of the brigade. The battalion of the latter was not engaged on the night of the 29th. The news of the capture of the blockhouse, however, had already permeated its ranks. As he passed the headquarters of the Colonel in Command of the brigade the young officer approached his chief, whom he knew well, and said joyously, 'Well, my Colonel, you are well satisfied with my father, are you not?' The Colonel had heard both sides of the story. He took the arm of the young officer and answered, 'Ah, my poor young lad!'

"Thus the young lieutenant of M— learned of the death of his father. A little later he himself went into the blockhouse of Avocourt, where he found and watched over the corpse of his father."

NOTED MUSICIAN OF MONTREAL

Advises The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES", The Famous Fruit Medicine.

MR. ROSENBURG
589 Casgrain St., Montreal.

April 20th, 1915.

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well.

French Sculptor Doing Great Work in German Prison Camp

According to the Kolnische Zeitung, Leo. Gall, well known French sculptor, who achieved distinction just before the war because of his beautiful statue of a kneeling woman, exhibited in the Boulevard Montparnasse, is a prisoner of war in the detention camp at Grieshelm, near Darmstadt. When the war began he quickly enlisted, but shortly after was captured by the Germans in their drive on Paris.

"Every courtesy has been shown to Leo Gall," says the Kolnische Zeitung. "A studio was placed at his disposal so that he could continue his work. He has all the comforts of his Parisian home, and appears happy and contented. When not taking exercise he is working in his studio. His first work in the prison camp represented two exquisite medallion portraits, one of the chief officer in charge of the camp, and the other of the physician in the hospital. He is now working on a monument to perpetuate the memory of the French soldiers who have died in the camp as a result of wounds received in battle, and this monument is to be placed in the little cemetery near Darmstadt, where the soldiers lie buried. The monument is hewn out of white marble and represents a dying French soldier lying in a half reclining position. Near him, in slight relief, his dying eyes look upon parents and sisters, their arms stretched out to him. On both sides is a marble tablet containing the names of the French heroes.

The work is in Leo Gall's best style, and while spiritual in its conception nevertheless has the strength and power of Rodin. In fact, German critics who have viewed it are unanimous in stating that it is superior to anything Rodin has done. The monument will be a worthy addition to Darmstadt's many works of art.

"With Leo Gall are also several French artists. Their paintings which have attracted great attention, have been placed on public view and large crowds view them daily. The fame of

CLIMAX OF THE WAR PAST IS VIEW TAKEN IN EUROPE

Two currents of thought are clearly defined in the European press concerning the prospects of the war. One is that Germany is certainly more and more anxious for peace, and the other that the Allies do not propose to make peace except on very definite terms which will free all the invaded countries from Teuton domination and forever prevent a rebuilding of Prussian militarism that would make it again a menace to the world's civilization.

There seems to be such an inherent contradiction between Gegmany's wish and the Allies' determination that one would expect a very long struggle. Nevertheless, there are signs that the conflict has passed its climax and the sum of German absolutism is declining toward the night of its extinction. "Polybe" in the Paris Figaro makes a striking illustration.

He supposes an experienced theatregoer suddenly taken to a playhouse where a piece is being enacted of which he never before heard. The man would not have to listen to more than two or three scenes to know whether the play was in its earlier or its later acts. Soon the spectator would recognize either the third act, where the plot is perfected, or the fourth, in which the catastrophe is being prepared. 'Polybe' concludes that the fourth act of the world tragedy is being unfolded, and declares that the signs of this fact are multiplying for any one who has the habit of reading events in the light of history.

Among the symptoms of Germany's failing power 'Polybe' cites the cruel slaughter before Verdun in her repeated mad attacks, like the ventures of a gambler who knows he is going to lose, and the incoherence of her foreign policy, which he declares to be an external manifestation of a profound anxiety. All these things are considered signs that the climax is past and that the war at least will not last twenty-two months longer.

More outspoken views of German socialists declaiming against the policy of spoliation and frightfulness are other signs of the trend of events. Herr Liebknecht was only a little a head of the time. Other German voices are being heard here and there. A Dutch newspaper, the Amsterdammer, has just published an article by Dr. Johann Stilzebauer, of Frankfort, in which he affirms that German decadence began the day when Prussia conceived the pernicious design of imposing her malefic sovereignty on all the German States. He protests against the annexation of Belgium, the purpose of which, he says, is to enrich the Prussian monopolists who covet the mines of Hainault and the looms of Flanders.

Again, a professor in a German university declares, according to the Paris Temps, that German scientists and other learned men have signed a manifesto protesting against the violation of the neutrality of Belgium and the useless destruction committed during the war. Knowing fully that the document could not be published without great danger of prison or death for its authors, they have sealed it and confided it to the care of a distinguished lawyer so that, through the attestation of its date, they can prove that they felt the duty of rebuking German frightfulness before such time as an open avowal would be considered merely a desire to please the conquering Allies.

Nervous and Almost Crazy With Pains in the Head

Clergyman Certifies To This Cure of Nervous Prostration by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

No ailment is more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. You may feel better for a day or two, only to find the next day that you have lost ground and are worse than ever. The headaches are worse, languid feelings are terribly depressing. As you lose strength you lose hope and courage and look to the future with fear and trembling.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest blessing that has ever come to the sufferer from nervous exhaustion. It is not narcotic in its influence. It does not deaden the trembling, irritated nerves, but through the medium of the blood nourishes them back to health as nothing else can.

Mrs. Alonzo B. Elsner, Billtown, King's County, N.S., writes: "I was very low with nervous prostration and was about discouraged, as I could not sleep nights and was almost crazy with pain in my head. I had tried many doctors, but seemed to get little benefit from their treatments.

"A friend handed me Dr. Chase's Almanac, so that I might read about the Nerve Food. A single box of this treatment convinced me of its value for I was better. I cannot tell how many boxes I used, but the results were so highly satisfactory that I cannot praise it too much. My health and strength have been restored so that I can do all my own work, and I recommend the Nerve Food to all who suffer from nervous prostration.

"This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. A. B. Elsner and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be true and correct."—Rev. Arthur A. Whitman.

Some patience is required in the treatment of nervous prostration, but you will not be using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food long before you begin to find your strength and good cheer returning. You will then be encouraged to continue the use of the food cure until cured. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

German Vessels Fled on Arrival of Main British Fleet

EIGHT DAMAGED GERMAN WARSHIPS ARE REPORTED IN DANISH WATERS

Kaiser's Vessels Will Have To Get Out To-day or Intern is Report From London---Further Details of Wednesday's Battle Indicate German Fleet Did Not Wait to Meet Admiral Jellicoe's Grand Fleet, But Fled on Approach of the Big British Battleships---The Loss of Life Will Be Heavy

GERMAN FLEET HAD 45 VESSELS IN ALL

LONDON, June 3.—Unofficial reports from the great battle in the North Sea today brought word of the sinking of two additional warships, one a British destroyer, and the other a small German cruiser.

The British destroyer Shark is reported to have been sunk, increasing the number of English ships lost to 15.

Unofficial Holland despatches report the loss of the German cruiser Elbing.

Survivors from the Shark have been landed at Hull by a Dutch ship.

They said the destroyer acted as a decoy for the British fleet.

Forty warships took part in the engagement.

The cable reporting the loss of the Shark is not clear as to whether the destroyer was lost in the fight May 31, or whether another engagement occurred.

GERMANS WERE COMPELLED TO FLEE.

LONDON, June 3.—British newspapers and British public are far from gloomy over results of naval fight off Jutland. This morning's papers practically agree that when history of the war is written the battle of Jutland will be classed as a victory for the British, inasmuch as the Germans were compelled to flee when confronted with the battleship squadron of their own tonnage and metal.

The Times says: "The event will not impair the effectiveness of our blockade or our ability to uphold the freedom of the seas."

The Daily Graphic's Naval Expert says: "It is quite clear that the main German fleet was trying to come out and that our battle cruisers intercepted them and held them up, and that they finally were forced to return to port. In other words Admiral Jellicoe's Grand Fleet came up after our battle cruisers had held the enemy and the enemy retired. The German fleet admitted its inability to meet our Grand Fleet, and is as securely locked up, despite its success, as it was before.

"There remains, nevertheless, a black page in our naval history in so far as the loss of splendid ships and splendid lives are concerned.

LONDON, June 3.—Stories of the German cruiser Frauenlob's survivors indicate that 354 of her crew perished.

Of the 365 men who jumped into the water when the vessel sank only 19 were able to get aboard rafts which were cut adrift. The remainder sank from exhaustion and were drowned.

From Copenhagen and Dutch ports came despatches to-day bringing fragmentary details of the terrific fight. Fishermen arriving off Osjerh report passing through fields of bodies of both British and German sailors.

With fifteen British ships now reported destroyed the total losses are expected to mount into the thousands.

No estimate of casualties have yet been made by the Admiralty however, and it will probably be days before an accurate statement can be made.

From reports it is obvious that survivors have been landed at a dozen different ports.

GERMANS HAD SUPERIOR FLEET.

LONDON, June 3.—A Copenhagen despatch declares that the steamer Naesborg, arriving there, reported that the German fleet consisted of forty-five vessels af all classes. In the British fleet there were only eleven vessels at the start of the fight. Later eight English warships of the first line joined in the battle, members of the Naesborg crew declared. The fact that Zeppelins participated in the battle was confirmed by the Naesborg crew. They reported sighting one Zeppelin. With the arrival of the British reinforcements the German fleet retired southward. Heavy gun fire was heard far into the night.

The captain of the Naesborg declared that the concussion from firing was so great that members of his ship's crew could not stand on deck, although the Naesborg was several miles from the scene of action. Shells dropped all about the Naesborg.

The action opened, he said, with several German vessels in pursuit of smaller English craft. Apparently decoys, within a few minutes British cruisers were sighted headed toward the Germans under full steam.

The fleeing British craft then turned, and under heavy fire steamed into action against the enemy. The warships were first sighted 120 miles off Hanstholm.

LONDON, June 3.—In the face of heavy losses admitted suffered by the British England stands grimly determined and confidence in the fleet remains unshaken.

In clubs, Government offices and from men in every walk of life comes the expression that while the British suffered the greatest losses, the encounter need not be regarded as a defeat, as the Germans were forced to flee so soon as the full force of England's Grand Fleet could be brought into action.

Facing a superior force, the light cruisers, battle cruisers, and destroyers fought gallantly, disposing of ships of their own class, despite the low visibility favouring the Germans. The inference is drawn that the greatest execution was done by the German battleships which were in the action from the start, but that once their equals in armament drew near they retreated.

GERMAN ATTACKS ON FORT VAUX REPULSED

Column After Column of German Troops Rolled Up the Hillside of Fort Vaux Only to Melt Away in the Hot Fire of French Machine Guns —Action is Continuing With Greatest Fury

PARIS (French Official Communique), June 3. — The Germans made several of the most violent attacks o fthe entire battle of Verdun on Fort Vaux during last night and early to-day, but each time were driven back with heavy losses.

The action is continuing with the greatest fury all along the line from Fort Douaumont to a point south of Vaux.

The Germans bombarded Hill 304 and penetrated a large ditch north of the French main position.

Two violent German attacks west of Fille Mort failed.

Column after column of German troops rolled up the hillside of Fort Vaux only to melt away in the hot fire of French machine guns.

LATEST ASPECTS OF IRISH REBELLION CRITICALLY REVIEWED

Final Basis of An Agreement is Not Yet Reached---Situation is In Hands of Lloyd George Who Will Make Proposals For Government

AN ENTIRE TRANSFORMATION

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, June 3.— Seated in his room in the Hotel Metropole, which he annexed some time ago for the Central Munitions office, David Lloyd George has spent hours daily hearing all sections of Irish opinion. He invited the attendance of all the Irish leaders without distinction, listened to all, kept his temper with angelic patience, smiled off difficulty and turned angry remonstrances with a soft word. In short he never displayed with greater effect his immense fists as a negotiator. He also steadily maintained the position of supreme negotiator, acting as go-between and seeing the different parties separately, not together. This method avoided all friction, personal and political, has kept all parties comparatively free and has avoided exasperating haggling.

Excellent Spirit.

Mr. Lloyd George has been helped also by the excellent spirit in which nearly all the different groups met him. The determination to reach a settlement is equally keen in nearly all sections. This was shown by the willingness of all sides to make concessions. Ulster to the South's National demand, and Southern Ireland to Ulster's present objections to enter a Home Rule Parliament.

The final basis of an agreement is not yet reached, and especially as it is in the hands, not of the Irish leaders, but of Mr. Lloyd George, who will make proposals on behalf and responsibility of the Government. Apart from the fact that Mr. Lloyd George has not yet completed his proposals, the Cabinet cannot discuss or accept them till next week. A further cause of the delay will be the necessity that the Irish leaders consult their followers before accepting Mr. Lloyd George's proposals, and these consultations may not begin till the Whitsuntide holidays, but settlement is certain.

Tragic Irony.

It would be just like the tragic irony of Irish history if the last insane and ghastly attempt to defeat Home Rule was to result in the advent of Home Rule. Undoubtedly the present feeling in England except among the incurable irreconcilables, is to approach the Irish question in a new spirit and to push forward the settlement of Ireland on lines which will be acceptable to the Nationalists and the Unionists. It is hard to say exactly how this spirit arose, but the spirit exists. It was partly due, of course, to the fact that the supporters of Sir Edward Carson, both in military and civil life, were brought up with a shock to the results of their policy of gun-running and organized rebellion in Ireland. It is partly due to the reaction from the severity with which the rebellion on Ireland was put down.

Our papers have contained serious and disturbing cablegrams from America indicating the strong feeling of condemnation which these executions have caused among general American opinion. I may say that this feeling is not confined to America nor to Ireland. The first people to protest against the continuance of these exe-

GERMAN CRUISER FRAUENLOB—Officially admitted missing by Berlin in the naval battle off the Skagerak.

MAJOR DAVIDSON SENIOR CHAPLAIN OF BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Honour For the Chaplain of the 93rd---Capt. C. R. Widdifield Elected Vice-President of the Barriefield Athletic Association, Formed to Promote Sports---Some Recent Orders of the Peterborough Battalion---Local Recruiting and To-day's Military News

BARRIEFIELD WAR CAMP, Friday, 2 p.m.—The third day in camp and at last everything is getting in running order and conditions are improving. The weather for the past couple of days has been suitable for working conditions. Nearly all drilling was suspended Thursday to build up camp and it also was pay, the most pleasant day in the month for officers and men included.

In spite of all the difficulties which have arisen, Capt. J. H. Burnham and his staff after a great deal of hard work, were able to pay off the whole Battalion in less than one hour and a half after only being in camp practically two days.

I would also like to mention that all parties who have board bills against any men of the 93rd Battalion, would kindly forward them at once to Capt. J. H. Burnham, paymaster 93rd Battalion at Barriefield and they will be attended to at once and forwarded by cheque at the earliest possible moment.

The Battalion orderly room and paymaster's baggage arrived after some delay Wednesday night at 9.30, which meant a lot of hard work for all concerned in getting things in readiness for Thursday, but now all are down to the usual routine of work.

All battalions in camp which numbered nine, were marched out for brigade inspection Friday by Col. Hemming and his staff, and the 93rd upheld their usual reputation of efficiency, although the men were marching under a sweltering sun. At 2 p.m. there was a muster parade, when every man in camp has to answer to his name.

It will be pleasant news to his many friends in Peterborough to learn of the appointment of Major J. C. Davidson as senior chaplain of Barriefield camp, and it is needless to mention that both officers and men of the 93rd are pleased to see Major Davidson receive this appointment, which to their mind only goes to show that his many good qualities are known far and wide.

At a meeting Thursday night held in the mess of the 146th Battalion, when members of the nine battalions in camp were present, it was decided to form an athletic body to govern all form- of sports to be held this summer in Barriefield camp. The governing body were elected as follows:

President—Capt. James Sutherland, Kingston, 146th Battalion.

Vice-President—Capt. C. R. Widdifield, Peterborough, 93rd Battalion.

Sec.-Treas.—Capt. Niles Bawll, Ottawa, 155th Battalion.

It was decided to have an Inter-Battalion League for baseball, football and lacrosse. Also to promote boxing and wrestling. There will be another meeting Tuesday night when the schedules will be drawn up and further details arranged.

Gunners Sydney E. Armstrong and Robert H. Thompson, Cobourg Heavy Battery, are home for the week-end. A number of other Peterborough members of the same unit are here on leave. Major McKinnon, O.C. Cobourg Heavy Battery, has received orders to recruit an additional fifty men for a reinforcement draft, and his men are on the look-out for recruits in Peterborough.

Private S. Kitchen, of the 93rd Battalion, is home on leave from Barriefield Camp. He went down to Kingston with the advance party.

Recruiting for the new 74th Battery, C.F.A., has commenced in Peterborough. Lieut. Thompson and Corp. O'Connor are in the city on the look-out for recruits, and will be here for some time. Information as to the new unit may be secured at the Armouries or at the Recruiting Station, corner of George and Hunter Streets. Peterborough is regarded as one of the best fields in the third district for recruits, especially for the Artillery, and the 74th expect to secure a good representation from the city. So many qualified artillerymen have rallied to the colours now that a new battery offers great chances for promotion to ambitious young men.

Recent battalion orders of the 93rd Battalion contain the following items:

Fatigue and Working Parties.

At fatigues, working parties which from nature of work will cause damage to uniforms, N.C.O.'s and men will wear fatigue uniforms

Picquets.

Officers, N.C.O.'s and men doing street picquet in evening will turn out at roll call 6 a.m. and then be dismissed from 6.00-6.30 a.m. parade.

Posting Transfer.

Lieut. R. R. de Puyjalon is posted to D Company from June 1st, 1916.

Discipline Lines.

The attention of all ranks is called to the necessity of keeping all lines free from loose paper and refuse of any kind. All such materials will be deposited at rear of camp grounds, in vessels placed there, for that purpose.

Water Supply.

All ranks are called upon to prevent the waste of water as the water supply is low on account of heavy use.

Pte. Fred Gasson writes from somewhere in France to thank the ladies of the George Street Methodist Church for the socks and shirts sent to him and for their kindness generally.

Today is the King's birthday and on that account the recruiting staff of the 93rd Battalion are making special efforts to secure more than the usual number of recruits today. The bad news from the navy yesterday is expected to have a big effect upon stimulating recruiting. It is blows of that kind that always make the Britisher take a firmer grip on his resolution.

Another Peterborough boy who is wearing the khaki and who has been missed from all of the Examiner lists is Dr. M. J. Mohar, who is medical officer at Petawawa camp.

Among the recruits signed here by Capt. Kennedy for the Queen's Field Ambulance unit are Messrs. Muir, Bettson, W. Jackson, McCarney, Worden, Butterfield and Brock.

CHILDREN'S EYES.

How many parents have noticed that their children become sleepy or restless when they begin to study. This is a sure sign that their eyes need attention; to have them seen to now, means a whole lot of trouble saved later on. See Dr. Lacey, 440 George street.

Relatives Were On The "Invincible"

Brother and Brother-in-Law of Mr. Herbert Kelly of This City Believed to Have Been Lost in Naval Battle of Wednesday

HAS SEEN SERVICE

The loss of the British battleship Invincible comes home as a severe shock to Mr. Herbert Kelly, steward of the Peterborough Club. Mr. Kelly's brother, Richard Kelly, was Chief Petty Officer on board, also his brother-in-law, Frank Palmer. It will be some days before Mr. Kelly will receive official news concerning these two men.

A few days ago Mr. Kelly received a letter from his brother, saying that he was returning to his ship after ten days' leave of absence, after being afloat for seven continuous months. Mr. Kelly's brother-in-law was a stoker on the Invincible.

In his letter to Mr. Kelly of this city, Chief Petty Officer Richard Kelly said that the men were anxiously awaiting an opportunity of a clash with the enemy. Petty Officer Kelly was in the big naval battle off Heligoland and the Faulkland Islands. At that time the Invincible was Admiral Sturdee's flagship. Later the Invincible saw service at the Dardanelles.

Mr. Kelly of this city has sixteen years' service to his credit. He has resided in Peterborough for upwards of three years.

SEVERE STORM SWEPT OVER CITY LAST EVENING

Electrical Disturbance Was Followed By a Deluge of Rain Which Lasted Well Into the Night —Fire Department Had a Run During the Storm

WIRE TROUBLE

Little damage resulted from the storm that swept over the city last evening. An outstanding feature of the disturbance was a terrific crash of thunder shortly after nine o'clock that fairly shook the city and disturbed the early slumberer. Citizens in all sections of the city claim that it was the loudest crash they had ever heard. It was followed by a blinding flash of lightning. After that, it settled down to an all night rain, which at time threatened to assume the proportions of a deluge. It will mean another long delay for the farmer who has been struggling with low land.

Wire Trouble.

Shortly before eight o'clock part of the lighting system of the city was impaired. The repair truck of the Utilities Commission made several rapid runs to different sections of the city, and the linemen succeeded in their efforts to minimize the inconvenience to light and power users. A few of the stores were in darkness for nearly an hour. In the words of Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager of the Utilities Commission, the electric lighting and power systems "got off very well." There was considerable wire trouble throughout the city, but nothing of a serious nature.

Will Make Repairs.

To-morrow morning the light and power supplied by the Utilities Commission will be shut off from 5 till 8.30 o'clock in order to enable the company to make some needed repairs.

A few minutes after 8 o'clock last night, and while the storm was at its height, the Fire Department received a call to the Campbell Milling Company. The building had been struck by lightning. The firemen arrived in time to prevent any serious damage. A second bolt struck the building shortly after the firemen arrived.

Received $345 For Car Of Paper

Ashburnham Patriotic Society Receives Substantial Amount for Paper Collected

The Ashburnham Patriotic Society has received a cheque for $346.45, representing the value of a carload of paper that was collected by the society a short time ago for patriotic purposes. The amount is clear of all expenses.

Two Excursions Down the River

An excursion of the school teachers of the city schools left this morning for Harwood on the steamer "Islinda," of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company's line.

The visiting clergymen and laymen of the Methodist Conference were taken on a trip down the river this morning on board the steamer Stoney Lake.

TO CONSUMERS OF ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER---Electric light and power will be shut off from 5 to 8.30 a. m. Sunday June 4th., for repairs.

Hospital Bill For Treatment Of Soldiers

Matter Was Brought to Attention of Finance Committee of the City Council—City Solicitor's Opinion

The Finance Committee of the City Council met yesterday afternoon, and among other things discussed an item of ninety-five dollars, representing a bill from St. Joseph's Hospital for treating a number of prospects for military service. The statement was made that ex-Mayor Buller had made a promise that the city would look after the hospital fees of the men who were ready to enlist and who were in need of hospital treatment. Ald. Weir was of the opinion that if such an agreement was made the bill should be paid. He wondered why one hospital had sent in a bill and not the other.

Ald. Evans thought that the matter should be looked into.

It was finally decided to leave the matter in the hands of Mayor Duffus and Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Finance Committee.

Mr. O. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, has given an opinion that the city is not liable in any way as there was no authority given for the services said to have been given.

A Busy Week For Rev. R. G. Peever

The pastor of the Conference Church, Rev. R. G. Peever, has necessarily been busily engaged this week with the many affairs that naturally devolve upon him in his attentions to the Conference sessions and to the individual members. Every accommodation is provided at George Street Church, and its pastor has been indefatigable in directing the visitors and in pointing out the facilities provided. He has been considerably assisted by Rev. T. G. Lewis and the other local Methodist ministers.

Notice To Foresters

All members of the local Court of the Canadian Order of Foresters are requested to meet at the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe street, on Sunday, June 4th at 6.30 p.m. to attend divine service at St. Andrew's church, as this is our annual church parade. All members are specially requested to attend. Any visiting brethren will be cordially welcome.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1916

LOYALTY TO ONE'S OWN.

To-morrow, nearly all the pulpits of the city churches will be filled by visiting Methodist ministers. It is to be hoped that congregations will not be spoiled by the experience. They will listen to, possibly, better sermons than are hebdomadally served to them, for, doubtless, the oratorical flowers of the Conference flock will be assigned to the city pulpits. Congregations have to remember that they are listening to specially prepared sermons, possibly revamped, and of a quality that could not, perhaps, be retained in the regular course, by the preachers in their own churches. The congregations should remember that their ministers have to prepare one or two sermons every week and do their pastoral work, besides. If their sermons do not always contain the excellencies of eloquence and oratory of special preachers who draw, perhaps, double the salary of their own ministers, they come from your own minister and love and loyalty should prejudice you in their favour. Hear, and applaud in your hearts, the sermons of the visiting ministers, but keep a warm and fast and loyal place in your hearts for your own minister, who is with you in all ways from day to day, and also remember that there are two necessary elements to a good sermon—a good preacher and good hearers.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

To-day, June 3rd, is the fifty-first birthday of His Majesty King George V. If ever we prayed earnestly, "God Save the King," we should do so to-day. In doing so we are praying for the King's advisers, for his ministry as part of his kingly state—the cabinet is the real king, and it has a responsibility greater than any that ever rested upon the shoulders of a British cabinet. The world does know to what extent and in what degree the king personally influences the administration of the affairs of the Kingdom and Empire, but if he is anything like his august grandmother and his royal father, King Edward VII, the peacemaker, he is perhaps realising that he is occupying a place of tremendous responsibility. If he is an agent in bringing peace out of this war he will have helped do more in establishing the world's peace on a sound basis than King Edward with all his partial and temporary success was able to do. The present war in which Britain is the senior partner on the side of right demands more sacrifice, more high statesmanship, more large preparation, calls for more men than the combined wars in which Britain has been engaged for a century. Whether or not the king is an active factor in war administration, we know that he has set a good example in personal sacrifice, which is demanded of all of us. When it was seen that strong drink, with the keenness of a knife was cutting the nerve of the nation, the king set the example of banishing wines from the royal table. This may have seemed to most of us a small thing to do, but it was a good thing to do, in that it was a good example by itself and further showed that the ruler of the nation was willing to forego his personal tastes and join with all his subjects in personal sacrifice to help the nation do the great duty for humanity that lies before it. God save the King, the King's advisers, the empire and the freedom of the world.

ARE WE DISCOURAGED?

The first despatches regarding the naval fight in the North Sea were gloomy and disconcerting enough but they came largely through German sources, and as we get the fuller truth, there is not much to trouble us, except the loss of life. We have no reason to feel less confidence in the British navy, nor to regard it less as the power that keeps Germany powerless at sea and shut out from the world. The most regrettable thing is the loss of life and naval property. In this regard the Germans are losing more lives every forty-eight hours at Verdun than were lost in the North Sea. Though the British advance guard of the fleet was rather badly mauled, there was no German victory, rather a defeat. It is suggested that the object of the German fleet was to get into the Channel and sink the transports carrying Canadian troops. The news is officially received, says the transportation vessels carrying five Canadian battalions arived safely. Had it not, perhaps, been for the little advance guard of the British fleet that held the whole strength of the German high seas fleet at bay, the situation might not have been saved for the Canadians. Germany gained nothing of strategic importance by her naval attempt, and the result of the sea fight will not prolong the war a day. Germany utterly failed in whatever objective she had, as she has failed in all her great ambitions since the war began. There is no ground for discouragement in the outcome and meaning of the naval fight of the Skagerack. We must expect victory and reverse, but the fact remains that Britannia is still the mistress of the seas. In spite of the loss of ships and life, there was great and greater loss of ships and life by the Germans, as an offset. Britain has still a navy thrice as strong as the Germans, and what is more, it is at sea, and not cornered in the ports at home, like the German fleet, afraid to face the British fleet, except where it is overwhelmingly more numerous and powerful. No, we are not discouraged.

SAVE THE LIVES.

A human life is a tremendous thing, and contributing to the loss of a human life means incurring a tremendous responsibility. Time after time we have been warned by fatal drowning casualties, and by words of warning in the press, of the fatal danger to canoeists, existing at the Locks. In a signed letter, printed in another column, under the "Voice of the People," it is shown that the dangerous condition at the Locks was years ago drawn to the attention of the Canal authorities by largely signed petition. To remove the dangerous conditions complained of as indicated by loss of life, would only cost a few dollars and a few days' work. If this is not done, there will be, almost certainly, other drowning accidents. The canoeing season is only beginning; and the inherent danger of this pastime, especially when inexperience and ignorance of canoe management come into play, invites disaster and will claim more victims without the help of a death-trap at the Locks. It is a curious characteristic of human nature that it will not profit from warning or the experience of others, no matter how fatal. A manufacturer of canoes half playfully, thanked the Examiner for the advertisement for his business, contained in an article upon the dangers of canoeing, especially by inexperienced persons. He said it was good for business. He had been told by another citizen long engaged in the boat livery business, that he had noticed that after every fatal canoe casualty there was a perceptibly increased demand for canoes on the part of the public. So that the sad accident of last Sunday, instead of lessening the danger, is likely to increase it. It is to be hoped, even if there is little ground to hope, that the slow-moving Government authorities in connection with the Canal, will take the necessary measures to remove a most dangerous condition, which, if allowed to remain, is murderous; for, as it has been, it doubtless will continue to be, the cause of the loss of human life. It is nothing less than criminal to show indifference and practice delay in dealing with and removing, a death trap. God knows we are losing enough lives in this awful war to win a great good. We should not be parties to destroying life uselessly and wantonly, as we shall do if we continue to retain the dangerous conditions for canoeists that are declared by people who know—and care—to exist at the Locks. We need soldiers of the King too much to sacrifice them, as was done at the Locks last Sunday night.

THE RELIGION OF LITTLE THINGS.

A lady last night was seen standing at her door, clad in her housewife's apron, and in an expectant, if not impatient mood. A neighbour asked if she hadn't had her tea yet—it was after six o'clock, a good deal, the usual hour of the evening meal. "No; you know that we are entertaining a couple of the conference ministers, and they don't get here quite on time." This is a small matter, but means a good deal — of thoughtlessness. Life and its happiness, or reverse, is made up of small things, which, in the aggregate, make it happy or miserable. The little acts of politeness, deference and thoughtfulness are the lubricants that smooth the running of the social machinery, and constitute chiefly the amenities of daily intercourse. We can't do a big thing every day for our neighbours—we can't save a life or do some notable act; but every hour of every day we can do some little deed of kindness, say some little word of cheer, if only a cordial greeting, that will smooth a rough spot in life, and contribute to the happiness of a fellow man. A guest has a duty, as well as a host. A good guest is one that will give the least trouble—conform most thoughtfully to the routine of the household. And this thoughtfulness is all the more demanded when the housewife is both mistress and maid. A guest that keeps meals waiting beyond the usual hour may spoil some special dish, which, prepared with housewifely pride, becomes a reproach and a humiliation when, after too much waiting, it is served flabby and tasteless. These things and a hundred other little things that flav our or flatten the taste of life, are essentially a big thing. Religion, especially the religion of Christianity has for its essence, self-denial, which, to the right minded, becomes a pleasure when its exercise so evidently contributes to the happiness of others. The man that liveth to himself is the real pariah of social life, a misfit in the scheme of things. The divine Author of our religion lived and died for others; and we cannot be counted as true followers unless, in all the relations of life, we practice self-denial and thoughtfulness for the little comforts and, collectively, the big happiness of those with whom we associate. We are enjoined, "whether we eat or drink, to do all things to the glory of God"; and it follows that in all our human relations, whether we eat or drink, or walk, or talk, or serve, or receive we must, to be true to His leading, follow the example of Him who thought only of the happiness of others, and made kindness and love for our neighbour, the touchstone of our religion. And it is chiefly, if not only, in little things, little acts of courtesy, kindness and consideration that we have daily opportunity to practice the obligations of our religion towards our fellow men, and so fulfil the law of Christ, and glorify His name.

SOME COMFORT FOR MOTHER

The death of Col. Mosby, the famous guerilla leader of the South in the American civil war over half a century after the war closed, shows that going into danger is not always as dangerous as might be supposed. This man, who died at the age of 82, went through the war, taking his life in his hands day and night. With a few horsemen, armed with six-shooters, he was constantly riding around or through the Northern lines performing dare-devil exploits. Yet he survived all the risks he ran and flourished to a ripe old age.—Toronto Star.

TEN WINNIPEG HOTELS CLOSE

AND SEVEN OTHERS IN OTHER PLACES OF MANITOBA SHUT THEIR DOORS.

WINNIPEG, June 3.—Manitoba has had its first "dry" day. Ten local hotels have locked their doors, and seven throughout the province. Some of these may open later, and some of those now open may later close, but on the whole the situation has not appreciably changed. There were but twelve victims of Wednesday night's finale before the police court yesterday. They were released with cost payments. One plea was accepted for all: "It was our last chance, Judge and we took it."

It is estimated that over one hundred thousand dollars has been paid out for stocks of liquors now stored in local homes. Many American wholesalers began advertising locally to-day all standard wines and liquors to be sent by parcel post to any Manitoba address. Seven wholesale houses in Winnipeg remain open as commission resorts. Chief Inspector MacLean yesterday permitted the local dealers to complete delivery of goods sold on Wednesday.

"Johnny, don't you know it's wrong for a little boy to fight?" "Yes'm. But Willie doesn't know it, and I'm proving it to him."—Washington Star.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

A Word For the Monthly Collectors.

At the beginning of each month the Red Cross collectors have sallied forth to gather in the subscriptions so kindly promised by generous citizens toward the alleviating of the awful pain and suffering caused by this fearful and bloody conflict.

They have gone forth gladly in rain or shine, and some times in bitterly cold weather to collect in their various districts, and they have appreciated the kindly welcome they invariably receive from the contributors, many of whom salute the collectors with "Glad to see you, I've got it all ready for you."

Several of the ladies who collect are going out of town for a time, and that means a little more work for those who are left. We were wondering if these contributors, to whom it would not cause any inconvenience, would make our task a little lighter for us during the hot season, by paying two or three months subscription at the one time, instead of just for one month.

The June collection will be made next week and we would be very grateful to any of our Red Cross contributors who, without inconvenience, can oblige us in this matter.

Open Meeting.

On Monday afternoon, 5th June, at 3 o'clock, the executive will meet in the teachers' room at the Public Library. At 4 o'clock the open meeting of the Society will be held, to which all the workers and all those interested in Red Cross work are very cordially invited.

Only active members can vote, but there are many others who are keenly interested in the work of the Society to whom an invitation is extended.

Prisoners of War.

In view of the conflicting statements regarding the treatment and food supplied by Germany to its prisoners, Colonel Marshall, President of the Canadian Red Cross Society, conferred with Colonel Hodgetts and Mrs. Rivers Bulkely.

As a result of the conference, it was decided to issue a reassuring statement to the friends of Canadian prisoners of war to the effect that all parcels which the society sends out continue to be safely and promptly received. A number of acknowledgments of the safe arrival of food and clothing have been received this week and are dated May 8th. No complaints have reached the Canadian Red Cross. One writer speaks of the camp at Hanover as good, and adds: "What we greatly need is sporting gear, footballs, boxing gloves, etc., and if you can do anything for us we shall be grateful." In this camp there are 400 Britishers, most of whom are Canadians."

In some camps conditions seem fairly good, but in others they leave much to be desired. Still, taken as a whole, we think more humane treatment is accorded the prisoners than in the early period of the war, but whether that is so or not, the British will never retaliate. To do so would be to descend to the level of German Kultur, and of this the British Empire is incapable. Neither can the British murder women and children on sea and land as the Germans wilfully murder the women and children of their enemies and of neutrals. We have to win the war without resort to the methods of the Beast.

Lethargy of Women, No Myth.

Toronto is suffering, as are most other cities which have been working zealously along patriotic lines, from a wave of lethargy which seems to be settling down over a large section of its women workers. The matter is under serious discussion, and ways of checking it are being eagerly sought after.

One woman in Toronto, speaking in the discussion said: "It is a humiliating thing to think that when our men are pouring out their life-blood for duty and for an ideal Canadian women haven't been permanently stirred to the necessity for real sacrifice."

Another said: "It's a pity that out of the Canadian women swarming to Britain to be near somebody, a few couldn't come back to stir us up to follow in the footsteps of the British women whom we have so often spoken of with pity or contempt. They're not buying new clothes for the races. They're not driving around town in their motors. They're making munitions and working in the fields, or giving up twelve and fourteen hour of every day to some hard work! And we? We're going to bridges and playing for a patriotic prize, or drinking tea with a patriotic flavour."

Let us guard against this "used to the war" feeling in Peterborough. Let us not weary in well-doing, for if we become indifferent, our indifference will react on our men-folk, and recruiting will become harder and harder and more of a heart-break even than it is at present. The women of France will not "get used" to the hundreds of thousands of their men who have and are dying the heroes death at Verdun. What counts a little weariness on our part against their tremendous and supreme sacrifice?

The following poem by Harold Begbie appeared in the "London Chronicle. It was cut out by Sergt. Turley, 14th Battalion, Selkirk Avenue, Toronto, and sent by him to his wife to be kept for his three year old son Handing Down.

(By Harold Begbie.)

Soldier, what are you writing
By the side of your cooling gun?
Sir, since I'm stopped from fighting,
A word to my little son.

Tell me the thing you've written
For I love the writer's art,
Sir, that to be a Briton
Is worth a stricken heart.

Show me so fine a letter
That you write in the trench's mud
Sir, you could read it better
Were it not for the stain of blood.

Soldier, tell me your story—
Your eyes grow bright and wide,
Sir, it's a tale of glory
To think of the young one's pride!

Would you like to be a soldier, little Billy all my own,
Would you like to tip the Kaiser off his high and mighty throne,
Would you like to be with father in a well-dug British trench,
Knocking spots off German generals and saluting General French?

Would I like to be with Billy, little Billy, all my own,
Would I give a month of Sundays just to see how he has grown?
Yes! I'd like to be a dustman in the poorest London streets
For the chance of seeing Billy with a gumboil made of sweets.

If you want to be where I am, then I want to be with you.
But I'm here to show a tyrant that a Briton's word is true:
We must stand by little Belgium, we must fight till fighting ends,
We must show the foes of Britain that we don't desert our friends.

Don't you go and think, my Billy, little Billie all my own
That we're squabbling here for nothing, that we're growling for a bone
We are here for Britain's honour, for our freedom, for our peace,
And we're also here, my Billy, that these wicked wars may cease.

Don't you say that I am funky, don't you say that I am sick.
Boy, I'm half afraid to tell you, but I love it when it's thick—
When the shells come screaming, bursting, and the whistling bullets wail
God forgive me, but I love it, and I fight with tooth and nail.

But it's after—looking round us, missing friends, and find dead,
It is then the British soldier gets a fancy in his head,
And he swears by God in heaven that the man who starts a war
Should go swimming into judgment down a cataract of gore.

That's what makes us such great fighters, and I'd have you be the same.

Love your country like a good 'un, hold you head up, play the game.
Be a straight and pleasant neighbour be a cool, unruffled man,
But when bullies want a thrashing, why you thrash 'em all you can.

While you say your prayers, my Billy, little Billy all my own,
Asking God to save your daddy, I send this one to His throne—
Save my little lad from slaughter, guard his heart and mind from wrong,
Keep him sweet and kind and gentle yes, but make him awful strong.

Good-night, my little Billy, here's your daddy's good-bye kiss.
Don't forget what I have told you, and remember also this—
If I don't come back to see you I shall die without a groan,
For it's great to fall for freedom, little Billy all my own.

We think "Billy" will be worthy of "Dad," if heredity counts for as much as we imagine. This little poem brought a message to us, does it to you?

"SERVICE."

DEFENCES OF SALONIKA LIKE THOSE OF VERDUN

By this time the defences of Salonica are considered as impregnable as those of Verdun. Correspondents of foreign newspapers who recently inspected the sector of the front are amazed at the works already constructed, which appear stronger than any on the French front. Of course, the Allies here had plenty of leisure and were beyond reach of the enemy's guns.

The positions chosen overlooked the plain of the Vardar, where there is not a rivulet, a hillock, a hamlet or a bridge that has not been mapped out Any attacking force venturing within fire of the Allies' heavy artillery would be immediately cut to pieces Yet, as the Germans are known not to hesitate to send fresh troops to slaughter, especially when they belong to Austria, Bulgaria or Turkey an unbroken net of barbed wire extends along the lines to prevent a frontal attack. Throughout these lines are scattered groups of mitrailleuses under a thick shelter of cement and earth.

At a distance, based by engineers on the most recent experiences in battle, centres of resistance have been established along the line, which are as many advanced fortresses with cement covered shelters for the mitrailleuses, observation posts, lines of trenches, communicating with each other and with the different parts of the defence by deep branch trenches which insure the maximum of invulnerability.

A little behind the line of centre of resistance is installed the post of commander of the sector. Many subterranean rooms constitute a series of office, posts of observation and shelters from bombardment. Here the colonels direct all the operations. All the posts are connected by telephone and the commander thus obtains instant and exact knowledge of everything taking place in his sector and can transmit at once his orders to his subordinates. The telegraph is used as well as the telephone and optical and heliographic systems assure close connection between infantry and artillery, between all the element of each sector and between the different sections of the front.

Millions of cubic metres of earth have been excavated. The trenches and the shelters made cruel wounds in the ancient soil of Macedonia, so fertile yet so deserted, and heaped it with hummocks while they were being constructed. Since then grass has been sown or sods of turf have been planted on all these mole hills and thus they are entirely concealed from aerial observers. The artillery posts are so well hidden by such ingenious devices that an inspector of the Greek army came right up in front of one of the batteries without even suspecting its presence.

There is thus in front of Salonica another city underground, with its streets, its squares and its houses. While the defence is thus being perfected and the general staff is preparing an offensive which will drive back the Teuton-Turco-Bulgarian coalition and hasten the general victory, the ordinary life of Salonica goes on, says a correspondent of the Paris Temps, and the mixture of warlike preparations and peaceful occupations gives to existence in this part of the world a very original aspect.

SIR JAMES WATSON'S OPINION CONSIDERED MOST VALUABLE

You catch a little cold to-day, and by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung-food, and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or Catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00, small size 50c; trial size 25c.

Successfully Staged "Geisha"

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey returned to the city from Toronto last night, where Mr Devey has been engaged for the last two weeks in staging the musical comedy, "The Geisha" for the pupils of Hamboury Mansion Conservatory in aid of the regimental fund of the 21st. The two performances were given in Loew's Winter Garden Theatre, on Wednesday and Thursday to capacity houses and proved a brilliant success, all of the critics writing well of the production.

The rehearsals were held morning and afternoon at the Hamboury Conservatory for principals while the whole company rehearsed at night in the Harbourd Collegiate Institute kindly lent by the Toronto Board of Education.

Mr. and Mrs. Devey were the guests of honour at a noon luncheon at the King Edward yesterday, given by the promoters of the play.

WAITE, SENTENCED, WOULD DIE TO-DAY

NEW YORK, June 3. — Arthur Warren Waite, convicted of murdering John E. Peck, his father-in-law, made a remarkable statement to Justice Shearn when he was sentenced to be put to death on July 10 and in Sing Sing prison death house a few hours later expressed regret that he is not going to the chair this morning with two of the eighteen other convicted murderers who occupied cells there when he arrived.

"Arthur Warren Waite, have you any legal cause to show why judgment of death should not now be pronounced against you" William Penny, Clerk of the Court, said, asking the perfunctionary questions the law prescribes.

Waite stood at ease, unmoved for a moment, then raised his head and asked if he might say a few words Justice Shearn gave permission.

"I would just like to say," said Waite slowly and clearly, "that I wish to thank the Court for the very fair and expeditious manner that the case has been conducted. I would like to express my appreciation of the conscientiousness with which the prosecuting attorney, Mr. Brothers, has endeavoured to do his duty by society, and also to be fair to me in this matter. And I would like to say that my counsel, Mr. Deuel, has been in every respect kind and above reproach and has been sincere in his belief in the case.

"And I would like to say if I may that I know I cannot undo the wrong that I have done. I realize fully what it is. To some of the people the wrong is far beyond asking forgiveness for. That would be humanly impossible.

"I simply wish to say that I am glad, very glad, to give my body in expiation if it may in any small degree make up or rectify in their minds that hurt which I have done them. I only wish that I had more than one body to give, and I hope that my soul may go on and on and serve hereafter those whom I have injured. If there be any whom I have not so seriously injured I hope that they will forgive me. I am thoroughly sorry. Thank you. That is all."

Sentence was pronounced and Waite was taken at once to the Grand Central Station handcuffed to a highwayman. He attracted no attention in passing through to the Sing Sing train, where he was surrounded by reporters in the smoking car. Wednesday night Waite sat up until after midnight reading the Bible, but rose at half-past six, ate a hearty breakfast and seemed impatient for the moment of his sentence and removal to the Death House.

Percy S. Peck, son of John E. Peck, whom Waite killed, was present when sentence was pronounced. Frank A. Waite, brother of the condemned man, stood in the corridor outside the court room. Mr. Deuel made the usual motions before sentence was pronounced and all were denied. An appeal will be taken.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every number of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orlisse in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orlisse increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb per day. Be sure to get oil of orlisse in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00 Address D. J. Lillie Drug Co., Box 1208, Montreal, Can.

TACOMA, Wash., June 3.—Several thousand tins of canned rhubarb have been sold by a Washington association to the allies for use by men in the trenches. The rhubarb will be shipped at once. Twenty-one tons of rhubarb were canned at the plant here in one day.

LAYMEN'S RECOMMENDATIONS TO BAY OF QUINTE CONFERENCE

Appreciate Government's Temperance Legislation—Call Attention to Midweek Services and Declining Attendance—Suggest Earlier District Meeting—Officers Elected For the Year

The report of the Laymen's Association of the Bay of Quinte conference was presented on Friday afternoon by Mr. W. L. Payne of Colborne as follows:

1. That the very small attendance at the week night prayer meetings is a matter requiring the serious consideration of the Methodist people and every effort should be made to increase the attendance and the interest of the congregations in these services of the church and we reaffirm the position taken by the Laymen's Association at its annual meeting in 1915.

2. The Laymen's representative be requested to bring these subjects to the attention of the congregation from which they come to endevor to increase the attendance at these meetings and create greater enthusiasm therein.

3. That the secretary of the Laymen's Association be requested to have circular notices printed and copies of them be mailed to the ministers recording stewards, and delegates explaining these details and suggestions.

4. The Laymen's Association had decided that the executive should consist of a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer and one representative from each district except those districts in which these officers reside, to be elected annually and the secretary be instructed to write the chairman of the districts in which the president, vice president, secretary and treasurer reside, requesting them to suggest to the district lay representatives that these officers be elected and delegates to the annual conference.

RE FINANCES

5. Your Association would suggest that the finances be closed on the 30th of April in each year and that the district meeting be held not later than May 15 in each year.

6. That the lay representatives to the executive committee shall forward the names of the lay district delegates to the secretary of th Laymn's Association and also notify each delegate of his appointment.

APPRECIATE TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION

7. It was moved by George W. Taylor and seconded by W. H. Hopper that the Laymen's Association of the Bay of Quinte conference assembled desire to place on record their hearty approval and endorsation of the action of the Government of Ontario and concurred in by the leader and members of the Opposition respecting their temperance legislation enacted at their recent session prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on any after Sept. 16 next. Carried unanimously.

SOCIAL SERVICE LEGISLATION.

8. That your Association would call to the attention of this conference the necessities of the department of social service and evangelism and missionary undertakings and would wage a more liberal and generous support of their department of the church work realizing the necessity for and the great service rendered to humanity by these departments of the church undertakings so eloquently brought to the attention of the Laymen's Association by Dr. A. P. Ford.

OFFICERS FOR COMING YEAR

The officers elected for the coming year are as follows:

President—T. H. Everson, Oshawa.
Vice President—W. H. Hopper, Cobourg.
Secretary—J. E. Robinson, Napanee.
Treasurer—W. H. Hopper, Cobourg.
Executive Committee—Judge Deroche, Belleville; R. W. Ireland, Wellington; W. L. Payne, K.C., of Coborne; Isaac Beare, Greenbank; Wm. Suggit Valencia; George W. Taylor, Bobcaygeon; J. O. Fife, Peterborough Dr. A. P. Ford, Norwood and T. R. Preston Tweed.

THE DISCUSSION.

Judge Deroche supported the suggestion that the financial year be definitely closed on April 30th and that the district meetings be held not later than May 15. This would provide plenty of time for officers to prepare for conference and would lead to more prompt returns of finances. The Laymen, he said, displayed at their meetings a spirit of kindness towards the ministers and a desire to work shoulder to shoulder with them especially to relieve them of financial matters that they might be able to give more time to the saving of souls.

Dr. Reynor of Victoria University referred to the first suggestion stating that in many cases the Wednesday night meetings were disappointing. He had found them helpful, and believed this was the experience of those who attend them.

Time might be well spent he felt, in considering the cause of the decision of attendance and of the efforts made in some places by which attendance had been increased.

A member suggested that there should be more of the prominent officials of the church more regularly present.

Rev. R. G. Peever said that more prayer and the Conference sessions would set a stronger example to the Laymen.

President Sexsmith referred to the fact that every morning there was an hour spent in devotional exercises.

Mr. Everson made an appeal for the adoption of the suggestion that finances be turned in by April 30. It would make for promptness and a more business method in this connection. If it was generally understood that monies turned in after that date were credited to the new year there would be fewer reports of coontributions coming in late.

Further discussion was prevented by the near approach of six o'clock.

Memorial Service of the Conference

Affecting Tributes Paid to the Lives and Works of Three Departed Ministers

The annual memorial service of the Bay of Quinte Conference, on Friday afternoon, was a most impressive and touching incident of the sessions that have been in progress this week. On the roll of departed members were the names of three Methodist ministers who had given their lives in long and fruitful service to God. And in the midst of their deliberations the Conference paused an hour to pay a loving tribute to their memories and their work.

The departed ministers in this Conference during the past year were:

Amos Campbell, died in Belleville, April 25th, 1916; his obituary was spoken by Rev. J. N. Clarry of Belleville, formerly of St. James' Church, Peterborough.

John Ferguson, died in Belleville, Jan. 1st, 1916; his obituary was read by Rev. S. C. Moore of Belleville.

Rev. Wm. Kenner, died in Peterborough, Sept. 3rd, 1915; his obituary was presented by Rev. R. G. Peever.

During the service various members of the Conference reminiscently recalled their associations with one or more of their three brothers who had been called to an eternal reward since last year's sessions. Among the speakers were Rev. R. G. Peever, Rev. Dr. Shorey, Rev. Major Clarke, Rev. S. C. Moore, Rev. Geo. Brown and the President, Rev. M. E. Sexsmith.

The obituaries which had been read sketched the careers of the departed, but a closer and more intimate personal note was sounded in these extempore recollections.

Rev. Mr. Peever, as the last pastor of Rev. Wm. Kenner, and Rev. Mr. Moore, who had been with the deceased Belleville ministers in their final moments, made particularly affecting references.

Conference Outing On the River To-day

The members of the Bay of Quinte Conference and their friends are enjoying this afternoon a trip over the Lift Lock and down the Otonabee River. This outing was provided by Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, A. W. Creesman, Jos. Kendry and G. W. Morrow and was keenly appreciated by the visitors.

Milk puddings are the most wholesome dessert for children but they should be varied.

$600 From Otonabee For 93rd Battalion

Otonabee Council met on May 29, when James Manley applied to have the northeast quarter of Lot 19, in Con. 9 detached from S. S. No. 7, and attached to No. 14. The clerk was instructed to notify the trustees of the sections that a by-law would be passed on June 19th, to make the change.

A resolution was passed that taxes must be paid for dogs disposed of after being assessed, as the Council has no authority to remove them from the roll.

The Township rate was fixed at 2 4-10 mills on the dollar.

The sum of $600 was granted to the 93rd Battalion.

F. A. Eason and Sandy Matchett were appointed members of the new agricultural board.

The following accounts were passed: W. H. Borland, taking and entering in a book the census of children, $5; postage, $2; R. Davis, drawing tile, $1.85; John Edwards, cement, $56.15; Chas. Edwards, wood for hall, $22.25.

Council adjourned until June 19th.

COURT OF REVISION.

On the same date Council met as Court of Revision, when the following changes and appeals were disposed of:

W. J. Clancy applied to be assessed for the east half of Lot 21, Con. 11 (Alex. Turner).

On request, part of Lot 29, Con. 12, was assessed to David Curtin instead of John Gibbs.

The east half of Lot 11, Con. 10, was assessed to Ambrose and Fred Davis as tenants, G. Howson, owner.

The east half of Lot 23, Con. 4 Julian Fife estate, was assessed to A. Shearer and John Armstrong, executors.

Adam Pinnett appealed against over assessment. On motion he was reduced from $4,350 to $4,200.

W. M. Brown appealed against over assessment on 18 acres of Lot 31, Con. 10, and a change to $400 instead of $600 was made.

When hungard from fatigue try the value of a hot bath as a pick-up. If a little vinegar or eau de cologne be added the refreshing qualities are strengthened.

"Are you going to make a garden this year?" "No," replied Mr. Growcher. "I'm going to dig up a place in the back yard and put some seeds into it, and then turn it over to the chickens for a picnic ground."—Washington Star.

There need be no fear of low markets the coming season. Production may not be as heavy as it was last year, and good prices should prevail for everything the farmer can produce.

RECEPTION OF 14 MINISTERS BY CONFERENCE

Service at George Street Church Last Night One of Most Impressive Events of the Bay of Quinte Conference Session

ADDRESS BY REV. C. E. MOORE

After years of preparatory study and probationary work, the following young men were received into full connection with the Bay of Quinte Conference at George Street Methodist Church last night:

H. A. Bunt, B.A., Cloyne, Ont.
T. A. Carmichael, Minden, Ont.
R. G. Carruthers, B.A., Toronto, Ont.
J. E. Griffith, B.A., Wilfred, Ont.
E. Harston, Melville, Ont.
M. L. Hinton, Warsall, Ont.
F. G. Jobblin, Bayside, Ont.
L. M. Sharpe, Sidney, Ont.
W. P. Woodger, B.A., Cambray, Ont.
W. R. McWilliams, B.A., B.D., Yarker, Ont.
A. R. Walsh, Victoria Road, Ont.
C. C. Washington, B.A., Roseneath, Ont.
Major C. G. Williams.
R. M. Paterson, Montreal.

His military duties as chief recruiting officer of the 3rd Division prevented the attendance of Major Cecil G. Williams, who had been specially ordained and was also a candidate for Conference connection. All of the other candidates have been ordained except Mr. Woodger and Mr. McWilliams, whose ordination will be solemnized at George Street Church on Sunday morning.

The formal resolution for reception was moved by ex-Secretary Rev. J. Wesley Down without comment, seconded by Rev. S. C. Moore of Belleville, and supported by Mr. C E. Weeks of Lindsay.

Sexsmith without comment, seconded by Rev. S. C. Moore of Belleville, and supported by Mr. C. E. Weeks of Lindsay.

The candidates had selected five of the members of their class to reply to their reception, the distinction being shared by Mr. Bunt, Mr. McWilliams, Mr. Sharpe, Mr. Lucas, and Mr. Woodger.

They related their separate religious experiences particularly recording the circumstances of their decision to study for the ministry. Naturally these five lives had been dissimilar. To no two of them had the call from God come in the same manner. These simple, earnest self-examinations of the fluent and unsettled thoughts of their youthful days when they were striving to interpret the urgings from within were striking revelations of God's inscrutable guidance of those who put themselves in His hands.

Speaking for Major Williams, Rev. Mr. Sexsmith said he had been brought up in the Anglican Church. He went into training in the navy in which he served seventeen years. Coming to Canada he joined the Methodist Church, was specially ordained, and offering himself for overseas service was appointed chaplain of the 109th Battalion, Lindsay. His naval and military experience, his deep patriotism and powers of effective appeal splendidly equipped for recruiting work. His efforts found favour with General Hughes, who promoted him to chief recruiting officer of this military division.

REV. MR. MOORE'S ADDRESS.

In seconding the resolution of reception Rev. S. C. Moore delivered an address that ranked high with those which have stood out prominently in the various sessions. He dealt with the duty, the opportunity and the needs of the Church, in the present and future.

The sessions of the Conference have been coloured by the national situation, unprecedented and unparalleled as it is. The war haunts and engrosses us. We can't forget it. It constantly invades our minds. There was a realization that the Church was on trial for her life no less truly than is the nation. Hence the Church has issued a call for more men who have courage and conscience in what they do. Once again the Church is called upon to move as a conscience in the life of the nation. The war is a challenge to the Church in every department of her diversified activities. It has taught us that the Church of God does not occupy a very conspicuous place in the councils of the nation, nor a commanding place in the world's thought. The Church has signally failed to lead the so-called Christian nations. It has taken a subordinate, a secondary place in the affections of men. There ought to be a great searching of hearts, Rev. Mr. Moore remarked. The yellow press, with its headings, such as the palsy of the parson, the impotence of the pulpit, has railed at the Church which, when the test came, found that among Christian men and nations patriotism was stronger than piety. The speaker referred to the extreme expressions of the Church in Germany against the Allies. Had organized Christianity been true to its Master, had it swayed men as it should, the first week of August, 1914, would not have been a spoiled page in history.

The Church has been most loyal to the nation in all kinds of work, all branches of the Church giving of their time and labour for victory.

ARE WE WORTH FIGHTING FOR?

Rev. Mr. Moore stated that the Church must strive to make the world better for the men who return when the war is over. If under the pressure of national calamity is born a new spirit and resolution that, by the grace of God, in a new and better way, we should live for a new and better day when the war clouds shall have a silver lining and sacrifices shall not have been in vain. The Church to-day calls for service and sacrifice, confession of sin and repentance. Men must dedicate themselves to the true service that is before them. We've been bought with a tremendous price, by the blood of those who are giving their lives for the freedom we enjoy. We should ask ourselves, "are we worth the price they're paying for us." This was one of the most disturbing thoughts in the address. Rev. Mr. Moore clearly pointed out the work the Church must do here. The time is ripe for the preaching of the Gospel that only the balm of the Cross can heal the wounds of the world.

MR. C. E. WEEKS' WELCOME.

On behalf of the laymen, Mr. C E. Weeks delivered an address to the candidates in which he mentioned the requirements of the ministry as seen from the pew. The minister must be courageous, unfailing in the performance of duty, faithful in little things, meek and lowly, and must have an abiding faith in God.

Latest Aspects of Irish Rebellion, etc.

cutions were the English Liberal press, the Daily News, Daily Chronicle and more than all the Manchester Guardian. I understand that some of the Unionist organs, though they spoke with more caution, had their misgivings. The curious transformation of Irish opinion, was that when first these lunatics seemed not only to imperil but to destroy all chance of Ireland getting Home Rule, there was a feeling of such fierce revolt against them that no punishment was too severe for them. In a few days' time all this was changed; while during the insurrections period nine-tenths of Ireland were fierce anti-Sinn Feiners. It looked as if nine-tenths of them would be in sympathy at least with the Sinn-Fein element. This feeling runs very strong at the present moment, and undoubtedly it is a serious obstacle to a calm consideration of the manner in which the Irish cause is to be rescued from the ashes to which these misdeeds organized by subsided German agents had reduced the cause.

In London the feeling of course is a great deal swayed by these natural and tempestuous emotions, and from almost the first moment after the suppression of the rebellion the feeling seemed to rise at once and almost universally among men of serious thought and purpose, that this was the golden moment for putting an end to the disastrous state of things in Ireland.

Mr. Asquith's visit to Dublin came as a surprise to nearly every member of the House of Commons, though hints had been given the day before to some of the Irish leaders. The question at once arose whether Mr. Asquith had gone to Ireland simply for the whether with that extraordinary power of getting to the kernel of a subject which he so often displays, he will be able to come back with an entirely new view of Dublin Castle machinery and a new policy of Irish reconstruction. It was confidently hoped that he would not have a word to say for Dublin Castle; indeed one result of the Sinn Fein movement and of the practical impotence of the British government to deal with it was the final extinction of all faith, practically in almost all quarters, in Dublin Castle. It was thought however, that by those who knew Mr. Asquith best that his visit to Dublin had a much more serious purpose and that it was regarded as the first move in a great and vast political game. The moment the hint was given the movement for an arrangement spread like wildfire. I took the trouble one evening of going to a big public dinner and afterward to a big reception at the Russian Embassy for the members of the Imperial Duma, for the purpose of sounding opinion. I spoke to all sorts and conditions of politicians, Tories are well as Liberals, and I found that the opinion in favour of a deal was universal. The curious thing was that man after man, repeated the same words. This is the golden moment.

AN ENTIRE TRANSFORMATION

How far will these efforts succeed? It is certain that the Irish position has undergone an entire transformation since the war and a second transformation since the Sinn Fein rebellion. This splendid response which Ireland made on the whole to the recruiting campaign. The consistent and courageous stand which Mr. Redmond has made for the cause of the Allies, above all the incomparable bravery of the Irish soldiers in the various battlefields, almost obliterated that old feeling of suspicion against Ireland which has been the chief weapon of the enemies of Home Rule. Though the Orange newspaper in Ulster still maintain their old rancorous attitude though some of their leaders in parliament remained and still remain incorrigible, this phenomena had produced a profound impression on the sane and moderate section of even the Tory party.

REVEALED IRISH LEADERSHIP

The very day that Mr. Redmond made his great speech in favor of the Allies, Tory after Tory came up to me to say that he could never again feel about the question of Home Rule as he had before the war. Then came the Sinn Fein movement and once more the fact that nine-tenths of the people of Ireland remained outside the movement and hostile to it added conviction to the idea that the old suspicion of an irreconcilable hostility must disappear. The Sinn Fein insurrection indeed might be described as important, not because it revealed the hostility, but because it revealed the friendship of the Irish people to the cause of the Allies. It was in fact a revelation of that new liberated and prosperous Ireland which the movement of Butt and Parnell has created, and which of course in its very essence is anti-revolutionary.

The attitude on the other hand, of the Nationalist toward the Orangemen has also undergone some modification. It became clear at the very opening of the war that any attempt to settle the question of Ireland either in Ulster or the South by means of arms had become an impossibility. Mr. Asquith in his speech at the Mansion House in the very early days of the war, laid down the doctrine that force could not be used against either the one or the other. That declaration stands, and it has been confirmed by events. The result of it is that the same Nationalists now approach the question of Ulster much more tolerantly. They were willing when the Home Rule bill was under discussion to let four countries of Ulster stand out. The historic conference at Buckingham Palace broke down on the question whether to these four countries should be added Fermanagh and Tyrone.

These two countries were in some respects the crux of the whole difficulty, largely because the forces of Orangeism and Nationalism were so near in political strength, and because, as a natural consequence, feeling ran more high there than elsewhere. The Orangemen were fanatical; the Nationalists were fanatical. The difficulty of Edward Carson was to give up these fanatical supporters; the difficulty of Mr. Redmond was to accept the principle that a Nationalist majority in these two countries should not be allowed the same quality of right as in the Orange countries to decide their future fate. Various conferences were proposed by the members at the conference and on the whole there was a disposition to make a distinction between these two countries and the other four countries of Ulster and to give them special treatment in the form of an interregnum or something of that kind.

This close approach to a compromise recurs to many minds at a time when the vastly large issues of the war place such a difference of opinion in a different perspective, and when the fate of civilization and liberty is at stake such differences appear much less important. I cannot yet say how all these things will end, but I retain the confident belief that we are nearing the end of the Irish trouble.

SOCIAL EVENING AT ST. ALBAN'S

A very interesting social evening was held on Thursday at St. Alban's Mission, Western avenue, where hearty congratulations were tendered to Mr. Underwood of the 8th Mounted Rifles on his safe return to Canada. A pleasing speech was given by Mr. Spence, supported by the Rev. Price, rector of St. George's church. The vocal numbers were supplied by Mrs. Bycott. Recitation by Miss Dorothy Scarce and Mr. Knight supplying some very amusing selections on the gramaphone. Refreshments were supplied during the evening by the ladies of the Mission. The happy event was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

The magnificent grandfather's clock received by Peterborough Lodge of Oddfellows as a gift of the late Benjamin Cooney, is not a heirloom of the family. It was purchased by Mr. Harry Long, executor of the estate, from Angus McPhee, jewellers and goldsmiths, Belleville. Mr. Victor Tully is a member of the firm and as the late Mr. Cooney and the late James Tully were long and fast friends, the expressed wish of the former was that the purchase be made as stated.

How You May Change Your Face Completely

Any woman not satisfied with her complexion can easily remove it and have a new one. The thin veil of sallow half-dead cuticle is an encumbrance and should be removed to give the fresh, vigorous, young skin underneath a chance to show itself and to breathe. There's a simple, old-fashioned remedy which will always do the work. Get an ounce of pure mercolised wax from your druggist and apply it at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. The wax will gently absorb all the lifeless skin and leave a healthy and beautiful complexion as fresh as a child's. Naturally it takes with it all such facial blemishes as freckles, moth patches, sallowness, liver spots, pimples. It is pleasant to use and economical. The face so treated soon looks years younger.

To keep the skin free from wrinkles there's nothing quite so good as the old reliable saxolite lotion. It is only necessary to dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel, and bathe the face in this as required.

Large Enlistment Of Students For Methodist Ministry From Wesleyan College, Montreal

Prof. W. A. Gifford of the Theological College Staff Made a Report to Conference This Morning—Appreciation of Patriotic Fund —Other Business

These figures were quoted by Prof. W. A. Gifford of the College staff, who briefly addressed the Bay of Quinte Conference this morning. He stated that others had offered themselves but failed to pass the medical examination.

Thirty-three of the students of the Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal, have joined the colours. The showing of the Methodist Training College in the east stands out when it is understood that there were only 68 in attendance this year, or would have been, were it not for enlistments. Eleven men joined the colours in the first year of the war and twenty-two joined them during the past year. In spite of the war, the year just closed was the best in the history of the college.

Rev. A. H. Going moved a resolution expressing the gratification of the conference upon the first visit of Prof. Gifford, and its appreciation of his interest and the splendid work of Wesleyan College.

Patriotic Fund.

Alderman Dobbin, R. R. Hall, and Chief Howard, addressed the Conference outlining the needs of the Patriotic Fund, and requesting the assistance of the Methodist ministers of this Conference when future appeals may be made.

To Rev. Dr. Shorey Alderman Dobbin stated that there would be future canvasses until the war was concluded.

On a motion by Rev. Mr. Going the Conference recorded its appreciation of the work and objects of the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Conference Report.

Considerable discussion swung around Rev. H. W. Foley's request for explicit instructions regarding the publishing of the report for distribution in the Conference. The Committee was instructed to use its own judgment in editing the report, and it was felt that this publication should have no depreciating effect upon the report of the sessions in the Year Book. Major Clarke suggested that all references to church union be omitted.

Asbury Centenary.

Yesterday afternoon Rev. A. H. Reynar, M.A., LL.D., of Victoria University, delivered an address in connection with the centenary of Bishop Francis Asbury, who he said was the greatest leader among those who had spoken the Word of God to the English-speaking people of this country. Born in Birmingham, Eng., in 1745, he came to New York as a pioneer in the Methodist ministry, remained through the Revolutionary war, and in his 45 years in the ministry travelled 270,000 miles, preached 16,500 sermons, and ordained 4,000 preachers. The church that numbered 10,000 souls when he was appointed Bishop had grown to 211,000 when his work was completed.

Appreciated Honour.

Rev. R. Bamforth expressed to the Conference his appreciation of the tribute paid him on the previous day when he was honoured with a position on the platform as a testimony of his exceptional qualities as a minister and brother.

Rev. J. G. Lewis referred this morning to the recent wounding of Lieut. Douglas Huycke, and the alarm thus brought to Judge Huycke and Mrs. Huycke, prominent members of the church. Three of their sons were at the front, Mr. Lewis stated, and the fourth was contemplating enlisting.

Methodist Church Will Loyally Support Minister Of Militia

Special Committee's Report to Conference Expresses Appreciation of General Hughes' Service to the Empire

At the Ministerial session of the Bay of Quinte conference on Wednesday night at Trinity Church the following report of the special committee was submitted as follows:—

Your committee met. Rev. R. G. Peever was appointed chairman, and Rev J. Garbutt was appointed secretary.

Your committee submits the following:

Recommended, that in view of this serious world-wide situation in which we find ourselves, and in view of the fact that we believe the issue at stake is whether the Christian ideals that have been at the very foundation of our civilization shall perish and be displaced by the pagan, false and demoniac ideal of force and a lustful world conquest.

Therefore, impress upon our people that the interests for which we are contending in this great struggle are not national aggrandizement or national glory, but are as certainly the interests of the Kingdom of God as righteousness, justice and liberty are the attributes of God and are the only foundation upon which any permanent civilization can or ought to rest.

Moreover we believe that our position as leaders among our people gives us great opportunities of influencing them to assume their proper relation to this great struggle.

We recognize the services our ministers have rendered in cultivating within their congregations the true spirit of patriotism, and that Christian atmosphere that has caused so many to enlist; also by the personal enlistment of ministers, probationers, as well as the sons and daughters of the parsonage, who have gone as combatants and nurses.

We recommend that, our ministers in all our churches, present the claims of our cause to their people, seeking thereby to personally influence the young men of our congregations to enlist. We believe that, if our appeals fail i securing an adequate response and the present condition in Europe continues, some form of conscription must come into force. To avoid this, and still to furnish a sufficient number of men every part of our country must make a much large contribution than heretofore. We feel assured that where our ministers energetically and conscientiously work in the enlistment of men, much more will be accomplished.

Minister's Wise Course.

Further, we wish to express our high appreciation of the distinguished services the Minister of Militia and Defence has rendered to our Dominion and the British Empire in this world crisis. His wise course has undoubtedly been to enable Canada to make her proper contribution to the overseas forces and to secure efficiency in her ranks, and to see that she had her rightful place in this world war drama, and to enable her to perform that part not only with credit but with honour. That he was enabled to accomplish so much in so short a time and in the midst of such great difficulties is surely a reward well deserved. The result has been to place Canada before the world as never before, and to make her name synonymous with the highest valor upon the battlefield and patriotism everywhere. We wish to assure the Minister of Militia and Defence of our sympathy in his tremendous tasks, and onerous labours, and to say as far as we represent the Methodist church, it will loyally support him in the great effort to overthrow tyranny and make it possible for nations to live their lives in freedom while they live them in justice.

HOW TO KEEP BATTERIES CHARGED

Valuable Information For Every Car Owner

VALUABLE INFORMATION FOR EVERY CAR OWNER.

The owner of a modern motor car is often heard to ask, "How can I keep my battery charged? My lamps burn dim and the starter is weak."

In a great many cases this complaint is due to the fact that the owner does not drive his car sufficiently without the lights burning or the starter being operated to generate enough current so that the battery will supply the demand of the lights and the starter when necessary.

This is especially true among the class of car owners who drive short distances daily, using their starting motor considerably and not putting back into the battery the same amount of current they take out. Then they drive their cars at night with the lights burning and oftentimes let their cars stand at the curb with the motor dead and the lights still burning and using current from the battery.

According to the Willard Storage Battery Co., this is being overcome to some extent through the educational measures which have been adopted by their service stations throughout the country.

Every car owner must remember that it is necessary to drive at 15 or 20 miles an hour to generate enough current to affect the battery to any extent.

GEISHA GIRL A FINE SUCCESS

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey of Peterboro' Took Part in the Performance

The closing performance of the popular 20last production, the "Geisha Girl," was presented before a capacity house Thursday evening at Loew's Winter Garden Toronto. Between the acts Lieut.-Col. Hagarty, in thanking Signor Carboni and the Hambourg Conservatory, also expressed the battalion's appreciation of the great assistance rendered the production by Miss Ethel Taylor, the Misses Lowe and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey, who staged the play. Sergt-Major MacQueen received an enthusiastic appreciation of his soldierly rendering of F. A. Morrow's new patriotic song, "I'll Come Back to You Again." The production was a good success financially.

KING GEORGE V

ANOTHER STATEMENT FROM BRITISH ADMIRALTY

LONDON, Eng., June 3.—The Admiralty this afternoon officially reported:

"The British losses in men is very large owing to the fact that the three battle cruisers blew up from interior explosions.

"Sir John Jellicoe reports that Admiral Hood went into action with inspiring gallantry.

"Submarines took part on both sides.

"The British ship Marlborough got into a nest of submarine torpedoes. She dodged three of them, but was hit by a fourth, but despite the damage inflicted the Marlborough was able to make port.

"Admiral Beatty's call for help was sent ot the British main fiet and brought Admiral Jellicoe and an unknown number of British battleships to the scene.

"The main battle then ensued with the British battleships in direct engagement with the German battleships, Dreadnought against Dreadnought. During this part of the battle the Germans lost two Dreadnoughts and the British none.

"When Admiral Beatty endeavoured to cut off the Germans from retreat, he discovered a fleet of German batleships on his left, where they had been hiding behind a the German battle cruisers in a mist.

"Admiral Beatty was then forced to retrace his course to the open sea. Thus the situation developed with the German battleships and battle cruisers fighting against the British battle cruisers.

"At this stage of the battle the British were outnumbered by the Germans.

"The Germans had no surprises.

"There were no seventeen-inch guns in evidence.

"There was only one Zeppelin, being the 5-25, and this was injured and retired.

"Most of the firing was at a range of five or six miles.

"Thus the four phases were comprised, first of Admiral Beatty's attempt to cut off the Germans, second, his forced retirement to the open sea by the appearance of the German battleships when the British were outnumbered for a time, third the arrival of the main British fleet under Admiral Jellico, when it became a Dreadnought against Dreadnought, and fourth, a retirement of the German forces in the face of the British attack."

Only a portion of the British fleet met the entire German fleet, and forced it to retire to its harbour, is the official version.

Whatever the opinions to the contrary that may be entertained are regarded her as being due to the poor handling of the first reports of the engagement by the British, and the "lies of the Germans," it was declared at the Admiralty.

ONLY 13 MEN SAVED FROM FIVE WARSHIPS

PORTSMOUTH, England, June 3.—It is officially announced that Rear-Admirals Hood and Arbuthnot and all the officers and men of the Invincible, Queen Mary, Indefatigable, Defence and Black Prince, except thirteen, were last in Wednesday's fight.

The port commander said that not one person on either the Defence, Indefatigable, or Black Prince were saved. The losses so far posted do not include torpedo boats whose losses may increase the total to five thousand men.

DUTCH SAILORS SAW WEDNESDAY'S BIG BATTLE

YMUIDEN, Holland, June 3.—Captain Punt of the Dutch trawler John Brown, who witnessed the big battle in the North Sea, to-day gave the following description of the engagement:

"The Germans had at least fifty ships, including Dreadnoughts, which I first saw heading north by northeast when the British approached from the northeast. The latter were greatly outnumbered.

"The engagement started at 4:15. The smaller British forces pluckily endeavoured to cut in behind the Germans to prevent their retreat to Helligoland.

"Meantime the Germans had altered their course westward, but by 7 p.m. the British squadron had been reinforced and the Germans began to withdraw. A running fight then continued until 11 p.m.

"Dense smoke overhung the waters. Shells repeatedly flew over my trawler.

"I believe the attempt of the British to cut off the German's retreat was only prevented by the timely flight of the enemy."

LONDON, June 3.—Eight damaged German warships have taken refuge in Danish waters, and will be ordered to leave by noon to-day or intern.

The super-Dreadnought Hindenburg, Germany's newest ship, is reported sunk.

GERMANS ADMIT LOSS OF ANOTHER DREADNOUGHT

BERLIN, June 3.—The German Admiralty to-day admits the loss of another Dreadnought, the Westfalen, 18,800 tons, in Wednesday's fight.

LONDON, June 3.—Rear-Admiral Beatty, who was in command in Wednesday's naval fight, was saved.

Everybody welcome.

The Peterboro Overseas Battalion

Stirred by the love of liberty and honor—called by the Empire's need—undaunted by the hardships and carnage at the Front—keen to be in at the finish—Canada's finest manhood is getting into khaki!

Men who thus give up income and home comforts, and risk life itself, certainly should not have to sacrifice such civilized habits as a clean, smooth shave whenever they want it. Experience has shown that the only way to be sure of this at the front is to have a Gillette Safety Razor.

Wherever there is soap and water, and five minutes to spare, the Gillette will give a real velvet shave. Take one to the Front yourself if you can—if you cannot go, see that your enlisted friend has a

Interesting Developments Among Big League Stars Are Shown By Averages

The succulent statistic is frequently considered a bore. One brief glance at any set of figures is enough to start any number of folks into all the leading essentials of a yawn. Yet it is by the statistic that we follow the the worth and work of the leading athletes. And no other method has equal effectiveness.

IN THE NATIONAL.

The everlasting statistic shows us a number of interesting developments and incidents in the National League alone.

Jake Daubert, the Brooklyn luminary, has led the N. L. at bat for two years. He led through 1913 and 1914 being interrupted by Larry Doyle last year. Now Jake is out with a running start for his third sot at the top. Just at present Jake is batting .392, 31 points ahead of Dave Robertson, in second place, and 50 points beyond Heinie Zimmerman, in third place. Jake has a first class chance to make it three years as a league batting leader, but he has the keenest competition he has ever tackled to beat out.

OTHER EPISODES OF SWAT.

The supposedly cold and pallid figures have other interesting details to show. There are the two cases of Frank Schulte and Hal Chase. These two eminent athletes were supposed to be about through. Schulte batted far under .300 last year, while Chase with the Feds was far down the list. Schulte started the year as a substitute and Chase without any job at all.

Yet to-day Schulte is batting .323, well up with the leaders, and Chase is only a notch behind at .320. Both are hitting the ball with consistency and power, playing as well as they ever played before and batting even better than their normal speed in the old days when their youth was supposed to be served.

THE INDIANS AND OTHERS.

There are still other outbursts of passing interest to be considered from the bleak figures. Chief Meyers, ex-Giant, was another athlete who was counted out by more than one eagle-orbed expert. The Chief batted about .220 last year and was evidently waning swiftly. Yet here he is again, with the batting average of .325, soaking the pill with his ancient lustiness.

Then we come to Colonel McKechnie, who carries a wonderful name for golf. McKechnie spent about three weeks with the Giants, collecting one scratch hit. It was held to be an abnormal event when Mac gathered in his one blow a week. He was finally displaced and Dave Hunter went to the gap. Hunter was hurt. McKechnie was sent back and to-day he is hitting .298, including those first three hitless weeks. Since rejoining the third base job where he started with an average well under .100, McKechnie has been batting over .400. How does one account for it? One doesn't unless one is a natural bug.

TWO OTHER NOTABLES

You may recall also the early announcement that Hans Wagner had finished his .300 days. Honus batted well under the old mark in 1914 and 1915, his first two lapses in 19 years. Yet at 42 he returns with the old .300 fire still blazing in his ancient veins. Wagner is now poised at .305 and moving stoutly along his rugged way. He has the lingering ambition to know at least one more .300 year, and with this start he expects 1916 to make the yield. He is now well above his 1914 and 1915 starts, and with warmer weather ahead should do better in place of losing ground.

There is also the case of Benjamin Kauff. While Benny so far hasn't proved to be any terrific whilwind, he has at least played fine ball and pivoted within easy reach of .300. He is now registered at .290 and a short streak will send him scuttling again into the polite figures of the game.

THE HARDER BREAK

The figures do not always show a background of joy and hilarity. Last season Fred Luderus gave Larry Doyle a battle into the final game of the year for the league leadership. To-day Luderus is struggling down at .190, over 120 points below his normal speed. And 40 points below Luderus is young Bancroft, at .150.

IN THE AMERICAN.

The battle between Tris Speaker and Amos Strunk is now featuring the American league, but this scrap isn't the exclusive feature of the circuit. Cobb, at .311, is exactly 100 points below his 1915 average for June, but sooner or later Ty will attend to this deficit. He always has, for ten years anyway, so why bother about him now?

Lajoie, of the Macknen, serving his twentieth season, is now stuck for the moment at .205, a mark not to be jeered at by any of them. One reason for the White Sox wresting place in the second set can be easily seen from these figures: Collins; .270; Joe Jackson, .260; J. Fournier, .280. These three nominally average about .330. Their smoke will begin to show against the horizon of swat at any moment—after which the White Sox will bear close watching.

OTHER NOTABLES.

The roughest break so far has fallen to Stuffy McInnis. Stuffy has batted well over .300 for at least five years Yet to-day he is down at .172, swinging his bat in every direction to end the slump.

The White Sox, with an attack headed by Collins, Jackson and Fournier, backed up by Weaver, Felsch and Schalk, were supposed to have the strongest offensive machine in the game—meaning offense to rival pitchers, not the home fans.

Yet here at the blood red edge of June they are the last in batting with a club mark of .221. The dope is one thing and the figures are another.

AS FOR UPSETS.

The White Sox, supposed to be the league's hardest hitting club, are the last in batting.

The Nationals at Washington were supposed to carry the weakest attack, being forced to depend upon their pitching. Do you happen to know where they rank in club batting? Nowhere but first, well beyond Detroit in second place. They have a club average of .260, when for the last three or four years they haven't been able to collect over one or two able to rach this mark.

We make no attempt to account for these sprightly shifts. It is sufficient to make mention of them and permit the earnest reader to arrive at his own deductions.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Isn't it about time that someone made a fuss about the dangerous condition of things at the Peterborough Lock, for small boats? It is almost impossible for a person to pass up or down, in a small boat, without going round the end of the breakwater, where the current is very swift. A few years ago, a very largely signed petition was handed to Mr Burnham, asking the Government to fix the canoe slide, and put in a breakwater. All we got was a few rollers to make it more convenient for people to take the risk of being drowned at the end of the breakwater. It would cost only a small sum to make a breakwater from the canoe slide to the present breakwater, cut a channel through it for small boats, which would do away with all danger from the current. There have been a number of upsets at the end of the present breakwater, which culminated in a brother officer of Mr. Burnham's being drowned, last Sunday, which in all probability would not have happened had the place been fixed as it should have been after that petition was sent in. Perhaps after a few more are drowned, the Trent Valley officials will realise they had better fix the place.

Yours sincerely,
A. REID,
Lansdowne Street,
Peterborough, June 3, 1916.

To the Mayor and Council:

Gentlemen,— As the position of Sanitary Inspector is still in abeyance I would like to put a respectful suggestion. This office, although not the highest paid by your, honourable body, it is one of the most important in the city. Our health, and consequently our lives, are to a large extent dependent upon the intelligent and honest work of the Inspector. This officer is under direct instructions from the M. H. O. and does or should, daily consult with him. This job should be awarded to a man of integrity and with fine years of experience that would enable him to use intelligent methods. I would suggest that former Sanitary Inspector Ball be consulted before you attain a final decision. He is not, I understand, an applicant for the position, but has had experience of the work.

Yours truly,
SANITAS.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—Some people nowadays seem to be obsessed by a desire to tear down the fabrics of civilization and change the laws of nature. Their latest fad is to improve the laws regulating the celestial bodies and put new life into the solar system so that the sun may establish a new record and beat its own time by one hour. They have the audacity to bid the sun stand still or slip a clog. When they tell us that we shall gain our daylight hour in the morning by their altered plan and have another daylight hour in the evening for recreation, they should not be taken seriously or else put in a place of safe-keeping. Even were it possible, just imagine the confusion it would create if their crazy ideas were put into operation. What would become of all the activites of life with its multifarious business? It would run counter to all statutory hours, including governamental business. If the Council were to assume the functions of Parliament and supersede their laws, their action would be condemned as ultra vires, and they would be made to look foolish.

Why should such a crazy proposition require a moment's considera-tion? It has only been agitated in a few isolated spots, but not in the great business centres, and has always been invariably turned down without being seriously considered. It would be ruinous to the best interests of this city if we were to adopt it, and thus isolate ourselves from the country as a whole.

There is nothing in our laws to prevent any one, or every one for that matter, to rise an hour earlier in the morning, and to retire an hour earlier in the evening if they so desire.

They say nothing of the extra hours of darkness it would entail on the hard working man in a cold wintry morning.

No man should be asked to go to work before 8 a.m., and eight hours work should be the limit, but it appears that the present ten-hour system does not satisfy the slave-drivers.—Yours, etc.,

Uniformity.

at present in Peterborough, heard with deep regret of the death of Pte. Geo. Robinson. The later was a prime favourite in the battalion. In the last few days there have been three local members of the 39th reported killed.

Sergt. Scaright, of the 93rd Battalion, who has been in hospital here undergoing an operation, is now able to be out. He will report at Kingston in a short time.

Pte. Walter M. Robinson, son of Mr. T. W. Robinson, 525 Weller street, is another Peterborough boy to enlist elsewhere. He joined the 199th Battalion and afterwards, to get overseas quicker, transferred to the 39th. The transfer took place on Tuesday and three days after he was on his way to the front. The number of Peterborough men enlisting outside as reported to the Examiner, has now reached a total of 350.

The Kingston Whig says: In spite of the fact that the battalions came to Barriefield Camp during the period the last recruiting return was being made up, Military District No. 3 continued with a high rate of recruits for the overseas units. In those two weeks 726 recruits were secured which under the circumstances such as season of the year, etc., is considered very satisfactory.

The warm weather, prosperous condition and resulting amount of labour for new works and many other reasons are attributed to the slight falling off in the number of recruits coming into the ranks. Nevertheless this district is keeping ahead of the others in point of proportionate number secured and before long the allotment for the half million men of Canada will have been secured.

The number of men of this district who have enlisted is far higher in proportion to that of any other military district in Canada. No other district is as near to having enlisted its quota of the Premiers' half million.

When that 500,000 was asked for thirteen per cent. of the total population of males was planned for the Canadian Expeditionary Force. This per centage is based on the last census of Canada, which gave a total of 3,821,067 males. With a population of 310,235 males in this district the thirteen per cent. asked for amounts to 40,330. The latest report issued shows that 33,389 have already comforward and it should not be long before the remaining 7,000 men are in uniform.

The announcement from Ottawa that troopships carrying the 78th 80th, Belleville, 86th, Hamilton, and 92nd, Toronto, Battalions, have arrived safely in England, will be welcome news in Peterborough. There are fifteen Peterborough men in the 80th, including Capt. R. E. Layfield, the Quarter-master, while there are a number in the 86th Machine Gun Battalion of Hamilton, and the 92nd Highlanders of Toronto. Capt. M. M Robinson, son of Mr. W. S. Robinson, of this city, being with the former.

A Cobourg paper says: Yesterday four members of the 139th Battalion deserted from Kingston. Word was sent here, and Constable Campbell caught two of them, and expects to get the other two. They will be held here until an escort arrives to take them back to Kingston.

The following notes about the 93rd Battalion appear in the Kingston Standard:

Captain Rollins, who attended the P.S.I. course at the camp last summer, is back again this summer as Quartermaster of the 93rd Battalion.

Captain Burnham, M.P., of Peterborough, is Paymaster of the 93rd Battalion. The Captain took the P.S.I. course at Barriefield last summer.

The 93rd was paid yesterday. Captain Burnham had the men paraded in the open air for their cheques.

The 93rd Battalion Band had a good practice yesterday afternoon, and discoursed a programme of the very best music.

Barriefield War Camp, Thursday, June 1.—Yesterday was a glorious day in camp, and this morning with the bright sun and the cool air, the men were out early and as full of mischief as the average school boy. Everything in camp was astir at six o'clock and long before this hour the smoke could be seen curling upward from every cookal kitchen in camp, as the cooks prepared the first meal of the day. Men are building tent floors of digging ditches to save them from water pools and mud puddles when another big rain fall comes.

The Kingston Standard Says:

The battalions in camp are spending their own money for comforts in the way of tent floors, which is hardly the square thing to ask a soldier to do, the men who go out to fight for his country, and leaves all that is dear to him behind, should be given at least the absolute necessities.

The following is from the Kingston Standard:—

Every battalion that comes into camp looks the best. Every band claims to be the best. They are all good battalions and bands, and it is hard to draw the line. It is astonishing to look at the fine class of men in all parts of the camp, and one is compelled to wonder where in the world they were all secured. Canada never recruited better material than is to-day in Barriefield camp, and these men will make a name for themselves and for the 3rd Military District.

Hurry and worry are twin foes to rounded curves. An excellent motto for a thin woman to adopt is—"Do not trouble trouble till trouble troubles you."

Travel from one to two years free in your Ford on your saving in one year's depreciation

Other cars in the $1000 or less class, after one year of service, are worth from $250 to $400 less than their purchased price. That's their depreciation.

Ford cars, after a year's hard work, sell on an average for only $125 less than they cost brand new. That's Ford depreciation.

The difference in depreciation of these year-old cars ranges from $125 in the one case to $275 in the other—both considerable savings for Ford owners.

Thousands of owners tell us that it costs .024 per mile on an average to drive a Ford—paying for gasoline, oil, tires and repairs.

So, if your saving in depreciation for a year is $125 you pay all your expenses for 5,208 miles—while if it is $275, you have kept enough money in your pocket to pay for driving your Ford 11,458 miles.

Buying a Ford in preference to other less than $1,000 cars, lets you save in one year's time a difference in depreciation that pays all your motoring bills for from one to two years.

British Extend Prohibition to Carpet Sweepers, Cash Registers and Lawn Mowers

LONDON, June 3.—A royal proclamation issued to-day extends the list of articles the importation of which is prohibited, except under special license. The new prohibitions will become effective on June 8, and include carpet sweepers, cash registers, lawn mowers, sewing machines, stoves and ranges, wringers and manglers, toilet articles containing glycerine, metal bathtubs, beer, hops matches, aluminum goods and leather goods, except belting, boots, shoes and gloves.

The prohibition which had been imposed on the importation of starch dextrin, farina and potato flour has been removed.

Veterans Muster To Celebrate

Last night, like the witches of Macbeth, the Veterans' Association of Peterborough met "in thunder, lightning and in rain" to celebrate the semi-centennary of the Battle of Ridgeway, June 2nd, 1866. In spite of the threatening weather, undaunted by the curtain of fire spread by the celestial artillery, about fifteen of the veterans met in their quarters in the Armouries.

A very substantial mess menu was provided by Coleman Bros. After this had been put utterly to rout the feast of reason and the flow of soul was spread.

Col. Miller, President, occupied the chair, and a very pleasant programme of songs and speeches was presnted to each other by the assembled veterans. The desert consisted of reminiscences. Like the soldier in Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," each veteran "shouldered his crutch and showed how fields were won," and demonstrated how much greater pluck it demanded to turn out for the war in '66 than in the present little scrap. Thanks be, however, we must take the veterans seriously. If they didn't save the country from any very serious danger fifty years ago, they showed a gallant willingness to put up a mighty stiff fight if it had been necessary.

WAITE RELATIVES TO SEEK APPEAL

NEW YORK, June 3.—Relatives of Dr. Arthur Warren Waite will appeal his case, which means that the death sentence probably will not be executed for many months. As a consequence the prisoner is quoted as saying that he is disappointed.

"Since I have to go, the sooner the better," the prisoner said. However, Waite seemed to pass yesterday happily, writing a statement which he intends to make public dealing with his "life of crime" and reading the New Testament. He refused to see newspapermen, but sent out a note saying that he was fairly well contented. He wants, however, to go to the death house in Sing Sing pending the appeal of his case, where, he says, he can have some place and be away from every one.

The prisoner's only callers yesterday were Walter R. Deuel, his counsel and Frank A. Waite, his brother. When the lawyer left his client's cell he said in reply to questions that he would appeal Waite's case, basing his appeal on the exceptions in the evidence during the trial and on the charge of the Justice. Waite was sentenced to die by Justice Shearn on Thursday and taken at once to Sing Sing. His appeal would act as a stay of sentence.

A despatch from Grand Rapids stated that Clyde Waite, Dr Waite's brother had arrived there and said that the case would be appealed regardless of the prisoner's attitude.

In this connection Mr. Deuel denied emphatically a report that he and his client were at "outs" because the prisoner did not want an appeal taken.

A good way to serve the left-over chicken is to make a biscuit crust the same as for old-fashioned short cake. Spread the chicken between, and pour gravy on the whole

Disappears At Her Own Dance, Back a Bride

Miss Anna Cecelia Haines and Mr. Richard Stuart Otto Surprise the Guests

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 3.—Miss Anna Elizabeth Cecilia Haines and Mr. Richard Stuart Otto were mised Wednesday at midnight during a dance given by her at her home, in Hillside avenue, Huguenot Park. When they returned in a taxicab twenty minutes later the young woman exhibited a wedding ring and announced the marriage. They had slipped away to St. Joseph's Catholic church, near the Haines home, and were married by the Rev. Pasquale Mannelly, the rector. The only ones in the secret were Miss Theresa Haggerty and Norbert Haines, who attended them. Mr. and Mrs. Otto have gone to Narragansett Pier for their honeymoon and will live in New Rochelle.

Mrs. Otto is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur A. Haines. Her father is an officer in the Naval Militia. Mr. Otto is a son of Mr. Albert T. Otto, vice president of the International Motor Company and a wealthy resident of Scarsdale. A SUBMARINE TRADE FLEET

British Experts See No Reason Why Submarines Shouldn't Cross Ocean.

LONDON, June 3.—The feasibility of a German submarine merchant fleet is not discounted in naval circles here. On the contrary, there is believed to be no reason why it should not be attempted. It is even suggested that Prince Von Buelow, if he desires to go upon a mission to the United States, as rumoured recently, may cross the Atlantic in a submarine, which would achieve a spectacular effect. He would also avoid the risk of refusal of a safe conduct by the British.

There is a report that a trans-Atlantic submarine has been built at Stettin and that it will shortly proceed on a sea voyage from Hamburg. The report is not discredited here. The estimated length of the boat is 450 feet, and the craft is said to be able to remain at sea for twenty days without touching port.

Naval authorities regard this as possible, as a British submarine went forty-eight days without touching port, moving all the time.

An interesting situation would arise if the boats carried passengers, the chief question being whether they would be warned and whether the safety of the passengers would be guaranteed in case the U boats encountered allied warships.

"Obey" in Marriage Service Now Very Nearly Obsolete

BUFFALO, June 3.—Not many of this year's crop of June brides need to promise to obey, as well as love and honour the man of her choice. The word has been deleted from the ceremony by almost all church denominations. It is not a part of the Roman Catholic church service and most of the Protestant churches do not use it, although the matter of the ceremony is largely left to the discretion of the minister.

But even if there be a June bride whose minister insists on the word "obey," she can be very legally and economically, if not ornately, married by a City court judge without making the hateful promise.

The Rev. Robert J. MacAlpine, pastor of Central Presbyterian church, who is delivering a series of sermons on the subject of marriage, was outspoken in his opposition to the use of the word when questioned yesterday.

Says Both Should Promise.

"If the women should be made to promise to obey, the man should be made also," he said. "What we want nowadays is co-operation rather than obedience, and the domination that that implies. The advancement of woman has put her in a position where she will no longer stand for 'obey' part of it. It ought not to be used."

Ministers of other Protestant denominations said that it was generally in the discretion of the officiating clergyman whether it should be used or not, and most of them were of Dr. MacAlpine's opinion that it is a thing of the past.

Won't Stick, Anyway.

"Perhaps some brides would want it," said the Rev. L. O. Williams pastor of the First Universal church. "But then there are others who would not want it. The essential thing is not the form. The thing is to get them pronounced husband and wife."

One husband, of several years standing, was of the opinion yesterday that the married men generally would regard the dropping of the word the ceremony as small loss.

"If you know anything about marriage," he averred "you should know that the stipulation was like a faulty vaccination—it didn't take."

GIRL AIDS ORPET SUICIDE THEORY

Chum of Marion Lambert Says Girl Friends Expected She Would End Her Life.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., June 3.—Dorothy Mason, one of the witnesses to be called by the defence in the Orpet murder case and a chum of Marion Lambert, the slain girl, says she will testify that the girl's friends expected she would end her own life by poisoning.

"Those who were close to Marion knew she contemplated suicide," Miss Mason told a friend Thursday night. "She took her own life in the presence of William in order to implicate him. We girls were not surprised, knowing her jealousy of Celeste Youkker. I know William is innocent of the crime. He will have his innings when the evidence is presented."

Joseph Hartmann's tale of his knowledge of a plot by Orpet to rid himself of one of "his girls" seems to have been broken down completely. Since making the statement Hartmann has disappeared.

No more jurors were obtained Thursday, though 1,005 have been summoned. The State has five peremptory challenges remaining, the defence six.

Man Held As Girl Is Found Slain

She Shot Herself, Declares Her Companion, Arrested in Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., June 3. — James O'Brien, twenty-one years old, of No. 174 Pine street, who was arrested early will be arraigned to-morrow morning, according to Chief Inspector William F. O'Neil, on a charge of murder of Beatrice Walter, nineteen years, who was found shot dead in a field near Fields Point early this morning.

O'Brien insists the girl shot herself after a quarrel He is said by the police to have admitted that the revolver found a few feet from where the body lay, is his own, which he carried for protection because he has but one arm.

The two left the girl's home between half past seven and eight o'clock last evening. When found the girl, according to Medial Examiner Clifford S. Griffin, must have been dead several hours. This is believed to put the time of the tragedy at about ten o'clock. Near the scene of the shooting were found a box of chocolates with one piece bitten off and a slipper. It is thought that O'Brien may have attempted to carry the girl after the shooting, and, being unable to do so, left her there and that one of her slippers fell off.

O'Brien told Mr. Walter, as related by the father to Medical Examiner Griffin, that the girl tried to take the revolver away from him and it exploded, one bullet entering her right breast. All five bullets had been discharged when the police found the revolver, however. O'Brien's story, as quoted by the police, follows:

"Beatrice and I left her home between quarter of eight and eight o'clock last night and took a short walk down Maryland Avenue to Allens avenue, and up through the fort over the hill. Then we sat down. I don't remember now all that we talked about, but I know we did talk of a lot of things during the evening. We were sitting on the edge of the slope of the hill and I was looking over the harbour. About that time I took the gun out of my pocket and showed it to her. She took it in her hand, and, as I turned away to look at the harbour, said:

"Oh, Jim, wouldn't it be great if we could die here together."

"I said, 'Yes, I suppose so,' in a half serious way and the next thing I knew was that she had shot herself.'

"I was scared and grabbed the gun, firing two shot at myself, neither of which took effect as the buckle on my belt turned both bullets. The shock stunned me for a few minutes, but when I came to and saw Beatrice lying there, I realised what would happen and knew I would be suspected.

"I fired two shots in the air to attract attention, and when no one came I ran to Beatrice's home and notified her father and we went and found her. That's all I know about it. I don't know why she shot herself and I didn't know she was going to do it."

Generals Mercer of Toronto, and Williams of Port Hope, are missing. The German losses are said to be extremely heavy.

Woman Pleads Guilty To Sending Poison To Man in Cream Puffs

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 3. — Mrs. Hattie E. Oakley, alias Hattie E. Merrill, in the Superior Court retracted her plea of not guilty to a charge of murder of Almand Vadeboncoeur, in Woonsocket, and pleaded guilty to a charge of murder in the second degree. She was sentenced by Judge Sweeney to a term of twenty years' imprisonment.

Mrs. Oakley's action followed testimony produced by the State to the effect that jealousy prompted her to purchase arsenic in a Woonsocket drug store the day before the cream puffs, containing the poison, were sent to Henry Cassavant and eaten by him and Vadeboncoeur. Testimony also showed that several persons had seen Cassavant receive and open the package, eat one of the puffs himself and give another to Vadeboncoeur.

Handwriting experts testified that the writing on the wrapper of the package in which the puffs had been sent to Cassavant was the same as that on a paper on which Mrs. Oakley had written in Police Headquarters, at the request of Chief of Police Coe, of Woonsocket.

Mrs. Oakley's plea was unexpected. The State expected to conclude its evidence Thursday, with the exception of that off Henri Cassavant, who is in a serious condition at his home in Woonsocket.

MRS. OAKLEY ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

WOMAN IN PROVIDENCE FACES CHARGE OF SENDING POISONED CREAM PUFFS TO MAN.

Providence, R. I., June 3.—Mrs. Hattie E. Oakley was placed on trial to-day before Judge Sweeney on a charge of murder in causing the death of Almand Vadeboncoeur, of Woonsocket, by poisoned cream puffs sent through the mail. Henri Cassavant, to whom the cakes were sent, shared them with his friend Vadeboncoeur, and the latter died, while Cassavant, escaping death, will be a paralytic the rest of his life. A jury was impanelled and the Assistant Attorney General made the opening address.

Mrs. Oakley, who sat at her counsel's table dressed in black, took a keen interest in all that went on. Her mother and daughter sat in the back part of the court room.

Physicians testified regarding poison being the cause of Vadeboncoeur's death and the State Chemist, Stephen De M. Gage, told of examing parts of Vadeboncoeur's body

Physician Tries To Kill Wife

New York, June 3.—"She told me all about her affair with another man, and so I decided that the only thing I could do was to kill her," the police quoted Dr. Samuel Einters as saying after he had called them to his home, at No. 907 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, to find his wife who had been stabbed three times, and who was near death, with a chloroform cloth on her face.

"We had a scene last night," the police say the physician told them. "She told me all about her love for another man, and at the time I thought I would get over it. But I could not sleep all night, and this morning I was nearly crazy because of what she told me. You know we were married only three years, and we have a fine little boy, Samuel, two years old. I hope he won't know.

"Well, the matter did not bother my wife much. She slept soundly, and wanted to sleep all day to-day. So I thought the only thing I could do was to kill her. I got my sharpest scalpel and went into her bedroom. She was asleep and I stabbed her, aiming for her heart. She did not scream much but I stabbed her a couple more times in the side to make sure. Then to make doubly sure I saturated a cloth with chloroform, put it on her face and then put the pillow on top. Then I telephoned to the Veron avenue police station to come."

When eDtective Thomas Farrell reached the house he found Dr. Einters in his shirt sleeves calmly smoking a cigar. "You will find my wife in there," he said, jerking his head toward the bedroom. Farrell found Mrs. Einters as he said he had left her, with a pillow over her head, a strong odor of chloroform in the room and three stab wounds in the body. She was sent to St. John's Hospital, where it was said she probably would die.

Neighbors say that they heard the physician and his wife quarrelling the night before and that later he had said his wife has driven him frantic by what she had told him. Dr. Einters, who was locked up on a charge of felonious assault, is 26 years old, and his wife 21. She is said to have been exceptionally attractive.

Eyes of French Soldiers Burned Out By German Liquid Fire

New York Woman Tells of Experiences in French Hospitals—Molten Amber Used to Restore Flesh That Had Been Burned Away.

New York, June 2.—Walking and crawling through the French trenches near Rheims, a luncheon in that city, with nearby houses disappearing under German shell fire, and a tour of the French munition factories and hospitals, were experiences of Mrs. Margaret M. Crumpacker, of this city which followed her crossing of the English channel aboard the ill-fated Sussex, attacked a few weeks later by a German submarine's torpedo.

Most unusual of all she saw in four months in France was a method of healing burns and rebuilding flesh over wounds caused by the liquid fire and burning tar the Germans are using in their trench warfare.

Dr. Barthe de Sandfort, a Russian noble, discover of this treatment, with a preparation of wax he has named sembrine, treats all who apply, and is devoting his services without price to the cause of France and her defenders as are so many of many lands besides the French.

"It was the most amazing thing I ever witnessed," Mrs. Crumpacker said yesterday. "The treatment consists of application of liniment to the wounds. They are truly awful. The burning tar and liquid fire use' by the Germans not only burn when they touch but seem to hold and corrode the flesh.

"Wax, which when cold, is of amber hue, is heated to a temperature of 240 degrees Centigrade and applied with a soft brush at first and then is poured on the wound. When they told me it did not burn I could not believe it but Dr. Sandfort assured me and asked me to put my fingers in the boiling stuff to prove what he said. I did so and it did not burn my flesh at all.

VICTIM'S EYES WERE RED HOLES.

"I saw a poor French soldier from the front at Verdun brought in for treatment. He had been burned by the liquid fire 36 hours before his arrival in Paris. His eyes were mere red holes and the flesh had been burned from his chin and his cheek bones. The bones showed bare. The poor man was writhing in frightful agony. They applied the liniment and the hot wax with brushes and then poured it on until it covered his wounds to the depth of nearly half an inch.

"Within ten minutes he was asleep and his pain evidently had gone. They gave him no opiates. They remove the wax, which peels off like paper, every six hours, and pour on a new application. I saw this man several times and witnessed the astounding renewal of flesh over his wounds. Within two weeks I saw flesh covering his cheek bones where there had been none. Flesh again covered his chin, and his beard was growing through it.

The treatment seemed to make the sound flesh around the burned place grow and extend itself over the bare places.

"The most wonderful thing in France are the women. One always has had a notion that the French are by nature frivolous. They are doing all the work of France to-day that they can find to do. None but women are seen working on the land anywhere. I found this true of England, too.

"Through the courtesy of the Minister of Munitions I was permitted to go through the munitions factories, and was told that that privilege had not been extended previously to any woman. Workers in those factories I saw were in the proportion of 67 women, 10 boys, and 23 men unfit for military service for every hundred workers.

"Soldiers rendered unfit for work with the armies are loaned to the private manufacturers of munitions who pay the government from $2 to $3 a day for their services.

"Out of this the government pays the men their regular service wages, and gives half the remainder to the soldier's family, retaining the other half, which almost invariably is charged off to the manufacturer for the purchase of ammunition.

"In this way France obtains enormous sums for its war supplies provides for its disabled soldiers and their families and utilizes for her defence a part of the profit from munitions manufacture. One private maker of ammunition whose establishment I went over, is turning out 100,000 75 centimetre shells a day, employing none but women, boys and disabled soldiers in the proportion I have mentioned

WOMEN AT FORGE AND LATHE.

"The women work at forge and lathe as well as the simpler parts of shell making. They work in two 12 hour shifts and the output is going on without ceasing.

"No one can go about in Europe today and not realize that lack of preparedness to resist foreign aggression is the depth of ignorance or stupidity."

Vegetables that contain little starch, such as onions, carrots, turnips, tomatoes and cabbage, can be eaten by stout people without fear of gaining flesh.

The steel rod from an old umbrella or parasol will make an excellent plant supporter next summer, and if painted green will look well. The ribs, too, may be brought into use for a similar service.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

Half an hour behind Schofield came the Burns boat, but in that time Code Schofield had already hurried ashore in his dory and clinched his sale price with Bill Boughton, who also assured him of the bonus offered for the first vessel in.

Like Code, the first thing Nat did, when his schooner had come up into the wind with jib and foresail on the run was to take a dory ashore. In it, besides himself, was a man. These two encountered Code just as he came out of Boughton's store.

The second, who was tall and broad-shouldered, threw back his coat and displayed a government shield. Then he laid his hand on Code's arm.

"Captain Schofield," he said, "you are under arrest!"

CHAPTER XXIX.
A FATAL LETTER

For the last of many days the lighthouse keeper had watched from his aerie for the coming of the fleet—and had not been disappointed.

His horse and buggy stood by the tower doorstep and into it he leaped whipping up the horse with the same motion. Then down the river he had flown like Paul Revere rousing the villagers, and followed by an excited, half-hysterical procession of women and children.

So thick had been the murk and mist that he had only caught sight of the approaching leader while she was a bare two miles off the point, and even when Nat had landed the crowd was momentarily being augmented from all the houses along the King's Road and as far south as Castalia.

When the officer of the law had his hand on Code's arm and spoke the words that meant imprisonment and disgrace in the very heart of the village festival, a groan went up that caused the officer to look sharply whom him.

Despite the work Nat had done on his brief stop at the head, Code was the hero of the day, for he had come in with the first cargo of fish and had won the distinction of being the first to effect the salvation of the island.

"Oh, let him go!" said a voice. "He ain't goin' to run away!" Nat, standing behind his captive, turned sharply upon the offender.

"No; you bet he ain't," he snapped. "He's been doin' that too long already. He's got somethin' to answer for this time."

Into the harbor at this time swept the Tanners' Rogan, and abreast of her the steamer from St. John's. Five minutes behind came Jed Martin's Herring Bone, and the first of the fleet was safely in.

As the discontented and muttering mob followed Code toward the little jail back of the Odd Fellows' Hall, none noticed that the lively schooner that had led the procession in was stealing quietly out again into the thick of the gale.

And those who did notice just thought nothing of it in the excitement of the moment, probably judging her to be some coaster who had run in to look for a leak. She had been tied up just ten minutes at the Mallaby wharf.

As the sorry procession passed the Schofield cottage, Code's mother ran out sobbing and threw herself upon him. She had not seen her son before (although orphan Josie had told her the Lass was in), for Code had been closeted with Boughton, and now her first glimpse of him was as an accused criminal.

But regardless of watching eyes and public opinion, she walked all the way to the jail with him and went inside, and the two were absolutely oblivious to their surroundings, so overjoyed were they to see each other and so intimate was their companionship.

Along the edge of the crowd great Pete Ellinwood slouched, looking with dimmed eyes at mother and son.

"Ain't she the mother, though?" he said to himself. "Just like a girl she is—not a day past thirty by her looks!"

The jailer, who was regularly employed as janitor of the Free Baptist Church, opened the little house for his unexpected guest. It consisted of a room, fitted for sleeping, and a cell. These were not connected, but were side by side, facing the passage that ran through from front to back of the building.

Code was taken to the cell, and only his mother and Pete stayed with him to talk over the situation. It was determined to have Squire Hardy come over in the evening (it was now five o'clock) and give his opinion on the legal situation.

Ma Schofield went home and prepared her boy's supper herself, and brought it with her own hands for him to eat. Code was in the best of spirits at his success of the afternoon, and had no fear whatever as to the outcome of his present situation.

Pete had gone away for an hour, and Ma Schofield had taken the dishes back home, when the detective came in, saying that a little girl who called herself "Josie" had come with a message.

Code asked to see her, and the great-eyed, dark little thing went bitterly over him, for to her fourteen years he represented all the heroes of romance. Even as she passed him the message she knew that she could never love again and that she would shortly die of a broken heart.

Code kissed her, promptly forgot her presence, and opened the note.

It was from Elsa.

"Will be down to see you to-night at eight. Have sent a note to Nat in your name, telling him to be there, too. I think we have him on the hip, so be sure and have the squire and the officer present."

Code wondered vaguely how they had Nat on the hip, as he had been unable to find a single iota of proof to push home the case he and Elsa had built up against him.

The note brought him stark awake and eager for the conference. He had begun to drowse after a good home dinner and sixty hours without sleep, but this acted like an electric shock. He was keen and alert, for he knew that this was the night of his destiny. Either he should triumph as he had in the grueling race, or he should have to face the ignominy of transfer and legal proceedings at St. Andrew's.

At half-past seven Squire Hardy, his round, red face fringed by snowy whiskers, came in. He dragged a chair into the passageway in front of the bar and was beginning a long and laborious law opinion when the detective, who had been to Mis' Shannon's boarding-house for dinner, returned.

The two began to fight the matter out between them when, at a quarter to eight, Nat came in, dressed in his best clothes and smoking a land cigar.

"Well, what do you want of me, Schofield?" he asked. "You sent for me, but you needn't try to beg off. I won't listen to it. Now, go ahead."

On the instant a feminine voice was heard outside, and a moment later Elsa Mallaby stepped into the little four-foot passage.

"Oh, how many there are here!" she said in a surprised voice. "Perhaps, Code, I had better wait until later."

"Hey, Roscoe!" sung out Code, hardly able to control his desire to grin. "Bring Mrs. Mallaby a chair." Roscoe obeyed and added two more, so that all were placed within a small compass just outside Code's cell.

From Elsa Mallaby's first entrance Nat had observed her with a certain flicker of fear and hatred in his eyes. She, on the other hand, greeted him with the same formal cordiality she had used toward the others. Though utterly incongruous in such surroundings, she seemed absolutely at her ease and instantly assumed command of the situation.

"Excuse me," said Nat, who had not sat down and shifted from one foot to the other, "but Schofield sent for me, an' I would like to find out what he wants. I've got to go along."

"Schofield didn't send for you—I sent for you. There are several things about this imprisonment of Code that don't look right to me, and we may as well settle the whole business once and for all while we are here together. Now, Mr. Durkee," she said, turning to the detective, "would you mind telling me what the charge is against Captain Schofield?"

"To tell you the truth, ma'am," said he respectfully, "there are two charges out against him. One, by the insurance company, sues for recovery of money paid on the schooner May Schofield, and charges that the said schooner was sunk intentionally, first because Schofield wanted a newer boat, and second because the policy of the May was to expire in a few days and could not have been renewed except at a much advanced rate."

"And the other charge?"

"Is for murder in the first degree, growing out of the intentional sinking of the schooner. Captain Burns is the complainant."

"Thank you." She flashed one of her radiant smiles at him and made him a friend for life.

"That was a great race to-day," she remarked irrelevantly, but with enthusiasm. "How much did you beat the Nettie B, Code?"

"A half an hour," he replied, mystified at the turn of the conversation.

"Well, that is a coincidence." She looked from one to the other. "It's exactly the same amount of time he beat you seven months ago when he raced the old May against the M. C. Burns, isn't it?" Her glance shot to Nat.

"Why, I believe it is, Mrs. Mallaby," he stammered. The quick transition to that painful and dangerous period had caught him off his guard.

"That was a great race, too," she said cheerfully, "and it's too bad you never gained the second one especially after you wanted so bet so much. You thought you would win the second race, didn't you, Nat?" She was sweetness itself.

"Why, yes, I thought so" he admitted guardedly. "But I don't see what all this has got to do—"

"Well, it hasn't very much," she said deprecatingly, "but I was just interested. What made you so sure you would win that second race that you tried to bet?"

"Oh, I don't know," he answered easily. "I just had confidence—"

"In what, Nat Burns? Your schooner had easily been beaten the first time and she was notoriously slower than the May. Every one in the island knows that you can't sail a vessel like Code Schofield can, and that you are afraid to carry sail. Today proved it. Anybody with half an eye could see that that mayn't was cut with a knife and didn't blow off. All these things being so, what made you so sure that you would win that race seven months ago?"

Nat looked at her steadily. His nervousness had gone, apparently, and he was his old crafty self once more.

"That is none of your business, Mrs. Mallaby," he said insolently. "And now if you'll let me pass I'll keep an engagement."

"Mr. Durke," she said, "please keep Mr. Burns here until we have entirely finished."

"Yes, ma'am, I will," said the hypnotized man, and Nat, after a glare around upon the unsympathetic audience slumped down into a chair and smoked sullenly.

"Steady as she goes my friend," broke in Squire Hardy, looking at Nat. "Answer the lady's question. What made you think you would win?"

"I refuse to answer."

"He really doesn't need to answer," said Elsa. "I will answer for him. Code kindly let me have the log of the M. C. Burns."

Schofield drew the old book from his pocket and handed it through the bars. Then Elsa, opening it to the last pages, read aloud the few entries that Code had discovered that day when he was a prisoner aboard the Nettie B. As she read the silence was intense, but all eyes were upon Nat, who, startled at the sudden appearance of this document he had so long forgotten, chewed savagely upon his dead cigar. His face had grown pale and his rough hands were clasped tightly together.

"You see," said Elsa, when she had finished, "that Burns had determined upon the winning of his next race. It is perfectly clear, is it not?"

The breathless circle nodded.

It was a strange setting for the working out of the drama. Overhead a suspended oil-lamp flamed and smelled. Outside the crash of surf against the rocks came to them, and the wind whistled about the eaves of the little stone building.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GIRLS SLAIN

ATLANTA, Ga., June 3.—The charge that Victor Innes murdered Eloise Nelms Dennis and Beatrice Nelms, dissolved their bodies in lye and ground their bones to powder in a sausage grinder, was made by Solicitor General Dorsey in the first session of the trial of Innes before Judge B. H. Hill on the charge of larceny after trust of $4,000 from Mrs. Dennis, whose disappearance two years ago with her sister is an unsolved mystery.

The charge brought a quick and vigorous objection from the defence which Judge Ben Hill sustained. J. K. Hines for the defence, declared the State was trying to prejudice the jury.

"The State must first lay its foundation," said Judge Hill. "It must first show that Innes fraudulently diverted the money in question from its proper use. When that is established the court will be inclined to admit evidence as to the alleged murder."

The dramatic moment arrived when Solicitor Dorsey put upon the witness stand B. W. Mitchell, a cousin of the Nelms girls, who formerly lived in Portland, Ore., and was there when the Innes couple were arrested on the Texas warrant charging murder. Mitchell began to tell about the arrest of Innes, when Judge Hines objected saying, "The defendant is not on trial for murder."

Pointing to a sausage grinder on the stenographer's desk in the court room, Solicitor Dorsey said:—

"The State intends to prove that the bones of these girls were ground up in that thing; that Innes had two of them purchased in San Antonio, and one of them, greasy with the blame, was put in a box and shipped to Portland, where it was sent around to different addresses."

Mrs. John W. Nelms, mother of the missing girls then testified that Eloise Nelms Dennis became infatuated with Innes when the latter acted as attorney in obtaining a divorce from Eloise from Dennis in Reno, Nevada. She swore Innes had received large sums from Eloise.

Mrs. Nelms was greatly excited and referred to Innes as "that demon" until Judge Hill ordered her to desist. Court adjourned with Mrs. Nelms on stand.

Mrs. Innes is under indictment with her husband but will be tried separately.

SANG LIKE FROG AT DAWN.
Reason Kansas Family Disposed of Pet Alligator.

Because after five years as a pet of the family the alligator of Mrs. Elmer Forbes, of north of Topeka, Kan., insisted on standing up on its hind feet in the Forbes yard at 4 o'clock in the morning and singing like a frog Mrs. Forbes gave the amphibian to the Gage Park Zoo.

The alligator was brought from Florida five years ago by the Forbes family. During the summer it was given the run of the yard. It is only recently, however, that the pet has turned to its nocturnal vocalizing for amusement. And the time it carried got on the nerves of the Forbes family.

The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue, but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. The sallow complexion tells him that your liver is not doing its work, the pimples tell him that the kidneys are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons.

You can apply this test in your own case and may be able to add other symptoms, such as headaches, pains and aches through back and limbs, spells of biliousness and indigestion.

If you have not used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will be surprised to find how quickly they will rid your system of poisonous impurities and thereby remove the cause of pains, aches and skin troubles.

Mrs. F. N. Hall, 108 Queen street, St. John, N.B., writes: "I am glad to say I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with splendid results. I was greatly troubled with constipation and pimples on the face. I tried other remedies and used liquid arsenic three times a day for a year to get rid of the pimples but received no benefit. I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and it was not very long before I was completely cured. The pills acted on the bowels, kidneys and liver and cleansed them of all impure matter. I think they cannot be beaten as a means of ridding a person of that tired aching due to weak kidneys, and I would not be without them in the house for any money."

TRAINING FOR THE ROYAL PRIESTHOOD

Time For Their Reign Is Near at Hand.

The New Nation Called Out of the World During the Gospel Age—Nearly Two Thousand Years Required for Their Preparation—Abraham's Royal Seed—Called From Jews and Gentiles—All Are Covenanters—A Covenant by Sacrifice—Time for Their Reign Near at Hand.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

New York City, June 4.—Pastor Russell spoke at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway, this evening. His discourse was based on 1 Peter 2:9—"But ye are a chosen generation, a Royal Priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should shew forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into His marvelous light." The Pastor said, in part:

The Apostle is contrasting those who accepted Jesus as the Messiah with those who rejected Him. The word generation seemingly is used in this text to signify a race. God first called the nation of Israel to be His chosen people, His holy nation. (Exodus 19: 5, 6.) For over eighteen hundred years they were trained under the Law, to demonstrate whether they were worthy to be God's people. But God foreknew that even with their best endeavors they could not keep His Law, because they were imperfect. He knew that they could never thus gain the prize of everlasting life. (Leviticus 18:5; Romans 10:5.) He had arranged, however, for the redemption of Israel and of all the world through the death of our Lord Jesus Christ; and He knew that the Mosaic Law would be the schoolmaster to lead the Israelites to Christ.—Galatians 3:24.

The Israelites hoped that God would make of them a great people, that eventually would rule the world as God's Kingdom. Because they were the natural seed of Abraham, they considered it a foregone conclusion that God's Promise to Abraham could apply to no others than themselves. They overlooked the fact that the true Seed of Blessing would have the faith, the heart obedience, of Abraham. The Jewish nation lacked this faith and obedience. When the Messiah came, long foretold by their holy prophets, they rejected Him and slew Him. Only a few, "Israelites indeed," of humble, teachable heart, received Him. But God had foreknown the rejection of His Son by the nation, and had prearranged that when the faithful few had been gathered from Israel, the call for this Seed class should go to the Gentiles.

In Jehovah's Plan this Abrahamic Seed of Blessing was to be composed of 144,000, 12,000 from each of the twelve tribes of Israel, under the headship of His Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Hence when the 20,000 or more Israelites who proved worthy had been brought into the Christian Church, the Gospel Message was sent to take out from the Gentiles a sufficient number to complete what was lacking from each tribe. These Gentiles thus became members of Spiritual Israel, all of whom have had the faith of faithful Abraham.

Spiritual Israel—A New Nation.

The Israelites having been rejected as regards the Gospel Call, a new nation was to be formed, composed of the faithful few from both Jews and Gentiles. God then opened up a new way of life, through Christ Jesus. (Hebrews 10:20.) The calling out and preparation of this new nation of Spiritual Israel has been the work of the Gospel Age. The way opened to them has not been a failure, as was the way opened for Natural Israel. The Gospel Church is "not under Law, but under grace." God's provision in Christ enables those to succeed who are walking in the new way to life. They keep the Divine Law in spirit, and the robe of Christ's merit covers all the imperfections and blemishes of their flesh which are unavoidable.

Those who were chosen from amongst the Jews became dead to the Law Covenant, under which their nation had been bound for over sixteen hundred years. Those who were chosen from amongst the Gentiles became dead to their former sins and wrong conditions. Together these became espoused to Christ, the middle wall of partition separating them having been broken down. They are to be the Bride of Christ. Those who constitute this Bride class lose all their former relationships as men, and become heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ. They are now New Creatures.—2 Corinthians 5:17.

The Kingly Priesthood.

It is to this class that St. Peter says, "Ye are a Royal Priesthood." The office of a king is to rule, to reign; the office of a priest is to teach, to heal, and to bless. These two offices are to be united in the work which this class is to perform when they shall have been exalted in the Kingdom. "Ye are a holy nation, a peculiar people," adds the Apostle. This class have become separated from all other people. They are strangers and pilgrims on the earth. With their Head, Christ Jesus, they are to constitute the New Government of Messiah's Kingdom, soon to be set up on the earth. It is not as human beings, however, that they are to reign, to teach, and to bless the peoples of the world, but as spirit beings, after their glorification in the First Resurrection.—Revelation 20: 4, 6.

For more than eighteen hundred years these royal priests have been in process of training, developing the character necessary to make them worthy and capable rulers of the next Age. The character tests applied to this company of prospective rulers are very rigid. They must first learn to judge and to govern themselves before they would be fit to judge and govern others. They are placed in the School of Christ to be taught of Him. They are to learn lessons of meekness, self-control, patience, faith, gentleness, sympathy, love. Without these important characteristics this class would not be able to deal properly with the sinful, fallen world. But if they have these qualities well developed, they will, the Apostle Peter tells us, have "an abundant entrance into the everlasting [age-lasting] Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."—2 Peter 1: 5-11.

Our Lord Jesus, who was perfect, learned obedience, we are told, by the things which He suffered. (Hebrews 5: 8, 9.) The finest quality of character can be developed in no other way. Therefore all who are to be associated with Him in the Messianic Kingdom work must suffer. If obedience were always easy, we could not learn what it really means. All who hope to be of the Kingdom class must develop faith and obedience from the very first. There can be no real growth without these characteristics; and they must continue to increase.

Jehovah's Peculiar Treasure.

This loyal class are indeed a peculiar people, and the Lord calls them so. This statement of our text has the meaning of an acquisition. The Lord has acquired these as something especially precious. To Israel of old He declared, "Now, therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed and keep My Covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people." We know that Natural Israel was a type of the Spiritual Israel of the Gospel Age; and that the Seed of Abraham who was to inherit the chiefest promises was to be his seed according to faith and not according to the flesh. This is clearly taught in the New Testament.—Romans 4: 14-16; 9: 6-8; Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

Accordingly, the twelve tribes of Israel who are really God's peculiar treasure are the twelve tribes of Spiritual Israel. (Revelation 7:1-4.)

These are the people who are keeping their covenant with the Lord. They are as dear to God as the apple of His eye. Nominal Christians are not included in this choice treasure. Saints alone are meant. Each one of this class has entered into a special covenant with the Lord—a covenant by sacrifice. (Psalm 50:5.) Their Lord and Master first made this covenant with the Father, and we are following in His steps.

All during the Gospel Age God has been gathering these, one by one. Not many great ones, not many mighty ones, are amongst them, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith. (1 Corinthians 1: 26-29; James 2:5.) These are to be the heirs of the Kingdom which God has promised to them that love Him. He is not gathering them to any sect or party, but to Himself. "Gather My saints together unto Me," is His command. He has not instructed us to gather the world to Him; for the world's time has not yet come. On the contrary, we are to seek the humble, teachable ones, those who hunger and thirst after righteousness.

Those now gathered to the Lord are all covenanters. No one can become a member of the Bride class who does not make this covenant by sacrifice and then live faithfully up to it. This covenant is an agreement to surrender our will fully to God, to consecrate to Him our entire life, with all that we have. Whoever comes to Him during this Gospel Age must come in this way. Whoever has not made that kind of covenant with God has not come into the Lord's family at all. God's terms are very definite. We are not to be afraid to yield ourselves wholly to God. His will for us is our very highest good. We are to remember that our Lord has said, "My grace is sufficient for thee; for My strength is made perfect in weakness." The Lord tells us through His Word that He knows that we are of the fallen race, that

The Holy Spirit Essential.

After we have given our will to God and have taken His will, we are then to take up our cross and follow the Master in the narrow way. (Matthew 16:24.) The Lord's people are to be just as narrow as His Word. "Strait [difficult] is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life"—the life now offered. If we walk with the Lord now, while sin is reigning in the world, we must walk a narrow way. Of this way the Master said, "Few there be that find it." —Matthew 7: 13, 14.

Those who will be of this class that follow the Master now must be willing and glad to suffer the loss of friends, of social standing, of all earthly hopes and prospects, for the sake of the Heavenly hopes and glories. All of this class will be guided by the Lord, by His Holy Spirit—not by hearing words spoken to their inner ear, not by impressions made upon their mind, but by the Word of God, the Bible, by the things written therein aforetime for our learning, our admonition. The Spirit of God operates through the inspired Word for the instruction of His people in the Truth.—1 Corinthians 10: 11; 2 Timothy 3: 16.

Why do we need to have the guidance of the Lord's Holy Spirit—His influence, His mind—in order to understand the Bible properly? It is because if we go to the study of the Bible with our own unaided reason, or if we go in a wrong spirit, we are sure to make a mistake and to get wrong views. But if we go prayerfully, in a spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, love, we are going in the right manner. Then, if previously begotten of the Holy Spirit, we shall understand the deep things of God. The Bible says that the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.—1 Corinthians 2: 9, 14.

St. Peter points out the fact that to some who profess to be the people of God our Lord Jesus and His cross become "a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense, even to them that stumble at the Word, being disobedient." (1 Peter 2: 7, 8.) This class lack humility and teachableness; they lack loyalty to God, and prefer their own theories, which minister to their pride. They are blinded by their own wrong condition of heart. To the humble and faithful, this Rock, which is a Stone of Stumbling to others, becomes a Refuge, a Support, a Stepping Stone to God.

Some Appointed to Stumble.

Aside from stumbling at the Cross of Christ, these unfaithful ones stumble at His teachings in general. The Master taught His disciples to love even their enemies. This unfaithful class do not wish to do this. They have not submitted their wills to the will of God, their minds to His mind. Hence they are always in conflict with Him and with His Plans.

Of those who profess to be God's people, but who are disobedient and who stumble at His Word, St. Peter says, "Whereunto they were appointed." What does this mean? Does God appoint that any of His people shall stumble? We answer, God does not design that any shall understand His Word at present except those who are wholly loyal and obedient. He does not wish the worldly-minded to see as yet. Unless one is in the right condition of heart, the Truth would do him harm; for it would greatly increase his responsibility. Of our Lord some said, "He hath a devil and is mad." The Master declared that if their eyes were really open to see, their sin would remain. (John 10: 19-21; 9: 39-41.) The whole world is stumbling and fighting against God; but being blinded by the Adversary and his sophistries and falsehoods, they are perhaps not so much to blame.

For us who have been enlightened, it would be a terrible thing to take the position which is now taken by practically the entire world, including the great majority of professed followers of Christ. On the day of Pentecost, when telling the Jews that they had been guilty of crucifying the Lord of Glory, the Apostle Peter declared that he believed that they had done it in ignorance, both they and their rulers. They were largely blinded by the Prince of Darkness; and hence there would be mercy for a many of these as would repent when they came to see their error and sin. From this we infer that the majority of people are not so culpable as they would be if they realized what they are doing.

Parallels of Experience.

During the Harvest of the Jewish Age God permitted the unfaithful Jewish nation to stumble, and gathered the faithful "Israelites indeed, in whom there was no guile," into the garner of the Christian Church, leaving the remainder to go into an appalling time of trouble and national overthrow. (Matthew 3: 11, 12; Luke 13: 34, 35; 21: 5, 6.) They must await in the tomb the judgment of the Day of Christ, and take their place with the world of mankind, who are then to be dealt with under the great Mediator whom God hath appointed. Likewise the professed people of God to-day, Nominal Christendom, are now coming into a great time of trouble and overthrow, incident to the establishment of the Mediatorial Kingdom of God's dear Son. During this struggle all present institutions and systems—social, ecclesiastical, financial, and industrial—will go down forever.

As to individuals, all must pass their judgment—some to become members of the Great Company who are to stand before the Throne of God and to serve in His Temple; some to be dealt with during the Age to come, under the Reign of Messiah. For a thousand years the great Mediator between God and men will be with the world, to help all the willing and obedient to rise out of degradation, sin, and death conditions and to get back to perfection of human nature. But those who will then either refuse or neglect the opportunities of Messiah's Kingdom will be destroyed in the Second Death.

We rejoice to know that through that Millennial Kingdom everyone will have an opportunity to come into relationship with God, as at the first, before sin entered the world. We rejoice that "there's a wideness in God's mercy like the wideness of the sea"; and that we can see His glorious purpose not only for the faithful Church, but also for the less faithful and for all the world, when they shall have learned the needed lessons, eternal destruction awaiting only the finally wilful and incorrigible. For us who see the Heavenly privileges and glories, it remains to prove our faithfulness even unto death. There will be no disloyal ones in that Kingdom class beyond the veil. Then, when the Royal Priesthood shall have been installed in office, the work of the New Dispensation shall begin for the blessing of all mankind.

We beseech you, brethren, as you value the glorious hope set before you in the Gospel, that you apply yourselves with fixedness of purpose to the one thing which you are called and privileged to do as prospective members of this Royal Priesthood. Let us never forget that we are "a peculiar people," separate from the great body of nominal Christians as well as from the world.

BELL RINGS FOR 57 YEARS

Several times a day for about fifty-seven years the bell of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, at Grass Valley, Cal., has rung out over the city. It is a very deep-toned bell and can be heard plainly for several miles. The bell was cast at Sheffield, England, in 1858, and brought around the Horn of San Francisco, and thence here by steamer and freight wagon. It was hung in St. Patrick's belfry, and the oldest inhabitant cannot recall the day when it has not rung the hours of 7 a.m., 12 noon and 6 p.m.

The breeding of army horses continues to engage the attention of the farmer.

FOR OVERSEAS CONSTRUCTION

GIGANTIC steam shovels weighing sixty-five tons each, capable of eating up the earth at the rate of 150 to 200 cubic yards an hour, and self propelling extension track pile drivers, are part of the equipment recently purchased by the Government for Col. C. W. P. Ramsay, of the Canadian Overseas Railway Construction Corps. This plant was selected by Col. Ramsay's colleagues in the Engineering Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway and is being prepared by that company at the request of the Government for shipment abroad. The Canadian Overseas Railway Construction Corps has already built many miles of track at strategic points and in all the while engaged in surveys for further construction. The work has often to be done under fire, and though there have been so many narrow escapes there have been no serious casualties. Out of the non-commissioned officers and sappers that enlisted on the foundation of the Corps 16 have already received commissions in the Royal Engineers, a remarkable tribute to their efficiency, while Col. Ramsay and Major Harvey have been mentioned in dispatches. The splendid work of these Canadian engineers has been highly appreciated by the allied commanders.

The Late Captain the Hon. A. T. Shaughnessy

A severe shock was caused through the Dominion of Canada, especially in military circles, when it became known the other day that Capt. the Hon. A.T. ("Fred") Shaughnessy, of the 60th Battalion, had been killed in action. Capt. Shaughnessy's period of service at the front was very brief, as it is hardly a month since the 60th went to France, and only about ten days since they joined the forces in the trenches. No details have yet been received as to how Capt. Shaughnessy met his death, save that he was instantly killed by shrapnel on Saturday morning, that he passed peacefully away and died like a man. It is not thought that any general action was taking place. A cable was received on Saturday afternoon by Mr. A. D. MacTier, of the C. P. R., from Mr. George McLaren Brown, the European manager of the company, stating that he had just received a cable from Lieut.-Col. Gascoigne, of the 60th, announcing the death of Capt. Shaughnessy, and asking Mr. MacTier to give the information to his father, Lord Shaughnessy.

A further message was received by Lord Shaughnessy, with the brief statement that Capt. the Hon. Fred Shaughnessy had been instantly killed by shrapnel in action. Captain Shaughnessy was buried immediately, following the custom in war of burying officers and men near the place where they fell. Widespread sympathy is felt for Lord Shaughnessy, and especially for Lady Shaughnessy, in their bereavement, which came with sudden shock, since Capt. Shaughnessy had been so short a time at the front, while their only other son, Capt. the Hon. W. J. Shaughnessy, heir to the barony, is also training for active service with the 199th Irish-Canadian Rangers.

The death of Capt. the Hon. Alfred Thomas Shaughnessy will cause a pang of grief to many friends, both military and civil, in Montreal. He was a very gallant Canadian gentleman in the truest sense of such a phrase, an honorable citizen, and a brave and capable officer, full of enthusiasm in his work, and full of the spirit that makes officers beloved by their men. This was especially shown during the long weeks of training while the 60th was at Valcartier, where Capt. Shaughnessy was one of the most popular officers in the camp, always of a sunny disposition, always interested in his work and his men, and invariably ready to do whatever he could to advance their interests as well as his own knowledge of work. He had little spare time there, but that little he generally devoted to study and to practicing signalling, so as to increase his efficiency. He was a splendid officer, and his loss will be severely felt by the 60th.

The late Capt. the Hon. Alfred Thomas Shaughnessy was born in Montreal on October 18, 1887, he being the second son of (then) Sir Thomas and Lady Shaughnessy. He was educated at Bishop's College and Abingdon Schools, and McGill University. While at McGill he was a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity.

On leaving McGill he entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., in order to learn business methods. He started at the bottom, first in a subordinate position in the office of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, and later in the Steamships Department, under Vice-President C. M. Bosworth, where he made himself liked on all sides, and won promotion on his merits, working through a number of departments. In 1906 he had the unusual experience of travelling around the world, from Montreal to Montreal, on the trains and steamships of the C. P. R. Four years ago he left the service of the C. P. R. and joined the brokerage firm of Charles Meredith & Co., as a member of the firm.

He had been for a number of years an active officer of the 3rd Victoria Rifles, joining that battalion as a subaltern in October of 1910. He was regarded as one of the most promising young officers of that battalion. When Lieut.-Col. Gascoigne undertook the organization of the 60th Battalion for overseas service, Lieut. Shaughnessy joined with rank as captain, for which he, with his brother, the Hon. W. J. Shaughnessy, qualified at Halifax. He took a keen interest in recruiting and other work for the battalion went to Valcartier with them, thence to England, and finally to France for the service at the front which was to end so speedily for him. His brother-in-law, Capt. Rene Redmond, is second in command of his company—"A" of the 60th Battalion. He was married in April, 1911, to Miss Sarah Polk Bradford, daughter of Judge Bradford, of Nashville, Tenn., and a descendant of President Polk, of the United States, the ceremony taking place at Nashville. Two children were born of the marriage, Elizabeth, three years old, and Thomas Bradford, one and one-half years. Mrs. Shaughnessy is now in London, having accompanied her husband to England when the regiment crossed.

LORD SHAUGHNESSY'S WORDS.

"To his mother, myself and the family, the sacrifice is indeed cruel and almost overwhelming. But after all, we are only passing through the same and experience as thousands of others in every portion of the Empire. He had a sweet wife and two little children, and everything in the world to live for, but he recognized his duty and the attendant risk. If his example arouses a feeling of patriotism and responsiveness in these hundreds amongst us of military age, many of whom are without his family cares, who thus far through indifference or because of bad leadership or petty local issues have failed to assume their responsibilities as citizens and subjects, we shall feel that there is additional compensation for the sacrifice."

We Grieve for the Hero

(Dedicated to the late Captain Fred Shaughnessy)

The fairest field lily lies withered and dead.
But the hosts of its seed blossom forth in its stead;
And each drop from the heart of this flower of our race
Will spring up in a soldier to stand in his place.

"HUBBY'S CARELESS ATTITUDE WHILE THUMBING HIS BANK ROLL PREPARATORY TO GIVING HIS WIFE THE MONEY SHE HAS ASKED FOR."—Cartoon by Moyer.

Arthur Robinson Sued For Divorce

New York, June 3.—Friends of Arthur Robinson, wealthy sportsman of this city, learned that his recent trip to Europe without his wife, was the Mrs. Andrea Paton Robinson, was the forerunner of a divorce action. Instead of leaving on a business trip, Mrs. Robinson says in a complaint filed in the Supreme Court, he went with a "Mrs. Arthur Robinson" on board the Rotterdam from this city to Falmouth, England. Basing her action on that allegation and on the accusation that he committed acts of misconduct with the same Mrs. Robinson at the Vanderbilt Hotel from March 6 to 11 of this year, she asks a divorce.

The complaint in the proceeding is brief. It says that Mr and Mrs. Robinson were married in Seabrooke, Canada, in June, 1901, and does not accuse him of any misconduct before March of this year.

As far as was known to any of their friends Mr. and Mrs. Robinson have been living happily together for the last 15 years.

While at his lodge in New Brunswick, in September, 1908, Mr. Robinson was accused, together with others at his establishment, of having killed moose out of season. In his answer to the charge he published widely an offer of a reward of $5000 for any information which should lead to his conviction or that of any guest or employee of his lodge for shooting any game out of season. Harry Braithwaite, a guide, made the accusation, but Mr. Robinson later was exonerated.

Mr. Robinson was graduated from Columbia University in 1901, and went almost immediately to Canada, where he married the then Miss Andrea Paton at Sherbrooke. Both were fond of the out of doors and spent much of their time together in the Canadian woods. He became one of the most widely known sportsmen of New Brunswick. They often returned to this city, where they kept a home and were seen together in society.

Mrs. Robinson is said to be stopping in this city although her attorney refuses to disclose her whereabouts.

SPANIARDS WOULD AVOID WAR.

MEXICO CITY, June 3.—A thousand members of the Spanish colony in this city have signed a petition addressed to King Alfonso of Spain asking him to use his influence with President Wilson to avoid war between Mexico and the United States.

THE "O" PREFIX

An Irish author who has recently published a fifth-century romance, insists that the "O" of his name (O'Sullivan) should not be capitalized, because it is a corruption of the Gaelic word "na" meaning "the descendant of." He avers that both the apostrophe and the hyphen are recent intrusions in the field of human nomenclature.

CARRANZA SENDS NOTE

Washington, June 1.—Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican Ambassador designate delivered to the State Department a note from General Carranza in which the latter demands an explanation for the action of the United States in keeping its troops in Mexico, for which there is now no reason. The note repeats the demand formerly made that the troops be withdrawn at once.

Carranza very plainly states in the note that the failure to recall the troops creates a suspicion of the real intentions of the United States Government. He says that if the intentions of this government are sincere the troops will be ordered out of Mexico at once.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S BRASSIERE OR BUST SUPPORTER

By Anabel Worthington.

So that the lines of this brassiere would insure the comfort and express the style intended for stout figures it was designed and fitted over a live model: it should therefore find much favor among those who like the ready made undergarment which is suited to their special needs. To aid in the fit and fall of the dress or waist this design will prove most satisfactory.

The front yoke is one noticeable feature: the low, round neck takes a V shape at the back and is finished with edging, as are the armholes. Two darts in each front near the waist add much to giving the figure greater contour. The closing is with tapes tacked to the lower back corners and drawn around the waist to the front. An eyelet is worked in the front tab for attaching to the corset. Use any of the wash materials that you prefer.

The pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. To make a brassiere in size 36 that will be a duplicate of the design you will need but ⅞ yard 36 inch material with 1¾ yards of edging.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Was Troubled With BOILS
ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. R. Cockerill, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Innes Love Notes To Missing Girl

MOTHER OF MRS. DENNIS SAYS HE CALLED HER "ANGEL LADY" AND WAS GOING TO "CLAIM" HER.

Atlanta, Ga., June 3.—That approximately $2000 had been sent to Victor Innes by Mrs. Eloise Nelms Dennis during the latter part of 1913, and the early part of 1914, was shown at the trial of Victor Innes for larceny after trust through the testimony of several witnesses and the introduction of express and telegraph money order receipts.

Outside of this evidence the feature of the day was the second appearance on the stand of Mrs. John Nelms, the mother of the two young women whose strange disappearance led to the arrest of Innes and his wife. Mrs. Nealms testified that Innes often had promised to marry Eloise but had by various excuses always succeeded in postponing the ceremony.

The mother described the messages sent by Innes to her daughter as "burning love letters." In them she said he used such pet names as "My own precious little girl," "Darling little sweetheart," and "Angel Lady." She said her daughter had once received a letter from him in which he said: "That wife of mine that we thought dying has come to life. It looks like she is going to get well in spite of all. I can't sue for divorce until I find if she is going to die."

Mrs. Nelms said Innes on various occasions had written to her daughter that he was coming to "claim" her. Another feature of the day was the appearance on the stand of Miss Viola Sickles Innes, first wife of the prisoner, who was called by the state to identify specimens of Innes' handwriting.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

"Canadians Behaved With The Utmost Gallantry"

—British War Office

101 OFFICERS ON THE FIRST CASUALTY LIST

CANADIANS WIN BACK LOST GROUND BY COUNTER ATTACKS AFTER A HEAVY BOMBARDMENT

Third Canadian Division Sustains High Reputation Won by First Division Last Year by Gallant Fighting--General Victor Williams of Port Hope is Wounded and a Prisoner of War---Mounted Rifle Brigade Gave a Good Account of Themselves.

GERMAN VEREUN ATTACKS REPULSED

OTTAWA, June 5.—Not since St. Julien in April, 1915, have the Canadians suffered as heavily as they did in the tremendous fighting between Ypres and Hooge on Friday and Saturday of last week, when after being compelled to give ground for 700 yards, the Canadians made a heroic counter-attack with bomb and bayonet charges and retook most of the ground lost.

No less than 101 Canadian officers are on the first list of casualties. They include Major-General Mercer and Brigadier-General Williams, already reported as wounded and missing. The total roll of officers, killed, wounded and missing, on to-day's list, includes four lieutenant-colonels, eight majors, 21 captains and 66 lieutenants.

No account has yet been received of casualties among the rank and file, but they must of necessity be extremely heavy.

While it is not permissable to mention the names of battalions engaged no less than fourteen different units are represented in the officers' list in addition to hearquarters. One Toronto battalion has the heaviest list named, nineteen officers, all of whom are missing. A Montreal battalion comes next with eighteen officers. A Sherbrooke regiment is next with 15 officer casualties. A Toronto battalion which went with the First Contingent has fifteen. A Victoria regiment comes next with nine. A Brandon has eight. Brigade Headquarters last six, while one of Canada's first regiments lost four.

OTTAWA, June 5.—Sir Sam Hughes to-day handed out a list of Canadian officers' casualties in the fighting of June 2nd and 3rd. The killed number eight, including Lieut.-Col. Buller of the Princess Pats, and Lieut.-Col. Shaw of Brandon. The died of wounds, three, including Lieut.-Col. Baker, M.P., of Sherbrooke. The wounded, 28, the missing 30, including Generals Mercer and Williams. The casualties were largely Quebec, Toronto and Western battalions.

Major Hamilton Gault, Montreal millionaire, was wounded for the third time in the present war. Lieut.-Col. Usaher of Toronto, is down as missing. On the general basis of estimating, it is thought that the casualties among the non-commissioned and men of the Canadian forces in the two days' battle will amount to between three thousand and four thousand.

MOUNTED RIFLES GAVE GOOD ACCOUNT OF THEMSELVES

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 4—The Ypres salient seems destined to be associated with Canadian feats of arms. The Third Canadian Division has received its first great baptism of fire on ground only a few miles south of the spot where the second battle of Ypres was fought. Moreover, this division, which contains a higher percentage of Canadian born, has fully sustained the high standard of gallantry which was set by the First Division.

Great anxiety prevails here regarding the fate of Generals Mercer and Williams. The latter promised that the Mounted Rifles would give a good account of themselves when put to the test. The official communique indicates that this promise has been amply fulfilled.

A cavalry sergeant, home on leave, declares that General Williams is every inch a soldier, and much loved by his men.

The sector held by the Third Division is a particularly difficult one, lying in a hollow, very much pounded and churned, while from a semi-circular ridge the enemy have heavily bombarded them.

Canadian Lines Were Bombarded Terrifically

Special to the Examiner:

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Saturday, June 3. — Around famous Hill 60 and Sanctuary wood the Canadians have been doing the stiffest fighting of their experience in the course of the last two days' action. They have held the entire front attacked, and, unless the fighting spreads, this is entirely their battle.

The German guns had been relatively quiet for some days, when they suddenly opened up the heaviest bombardment any Canadian veteran has known, using all kinds of guns from heavy howitzers to trench mortars, not only battering the trenches, but covering a wide area of ground in the rear to prevent the bringing up of supports.

"But ot was ot this time, as in the earlier battles on the Ypres salient, when the Germans threw three or four shells to our one," said an officer. "The British guns returned equal volumes on the Germans after they were in our trenches."

Under support of gunfire the Canadian battalions, maintaining the tradition of the contingent last year at St. Julien, immediately turned on the Germans in a series of counter-attacks. They fought throughout the night, and were engaged all Saturday doggedly bombing their way back to the possession of the position which they had lost. Parties rushed in at different points, bombing and bayoneting right and left, and before their fierce work was ended they had regained all but a few yards.

The German advance had been made over a front of 3,000 yards from the Ypres-Comines railway to Hooge point. This was the most extensive front of any recent attack, and the Canadians responded to the test coolly and skilfully. In the Hooge sector the German attack was stopped with heavy loss.

LONDON, June 4.—Maj.-Gen. Mercer and Brig.-Gen. Williams, both of the Third Canadian Division, are reported missing, and one of them is known to be a German prisoner, after a spirited engagement in the direction of Zillebeke, between Hooge and the Ypres-Menin railway. The British report states that the two officers were inspecting the trenches, and says that they are "missing," but the fact of the capture of one of them is chronicled in the German report, which announced the successful storming of the ridges southeast of Zillebeke and the British position beyond, with the capture of a slightly-wounded general, a major, 13 other officers and 350 unwounded men. The British were said to have suffered heavy losses. The British statement admitted a German advance of 700 yards, but asserted that the Canadian troops recaptured much of this ground.

A MESSAGE OF THANKS FROM THE 93RD BATTALION

Home City and County Are Not Forgotten Says Lt.-Col. Johnston in a Letter Appreciative of Kindnesses Shown His Battalion By Citizens Generally

A CORDIAL INVITATION

The following letter from Lt.-Col. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F. has been received by the Examiner.

Barriefield Camp, June 1st.

Dear Sir,—Now that we are settled down in camp I wish to say through the press to the citizens of Peterborough that our home city and country are by no means forgotten.

On the contrary from a distance we are able to look back to an dappreciate afresh the pleasures of our stay and all warm-hearted hospitality and general kindness with which we were continuously surrounded while in the city. The remembrance of it all finds us with gratitude and is often thought of and spoken of.

We were certainly royally treated, the climax being reached in the most handsome presentation and send off given at our departure. We warmly thank you all.

I cannot possibly refer to all individual kindnesses, but feel I must make special mention of the work of the Speakers' Patriotic League, the Ladies Auxiliary and indeed all the lady-helpers, the County Council and City Councils and of the different patriotic and church societies who entertained and worked for our men. Then there was the comradship of the 57th Regiment and last but by no means least the press.

It is impossible to adequately express our appreciation of the enthusiastic and continuous support of the newspapers which stirred up public interest and never let it done off, so to speak. Gentlemen of the press you have been our friends indeed.

In a time of difficulty occasioned by the pitching of camp our Battalion has begun already to enjoy the provisions supplied by the kind patronage of the County. This will keep Peterborough close to us, and the Battalion will be the stronger to represent the city and country more worthily through this support.

In conclusion I heartily extend a cordial invitation to the citizens of Peterborough County to visit us in our new surroundings.

Yours respectfully,

T. J. JOHNSTON, LT.-COL.

Will Collect Rags To-night

The rags will be collected to-night between 5.30 and 8.30 from the following streets: London and McDonnel and the connecting side streets, Harvey, Waterford, College, Dixon, and Sheridan Streets; the section from Charlotte to Murray and from Park to Aylmer Streets; also the section from Charlotte to Townsend and from Park to Aylmer Streets. The storm on Friday night prevented the collection from the section north of Charlotte Street, but this will be done to-night as well as the previously announced section for to-night.

On Tuesday night the collection will be made from Smith to Bolivar Streets, between Park Street and Monaghan Road. The collectors would greatly appreciate it if the housekeepers would put their rags in a convenient place for collection.

TWO MORE LOCAL BOYS ON THE CASUALTY LIST

LIEUT. HAROLD S. MATTHEWS, of the 2nd Battery, 1st Brigade, C.E.F. and son of Mr. T. F. Matthews, reported missing.

CORP. HERBERT M. STUART, son of Mr. R. N. Stuart, 701 Stewart street, officially reported died of wounds May 27th.

ONLY 21 MEMBERS OF 93rd BATTALION TO GO WITH PIONEERS

List of the Men Selected on Friday---Several Promotions Announced in Battalion Orders--Local Recruiting is Keeping Up Well With a Number of Units Competing For Men---To-day's Military News.

Barriefield Camp,
Friday, 9 p.m.

Friday night, and all is well, save for the rain, etc. At 5 o'clock a very heavy thunder and lightning storm blew over, and it still continues to rain, which means that the grounds are again in a shameful condition, after having been dried up by two days of pleasant, fine weather. Nevertheless the boys are all quite cheerful and at present you can hear the usual cry "Are we downhearted?" with the very strong response 'No!'

There was quite a surprise on the Battalion this afternoon, when Headquarters had the Battalion lined up on the parade ground in Companies and in the form of a square, after which a Headquarters' officer addressed officers and men, calling for volunteers for the Pioneer Battalion, which is to leave for overseas in the near future, owing to a request from the War Office for men in this branch of the service.

There was, of course, a large response to this appeal, which goes to show how anxious the men are to do their share in defence of King and country and honour.

About fifty men offered their services, but to the disappointment of some, there were only 21 selected, the following men being the lucky choice:

No. 195089, Pte. R. Emery, 'B' Company.
No. 195489, Pte. W. Alldred, 'C' Company.
No. 195409, Pte. R. Lewis, B Company.
No. 195499, Pte. S. C. Hartley, B Company.
No. 195351, Pte. J. Damond, C Company.
No. 195953, Pte. G. A. Penrose, C Company.
No. 195448, Pte. P. Deline, 'C' Company.
No. 195441, Pte. E. Hillier, B Company.
No. 195438, Pte. M. P. Brew, 'B' Company.
No. 195480, Pte. G. Digby, D Company.
No. 195897, G. McMurray, D Company.
No. 195043, Pte. H. Connes, A Company.
No. 195749, Pte. H. Emmorey, C Company.
No. 195956, Pte. J. Morris, D Company.
No. 195106, Pte. N. Jones, A Company.
No. 195705, Pte. P. Ratchford, A Company.
No. 195384, Pte. H. Stocker, A Company.
No. 195988, Pte. R. Allen, D Company.
No. 195892, Pte. P. Allen, D Company.
No. 195655, Pte. J. Geary, C Company.
No. 195482, Pte. M. J. Parsons, C Company.

As seen by the above list some of the best men in the Battalion have been picked and they will be greatly missed by their respective platoons and chums, and it will also reduce the strength of the 93rd, but as most men feel that it is all for the cause why the Mother Country may have as many men as she wishes to place as she sees fit, and as the 93rd Battalion was not the only one called on for recruits, there is no room for complaint.

Lieut. Matthews Missing Corp. Stuart Dead

Peterborough Again Hard Hit by the Casualty List—General Grief Over Reports Concerning Two Well Known Peterboro' Boys.

NEWS CAME YESTERDAY

Peterborough was again hard hit yesterday when news was received that Corp. Oubert M. Stuart, son of Mr. R. N. Stuart, 701 Stewart street, had died of wounds, and that Lieut. Harold Matthews, son of Mr. T. F. Matthews, of the Matthews-Blackwell Company, was missing. The message in regard to Corp. Stuart came in an official telegram from Ottawa, while the news about Lieut. Matthews was received by his father in the shape of a cablegram from Major White, commanding the 2nd Battery, stating that Lieut. Matthews was missing and probably a prisoner.

The news that Lieut. Harold Stratton Matthews of the 2nd Battery 1st Canadian Artillery and son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews is missing will be received with deep regret throughout the city. No Peterborough member of the Canadian Expeditionary forces is more highly esteemed than Lieut. Matthews whose manly characteristics and general bearing have won him the regard and affection of a very large circle of friends. Citizens of Peterborough generally will sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Matthews in their distress and will unite in hoping for better news.

Lieut. Matthews has been at the front since the first Canadian Contingent landed in France and as an officer of the 1st Artillery Brigade has seen hard fighting and lots of it since the first of last year. In the second battle at Ypres in April 1915 he was gassed and was in the hospital for some time. On his recovery he returned to duty with the battery and has been hard at work ever since.

Lieut. Matthews was born in Peterborough twenty-two years ago and received his early education in the local Public Schools and Collegiate Institute afterwards attending Royal Military College Kingston where he had a brilliant scholarship career graduating with high honours. A few months before war broke out. Not only as a clever scholar was Lieut. Matthews celebrated but he also won fame as an athlete. Before going to R.M.C., he distinguished himself as quarter back of the Collegiate Institute Rugby team and also starred in hockey as left wing of the Peterborough Junior, O.H.A. At R.M.C. he continued to shine on the gridiron and on the ice, being a member of both the senior rugby and senior hockey team of the college.

As a graduate of R.M.C. Lieut. Matthews lost no time when the call came for men. At the beginning of hostilities he secured a commission in the Ottawa Battery and went to the front as an officer of the 2nd Battery.

CORP. HUBERT STUART.

News of the death of Corporal Hubert Stuart at the front on May 27th, was received yesterday by the parents Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Stuart, 701 Stewart street. Corporal Stuart was well known in this city, having resided here some time previous to enlisting. He was twenty years of age and was born in Manitoba. Later he resided in Young's Point with his parents. He was educated at the Grove school, Lakefield. About one year ago Corporal Stuart enlisted here and was sent to the 93th Battalion at Barriefield and went overseas with a draft of that Battalion. Later he was transferred to the 39th and subsequently to the 4th Battalion. He has been in France since February last.

Private Eric Stuart of the 93rd Battalion is a brother, also Gerald Stewart of Manitoba. Two sisters also survive, namely, Marion and Dorothy.

The late Corporal Stuart was a member of St. John's church. He was a bright, genial young man and a keen soldier, always smart in appearance and action, and the news of his death will come as a shock to many friends and acquaintances.

EIGHTEEN GERMAN SHIPS LOST IN JUTLAND BATTLE

British Admiralty Entertains No Doubt That German Losses Are Heavier Than British Not Only Relatively But Absolutely

GERMAN FLEET FLED

LONDON, June 4.—A statement issued to-night by the British Admiralty, confirming previous accounts of the battle between the British and German fleets, says:

"Until the Commander-in-Chief has had time to consult the officers engaged and write a full despatch, any attempt to give a detailed history of the naval engagements which began on the afternoon of the 31st of May and ended in the morning hours of the 1st of June would evidently be premature. But the results are quite plain.

"The Grand Fleet came in touch with the German high seas fleet at 3.30 on the afternoon of May 31. The leading ships of the two fleets carried on a vigorous fight, in which the battle-cruisers, fast battleships and subsidiary craft all took an active part.

TURNED TAIL AND FLED.

"The losses were severe on both sides, but when the main body of the British fleet came into contact with the German high seas fleet a very brief period sufficed to compel the latter, who had been severely punished, to seek refuge in their protected waters. This manoeuvre was rendered possible by low visibility and mist, and although the Grand Fleet were now and then able to get into a momentary contact with their opponents, no continuous action was possible.

"They continued the pursuit until the light had wholly failed, while the British destroyers were able to make a successful attack upon the enemy during the night.

"Meanwhile Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, having driven the enemy into port, returned to the main scene of the action and scouted the sea in search of disabled vessels. By noon the next day, June 1, it became evident there was nothing more to be done. He returned therefore to his bases, 400 miles away, re-fuelled his fleet, and in the evening of June 2 was again ready to put to sea.

"The British losses have already been fully stated. There is nothing to add to or subtract from the latest account published by the Admiralty. The enemy losses are less easy to determine. That the accounts they have given to the world are false is certain, and we cannot yet be sure of the exact truth. But from such evidence as has come to our knowledge, the Admiralty entertain no doubt that the German losses are heavier than the British, not merely relatively to the strength of the two fleet, but absolutely.

"There seems to be the strongest ground for supposing that included in the German losses are two battleships, two Dreadnought battle-cruisers of the most powerful type, two of the latest light cruisers, the Wiesbaden and Rostock type, the light cruiser Frauenlob, nine destroyers and a submarine."

THE SPIRIT OF THE CONFERENCE.

One who has opportunity to study the Methodist conference at work cannot but be impressed with two or three outstanding features of the spirit that animates or sobers it. The first characteristic is seriousness of the spirit that sobers the whole conference as compared with similar meetings in ordinary times. The members seem to deeply realise the serious responsibilities of the times in which we live and this sense seems to pervade all their devotions and deliberations. To this recognition of the surpassing gravity of the situation is added an evident spirit of determination to face the responsibility and though from the human point of regard there seems to be uncertainty and ground for doubt, yet the spirit of the conference turns for strength and light and leading to the only source that can supplement human weakness with divine strength, give assurance for doubt and comfort with the oft-proved truth that in the darkest hours of human outlook, under the pain of the heaviest blows, even when faith faints, we can have supreme trust in God, whose goodness is over all His works, overrules the wrath of man, and in merciful providence, converts it to ultimate good.

IN THE PUBLIC INTERESTS.

The postal service is supposed to be maintained in the public interest; and it follows that the public should, in its administration, receive the greatest amount of convenience and be put to the least possible inconvenience. Saturday was the King's Birthday and a legal holiday. The post office was properly enough closed, except for an hour or so in the middle of the day. But with this, the King's loyal subjects should not be put to unnecessary inconvenience, through the observance of his birthday. Many persons who overlooked the day or rather, forgot the closing of the post office, were put to great inconvenience. In the afternoon many persons were rushing about vainly seeking stamps for urgent letters. The stamp vendours had also forgotten the fact of the post office being closed and had not laid in a supply of stamps A simple way to prevent disappointment and public inconvenience would have been for the post office authorities to have inserted a notice of the closing in the papers. Such a course is due the public. The postal authorities are the servants, not the masters, of the people, and the convenience of the people should be consulted. The public not only have to pay increased postal rates, but have to tax themselves over a million dollars a year to meet the deficits due to extravagant management. The people's convenience should be the first consideration, and the price of a little notice should not stand in the way of giving the public fair warning of the closing of the post office.

IS PRAISE PREMATURE?

Would there be anything disrespectful in suggesting that there is one point of resemblance between a committee of the Conference and Sir Sam Hughes? The committee reported a blanket endorsation of the Minister of Militia and didn't spare the compliment cordial. Sir Sam himself, has shown the same disposition to anticipate exact results. He was a witness before the royal commission, and was not permitted to put in a statement he had to the effect that he and Col. Allison had saved the British Government an immense amount of money in the purchase of munitions not mentioned in the Kyte charges. Sir Robert Borden flatly refused inquiry into the many matters covered by Sir Sam's statement. Yet, in it is has issued a blanket endorsation of Col Wesley Allison and himself, an uncorroborated statement, which he gave to the press, when it was ruled out by the Commission. There is no desire to question the right of the committee to pronounce in ex-cathedra and authoritative manner upon res sub judice. It may, however, be pointed out that Canada's share in the war and the relation of the Minister to it, are not yet completed things, and that a basis of final and fair judgment has not been fixed. But there is a question as to whether Canada's conduct of her share of the war has been as full and thorough as it might have been. There is a question whether the best business methods, especially in the matter of recruiting have been employed. There is a question whether the splendid response of the people is to be credited to the course and policy of the government in this matter or to the spirit of the young men of Canada and the exertions of private citizens, expressed through Patriotic Leagues and otherwise. There is, however, no basis yet established for sweeping blame any more than there is for sweeping endorsation. It is not good British practice to pronounce upon a matter still in the doing, and upon only partial evidence, coloured, perhaps, by regard from a partizan viewpoint.

SETTING BACK THE CLOCKS.

There will, of course, be difference of opinion as to the wisdom of the proposal to set back the hands of the clock in order to procure better distribution of daylight for human purposes. Without endorsing or condemning the proposal, there seems to be good reason for adopting the plan in the summer time. With furnaces doing duty well on into June, and disputing place with the electric fan, it is evident that we should have the fullest benefit of our beautiful, but brief, summer. One way of giving this fuller enjoyment is by rising one hour earlier, beginning the day's toil one hour earlier and quitting it one hour earlier. In that event, working men and women, employees in factories, shops and offices would have an hour extra of daylight, free to themselves, to rest, or weed, or dig, or plant, and enjoy life free from restraint of the obligations of employment. Summer is our grandest season and the most delightful hours of the summer day for rest, or pleasure, are the evening hours, say, from six to eight. This is so beautifully true, these hours so fully hold a serenity, sweetness and charm that the greatest good to our citizens would be to give them unfettered opportunity to enjoy them, especially those tied all day in grimy, hot, noisy factories or stuffy shops, or over kitchen fires in households.

These hours are so sweet and beautiful that it might be—though it may be heretical, heterodox and horrid to suggest—well to provide that we should have no evening services in our churches in summer—so that the people could enjoy the hours they occupy, from six to eight, in God's open air temple. Our summer is so short that we grudge every hour that we can't enjoy it in the open air. People in a church at these evening hours must have the devotional spirit damped by the longing for the delights of the evening hours that are passing away unused as to the enjoyment of their beauty and sweetness and charm. A divided devotional spirit is not a wholesome spirit, and it is a missed good to be prevented from spending the summer evening hours must have the devo- when nature is at its loveliest, and invites sweet communion and heart worship of the divine source from which flows the highest physical and mental enjoyment, enjoyment created for us, enjoyed with thanksgiving in the heart.

It is stated that in New York the churches are closed during the heat of summer. This is not to be regarded as an example, for it is, perhaps, too much of a good thing, but it does not prevent us from being reasonable enough to forgo church services at a time when circumstances and the hour make us irreligious in the course of a religious service; when our bodies may be present, but when we can't keep our minds from wandering outward to the sweet hush of summer eventide, and listening with the ears of our hearts to the voices of nature, the canticles of the birds, while we listen perfunctorily to the canticles of the service Is it posible that we can feel more religious, while being nominally irreligious in the sweet, open air of a summer evening than trying to be religious inside the walls of a church, while our hearts are outside, and our thoughts go out to the birds, and our ears are set to catch the "voice of the Lord God walking in the garden "of His earthly paradise, "in the cool of the day?" After all, our blessed Lord didn't see great merit in paying tithes of mint anise and cummin and neglecting the weightier matter of worshipping Him in the most beautiful and happiness-making of His manifestation as in a summer evening when all is tender and grand and beautiful. No one thinks of advocating diminution of church services, but the hours selected for them and hallowed by custom are not divine laws, but simply arrangements of human convenience.

WOULD NATIONALIZATION OF CANADIAN RAILWAYS HELP OUR CANAL SYSTEMS?

It seems strange to be told that the United States is behind the rest of the world in the matter of transportation by canals. Mr. A Barton Hepburn says that of the 4,479 miles of canals in the United States, 2,600 miles have been abandoned. The principal differences between railway and canal transportation are that the railways are the quicker in handling freight and the canals are the cheaper. In Canada, and also in Germany, great results have been attained by the combination of the rail and water systems. It is significant that one of the results of government ownership of the German railways has been the great development of the waterways. This is not because government ownership of railways in Germany does not make for efficiency in operation, but because the State regards transportation by rail and by water as joint essentials in one scheme for the promotion of German industry. There is no actual competition between them because both belong to the State, and both exist to serve the same business interests. They feed each other with traffic. This does not mean that there is no difference between rail and water rates; there is an enormous difference; but as water traffic costs less than railway traffic, the public get the benefit of the cheaper method.

For instance, in 1910 it cost sixty cents to send a ton of grain from Hamburg to Berlin by water against $3.31 by rail. To carry a ton of coal from Hamburg to Berlin cost 26 cents by water and $1.85 1-2 by rail. The German canals, like the English canals, run more to length than to breadth or depth. The Kiel Canal is of course, a notable exception, but that was constructed for a special purpose. It was intended to enable the German admiralty to concentrate the entire German fleet either in the North Sea or in the Baltic.

Germany has six great rivers, five of which flow north, and three of them empty into the North Sea. By canalization the river system of navigation has been greatly developed. Of the 8,620 miles of navigable rivers, lakes and canals over 3,500 miles have a depth of over 6 1-2 feet at mean level; 1,380 miles over 9 3-4 feet; and only 380 miles over 13 feet James Brindley said that rivers exist chiefly to feed canals. The German Government certainly has a very comprehensive plan for uniting rivers, lakes and canals, even including the appropriation of the Belgian and Dutch rivers to extend the Rhine system of navigation by the shortest route to the sea. We may, however regard this part of the project as postponed, at least until after the next great war. The shallowness of some of the ditches involves the utilization of some rather small craft, something like the barges on the Regent's Canal. Timber and bricks are carried from Brandenburg and Mecklenburg to Berlin in "zillen" of 200 tons; coal from Silberia comes in ships of 400 tons, and corn from Hamburg and the Elbe in ships of over 600 tons. The railways still carry much more freight than the inland waterways, but the canal system is being constantly developed, and the cheapness of water transportation will do much to facilitate German industry.

The reason that the American canals have been such a doubtful success are probably — first, the characteristic and eternal rush of American business, which finds water traffic too slow; second, the timidity with which canal development has been tackled in the United States. The Panama Canal is the one great exception to the rule. On Monday a canal and river route was opened between Philadelphia and New York. Curiously the principal reason for the construction of the Delaware & Baritan Canal is said to be to avoid the delays on the railways. If our neighbours had tackled the canal problem in the spirit in which it has been tackled in Canada the results would have been more satisfactory. The rate on wheat carried by water in Canada in 1915 was 0.124 of a cent to 0.238 of a cent per mile. The cost by rail was 0.751 of a cent per mile. —Montreal Herald.

TRAFFICKING WITH THE NATIONALISTS.

The penalty of gaining office by a compact with the Nationalist party has dogged this Government. It has lost the confidence of the country by its trafficking with the political underworld, and it has gained nothing by such deals.—Ottawa Citizen (Conservative.)

STARS AND STRIPES AND NATIONS' FLAGS BURNED AT GOTHAM

NEW YORK, June 5—An American flag and the colours of many other nations were burned in a 'melting pot' suspended on a tripod in the yard in the rear of the Rev. Bouck White's church of the Social Revolution. The 'ceremony' was conducted by Albert Henkel, introduced as 'an artist.' After the colours had been destroyed Henkel unfurled the banner of 'International Industrialism.'

The flag burning was preceded by services in the Church, at which one of the speakers was Rev. Mercer Gren Johnston, rector of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church at Newark, N.J., who recently resigned because he said, some of his vestrymen wanted him to run his church 'like a grocery store.' He strongly disapproved however, of the flag burning part of the programme and tried vainly to induce White to prevent it. He then left the church rather than witness what he characterised as "a most damnable business."

After the Church services at which prayer was offered by several young men, some of whom declared they were theological students, White announced that the congregation would adjourn to the rear yard and "witness the birth of internationalism."

After a speaker had declared no moment could be 'more auspicious for the merging of all the nations into the 'International Commonwealth' Heinrich Weber, who spoke in German, renounced the flag of his fatherland, and cast it into the flames while those who surrounded him chanted "If die we must, we'll die for our God, Rise, Revolutionists!" Weber was followed by persons who claimed to be natives of Great Britain, Russia, Japan, Italy, Sweden Rumania, and Greece, who cast the colours of their countries into the 'melting pot.' Then came Henkel carrying an American flag.

Residents of nearby buildings who crowded the fire escapes to witness the proceedings, hissed as Henkel broke the staff to which the stars and stripes were attached, and plunged the flag into the fire.

A little baking soda is a good thing to put in the dish water when washing the dishes.

As bad as the man who parts with you with a "Slong," twice as bad as the geek who shakes your hand and says, "Bye-bye, old man, don't take any wooden money," is the Bromide who greets you with a hand like a ham and gleefully ejaculates "How-dy, bo; looks like the good old summertime, huh?"

COLDSTREAMS BAND ON HEROIC PILGRIMAGE

Famous Musicians of England Permitted to Go to Flanders Arouse Tommy in the Trenches With Tunes of Merry England

PARIS, June 5.—One is seized of an affection for the band of the Coldstream Guards. They seem such blithe and kindly and altogether irresponsible adventurers. There is something child-like about them. They have been wandering in and out of shell fire, over camouflets, through trenches, tooting their horns, beating their drums, playing on misbegotten instruments to make humorous sounds, going musically within a nail-paring of imminent death. Their caps have ridden the flanks of their heads, their pink English faces have been adorned of wide English grins and they have regarded this visit to the war zone as something between a carnival and a patriotic duty.

"The men was glad to see us, sir," said one of them. "Even the Canadians, sir. Took it very well, sir, they did. We cheered 'em up a bit—not that the burglars needed it."

"What kind of a time did you have?" I asked. His face glowed in happy memory, as a paper lantern does when the candle is lighted.

"Perfeckly rippin', sir," said he. With complete conviction: "Perfeckly rippin'."

At the beginning of the war the British War Office would not be bothered by bands. The recruits used to march through London streets on their foot hardening hikes playing pathetic tunes on combs. Sometimes civilian bands volunteered, but the War Office rather frowned on them. The official attitude was that this war was a serious business—damned serious, what?—and that there was no place in it for music. The Tommies persisted in a regrettable light-mindedness. In the intervals of fighting and dying, and marching and starving and suffering they insisted on enjoying themselves. They got phonographs out from home. They organized sing-songs. The man with the tin whistle became a social favourite.

"Let me take the band out to Flanders," asked Capt. Mackenzie Rogan of the War Office. "Do them good. Be a bit of treat for them. Very tiresome here in London."

One fancies this Capt. Mackenzie Rogan is a favourite even in the War Office, which has no favourites. He has been fifty years a British soldier. When he led his Coldstreamers on that chivalrous and pathetic and irresistibly touching tour through Flanders he was the oldest soldier at the British front. Five generations of Rogans have served with the British colours. The first began with Marlborough, when the army swore so terribly in Flanders, and the fifth is Capt. Rogan's son, who is in a trench in Flanders to-day with Haig. Rogan is the first bandmaster ever to be made a captain in the British army. Usually a bandmaster becomes a lieutenant just before he retires—immediately before, in fact. One might say that his first commission is the signal for retirement.

Coldstreamers an Institution.

"Take half of them," said the War Office to Capt. Mackenzie Rogan. Perhaps the War Office wanted to save the other half. The Coldstream Guards Band is as much of an institution in England as the Bank itself. The legitimacy of a coronation would be in doubt if the Coldstreamers did not play the Prince to Westminster and the King away. American tourists—weird, wild Americans the London papers call us—stand on their poor tired feet on the blistering mall to hear the Coldstreamers mount the guard. Then colour and jingle swagger and crisp and sparkling harmony drive the heart faster even in recollection. The most abandoned democrat will concede that the Coldstreamers are a sufficient excuse for a Royal Family.

So Rogan and his thirty-two went upon a musical pilgrimage. No safe bust inglorious embusque-ing at a base camp for them. They went right out into Flanders. Into the very hottest part of Flanders. In the concentration of interest in the Verdun fight it may have been forgotten that the fighting on the British front is perhaps more continuous and exasperating than on any other sector of the western line. The men were tremendously glad to see and hear them. The Coldstreamers gave two concerts almost every day. Nothing but military expediency kept them from playing. Sometimes the Germans interfered.

One night the Coldstreamers gave a concert in what had been a warehouse, in one of the front line towns. The Germans had shelled the warehouse and the roof had burned off, and the British engineers had put a temporary roof on and turned it into a sore of a cimera theatre. About 2,000 men jammed in that night, through the one small door in a distant corner. Rogan mixed his programme, as he always did. He suits all tastes. Rogan does. Then he swung his bandamen into an old English melody.

Now sing he ordered.

One can imagine the scene. The vast hall, in which a few candles only flickered, so that it was for the most part in darkness. The earnest Coldstreamers on the stage, each with a candle gummed to his music stand and squinting sideways in his effort to see the music. The soldiers below, roaring out the song with all the fervor of their simple souls, their hard faces softened by emotion, each thinking of some home or some woman across the Channel. It was a wonderful chorus, Rogan said. The 2,000 male voices in the gloom of the hall, and twinkling lights the great hand the love and pity of it all——"

"What's that?" said Rogan.

SAVED BY THE BAND

Rogan knew perfectly well what it was. A shell had burst not fifty yards away. Another followed. A third screamed overhead. Some spy had told the Germans of the evening concert, and they were feeling for the theatre with their big guns. It seemed to Rogan he had never heard such screaming shells, or shells which made so much of thunder when they burst. A shell exploding in that theatre might kill a hundred men. He tapped with his baton. The band stopped short. He tapped again, until the men stopped singing.

"You know what has happened," said he. 'Go out quietly'.

The Coldstream Guards band swung into the lilt of the melody again, and 2,000 men filed two by two through that one door, singing as they went. It was a pretty bit of courage in these bandsmen. Somehow one does not expect courage from bandsmen, and equally somehow they always show it. One remembers the little band that played 'God Save the King' while the Titanic sank, and a score of other bands that have died well in their traditions. Last out of the theatre were the Coldstreamers, and last of the band was Rogan.

"Duck, damn it!" a Tommy yelled at him. "Be slippy!"

So that Rogan, six feet three inches tall, three feet wide, sixty-eight years old, covered with medals, dived with his immaculate uniform into a puddle of slippery mud and coasted under the doubtful shelter of a wagon bed where various Tommies were squatting in the mire. Thirty feet away the shell that had whistled a warning exploded. Other shells exploded. Thirty of the audience were killed that night and fifty wounded. Rogan got to his cantonment by a series of splashing dives into Flanders clay.

They have marched out at the head of detachments bound for the trenches. At night, of course, one only leaves or enters the trenches by night. The roads were being sprinkled by shells. Starshells glared overhead, illuminating the scene with their unearthly green. They played all the way, by memory, lovingly, for these men who marched behind them. Sometimes the men sang, in defiance of the German and his shells and the arts of war—sang because the Englishman is sentimental under his diffidence and really likes to sing when he can cast himself loose—and because singing comes easier in the dark. Until by and by an officer would tap Rogan on the shoulder.

"Sorry, but you must not come any farther. It isn't safe."

MUSIC AMID BATTLE SHELLS

So that the Coldstreamers would make half a turn at the word, and splash in the the darkness to the side of the road, and play the men into the trenches at midnight with the old songs they all knew, so that the men could sing as they marched. Until finally the last of the relief had marched by, and the Coldstream Guards, waiting there in the night under the cold stars of Flanders would hear the marching chorus grow fainter, in the distance. Then the distant harmony would change in nature. The men had entered the communicating trenches, and the song rose from below the level of the earth. And by and by it became a mere thread of sound—a bare harmonious rumbling — as the officers succeeded in stifling the song so that the men only hummed cheerily as they marched. And the Coldstreamers would wait there, cold, mud covered, sometimes drenched, until the shuffling of tired men was heard through the darkness, coming from the trenches for their rest.

"Clink, clink."

Mackenzie Rogan's baton rang upon the brass of the nearest horn. The Coldstream Guards band burst into a rollicking air, an air of the music halls, but an air of the resurrection and the life to the ears of these men newly escaped from death; and away the trench-tired men would go on their way to six days' rest.

So the Coldstream Guards band has made its musical pilgrimage through France. Sleeping on straw, shelled by day and by night, bombed by aeroplanes, with death and dreadful wound on every side, and persisting in regarding this as a delectable adventure only possible to very fortunate men. Smiling, swaggering, cap-cocked knights-erant of the musical kingdom, quite blind to the pathos and the humour, only seeing as my friends of the drums that it was:

"Perfeck-ly rippin'."

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gave instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

THE OVERSEAS CLUB CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY OF KING GEORGE

Enjoyable Banquet Held at the Oriental Hotel on Saturday Night---Patriotic Speeches a Feature of the Evening

The inaugural meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Overseas' Club which was recently constituted in this city was held on Saturday evening, and took the form of a banquet at the Oriental Hotel.

This date was selected as being the birthday of His Majesty the King, and it was thought fitting that the club, whose aim is the spreading of a wider sense of Imperialism and a closer union of the various units of the Empire, should recognize the birthday of the Sovereign to whom all nations great and small and looking at this crucial period of European history.

The Overseas' Club, which has branches in every part of the world where the English language is spoken, aims at the present time at bringing these branches into closer touch, and joint effort towards co-operative work in Empire building; and much may be done in this way by branches in Canada, who will in due course be brought into touch with branches in other parts of the Empire with the view of exchanging information with regard to markets, trade conditions, etc.

The branch in Peterborough at present has over fifty members, and between 30 and 40 of them were present on Saturday evening. Mr. K. B. Rogers, who as president of the club presided over the meeting, and proposed the health of the King, which was very heartily accorded. He called attention to the general purposes of the local organization.

MR. RYERSON RITCHIE

The first speaker was Mr. Ryerson Ritchie. He was introduced by President Rogers as a native of Peterborough, who though he had spent twenty-five years in the United States had not forfeited his British citizenship.

Mr. Ritchie referred to the honourable service Canada has rendered to Great Britain and as a consequence of the war she would quickly rise to the position of a nation, honoured by the Empire and by the whole world. When peace and the restoration period arrive Canada should be prepared to put her limitless productive resources into action. The ways and means for a greater development of the Dominion should have immediate consideration by those at home. What is needed is organization, a comprehensive organization backed by a high character in our business, professional and public life. A greater Canada can be made by co-operation, unity of spirt, purpose and action.

Canada's progress had been handicaped by traditions, by class, sectional and partisan influencers and habits of mind. The conduct of public business by the cities provinces and Dominion had also been influenced by financial, commercial, corporate and political prestige, rather than by an active and organised democracy. The prosperity of trade, industry, transportation banking and the like had been promoted by special co-operation for special advantages, without particular regard for the common welfare. The country had not therefore been developed symetrically; there had been abnormal development in spots, such as in railway building. The country should be managed and developed as a great business. It is as practical to give a country intelligent and economic direction as it is to give such direction to a private business. The country should intelligently understand and be in accord upon methods of development. But our political system unhappily puts a premium upon antagonism—not upon unity. Worthy projects are opposed in the commons and legislatures merely for the sake of opposition. Canadians ought now to look far ahead and see to it that the development of their country is planned upon scientific and economic principles.

THE TOBACCO FUND.

Mr. R. R. Hall said: One of the greatest services the Overseas Club has been actively interested in is the supplying to the soldiers at the front a fair quantity of tobacco and cigarettes. No matter what the opinion of some people may be respecting the use of tobacco the fact remains that hundreds of thousands of postcards received from the boys at the front attest their gratitude and thankfulness for receiving their small allotment of tobacco and cigarettes.

Who therefore can have the heart to deny to our heroic soldiers a boon which gives them such solace and comfort and is received with such gratitude? To the heart of the nerve-racked and wounded alike it brings an assuaging balm.

The smallness of the subscription makes it a popular fund and gives everyone the privilege of subscribing to it. Canada has been the largest contributor to the Overseas Tobacco Fund as she has contributed $121,845.00 out of a total of $596,820.00 collected up to April 30th last. Australia and New Zealand are second with a contribution of $101,000.00. The United States contributed $75,910.00, Africa $62,085.00, Asia 56,000.00, South America $34,540.00 and Europe $30,875.00. These contributions show how widely distributed the work of the Overseas Club is and to what extent those who remain in comfort at home desire to contribute sweet consolation to those who are fighting and suffering for the cause of justice, freedom and civilisation to all mankind.

Mr. F. D. Kerr referred to the necessity of a statesmanlike viewpoint being taken by everyone at the present time, referring to Tennyson's poem, a verse of which has been adopted as the motto of the Overseas' Club:

"We sailed wherever ship could sail,
"We founded many a mighty state,
"Pray God, our greatness may not fail
"Through craven fears of being great."

Mayor Duffus in his speech congratulated the club on the good start it had made, and wishing it continued success. He pointed out the necessity of getting to know our neighbours better, and sinking petty differences.

Canon Cornish also spoke very feelingly of the necessities of the time; of the urgency of so conducting ourselves that all possible help may be given to those who are fighting for us to-day, and those who have to bear the very heavy burden of responsibility for the proper and safe conduct of the Empire's business.

He pointed out the necessity of so ordering things that the sacrifices being made now should not be made in vain; but that we should profit by our present trying experiences and aspire to still greater and still higher things than the Empire has already accomplished in bringing just rule, order and good government to all people under its control.

During the course of the evening—musical items were furnished by Mr. Frank Whitehouse, who delighted all present by his violin playing; and Mr. Herb. King, whose vocal contributions and anecdotes were much appreciated.

A most enjoyable evening was spent, and the gathering together of such a representative body of Peterborough citizens should do much to advance the well-merited success of the new club.

Arrangements will be made for further meetings at a later date, and in the meanwhile all who are desirous of joining the club and of assisting in the furtherance of its aims are asked to communicate with all of the joint secretaries:—Mr. H. Dearle, 324 Rubidge street, or Mr. H. H. Cranfield, 48 Aylmer street, who will be pleased to give all information required, and who will welcome suggestions of work that may be undertaken.

SLAY ROBBER IN A PISTOL BATTLE

BAYONNE (N.J.) YOUTH WHO STARTED CRIME CAREER ON SUNDAY KILLED AT EASTON, PA.

Easton, Pa., June 3.—The career of crime upon which Thomas Kimball, 19 years old, entered last Sunday at his home, Bayonne, N.J., by robbing a storekeeper, attacking two policemen, and shooting a man whom he had robbed, was ended suddenly here this afternoon when he was shot and killed after robbing a citizen.

Kimball, whose reputable parents live at No. 36, West Twenty-sixth St., Bayonne, and James O'Donnell, also 19, of No. 12 West Sixteenth St., had borne good reputations until last Sunday noon, when they entered the store of Max Frudnian, near Kimbell's home, and at the point of pistols held him up and robbed him of $30, according to Frudman, who said that he recognized both boys despite the fact that their caps were pulled far down over their eyes.

They escaped from two policemen that afternoon and at night Wm. Hutchins, a seaman on board the Str. Kangaroo, tied up at Bayonne, was held up and robbed of $60. He resisted and was shot in the right knee and left foot. He is now in the hospital here and will be a cripple. The police say the boys who escaped were the robbers.

O'Donnell and Kimball fled from Bayonne, and since then their trail across New Jersey was traced by country stores robbed and persons held up. Charles Weeppel, a merchant, was held up and robbed in Canal street this afternoon, and he followed the two men until he met Detectives Neimeyer and Miller and Constables Ryan and Wieder.

The detectives and constables pursued the two men, and two blocks away the battle opened, the policemen saying Kimball and O'Donnell turned and opened fire when they saw they were being followed. In the battle a score or more of bullets were exchanged, and when Kimball dropped dead his companion threw down his pistol and surrendered. O'Donnell told who they were.

BRIDGE FELL WITH TRAIN.

Flood Causes Wreck in Iowa With Heavy Death List.

MARSHALTOWN, Iowa, June 5.—A despatch to a local newspaper from the scene of a Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific wreck at Packard, Iowa, states that possibly a score of passengers lost their lives when a passenger train plunged through a bridge. It was stated that the dead will total at least fifteen.

The wreck is attributed to a cloudburst which swept this section Thursday night. The water in Dry Run Creek, normally only a few inches, had risen to a depth of 18 feet and undermined the steel girder bridge.

The engine plunged into the creek, carrying with it the baggage car, smoker and day coach.

The storm, which reached the proportion of a cloudburst, nearly paralyzed wire communication.

I begin to doubt conscientious scruples where they happen to coincide with the dictates of cowardice and selfishness.—Sir Henry Clark.

FAMOUS JAP TREE IN DANGER

White Ant Killing Great 1,000-year-old Pine.

The famous pine tree at Karasaki, on the shores of Lake Biwa, near Otsu, celebrated from ancient times as one of the great sights of Omi, is, says the Kobe Chronicle, in danger. For some years past the tree is said to have been showing failing vitality, which was generally attributed to the effect of the smoke from steamers plying on the lake.

Close inspection by Nawa Sei, a noted entomologist, at the request of Gov. Ikematsu, has disclosed the fact that the famous tree is infested with white ants, which, according to the entomologist, have spread to the tree from the many poles sustaining the numerous horizontal branches.

The Prefectural authorities have decided to take the necessary steps for the preservation of this famous tree. The Karasaki nomatsu is said to be a thousand years or more old, and although its long, spiderlike shape, with boughs covering a radius of some 200 feet, is not particularly pleasing to the foreign observer, the tree is regarded by the Japanese with an admiring veneration which is indicated by its inclusion in the Eight Poetic Attractions of the Lake of Omi.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

SIR WILFRID'S BURNING APPEAL TO COMPATRIOTS

Thrilling Recruiting Speech in Interests of 178th French-Canadian Battalion at Montreal—Must Forget Internal Differences Now—Plea For Cementing of Races

MONTREAL, June 4.—The historic Monument National was thronged last night, on the occasion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's great recruiting speech. Crowds blocked St. Lawrence Street in front. Enthusiasm ran high in the wake of the thrilling and solemn cables of the latest sea battle. Canada's greatest son was again sounding the call to arms.

Sir Wilfrid spoke to his compatriots in their own tongue. Flanked by stalwart young French-Canadians in khaki, under an entwined Union Jack and tricolor, following the magnificent rendering of the National Anthems of all the allies by a choir of two hundred under the direction of Prof. J. J. Goulet, the white-haired statesman poured forth his burning message. It thrilled the big gathering, and they hung in silence on every word.

The plea for recruits for the new 178th French-Canadian Battalion was touched with stinging scorn for those unworthy men in Quebec Province, "bitter, warped, prejudiced little souls," he called them, who would have French-Canadians stand useless aside in the supreme struggle. There was contempt for Bourassa, Lavergne and their disciples.

HOLIEST CRUSADE IN HISTORY.

"My compatriots," Sir Wilfrid Laurier exclaimed, "how can we be forgetful of the blood that flows in our veins? The 'noblesse oblige' of our race? Our own dead heroes would from their tombs shout 'Shame!' Even the Church must not shirk." The Liberal Chieftain recalled the history of the Crusaders, the war upon Islam, the struggle of European Christendom against the disciples of Mahomet. "This war, waged by Britain and France to-day," said he, "is a holy crusade, the holies crusade in history, for those things which stand highest and mean most to mankind. In this holy crusade none should stay behind. All should do their whole duty, moved and supported by the most sacred emotion."

TRIBUTE TO BRITISH FLEET.

Sir Wilfrid's magnificent tribute to La Marine Anglaise in its hour of testing swept the great French-Canadian gathering into a tumult of cheers.

"Defeat!" he exclaimed. "What craven says 'defeat?' What unworthy man whispers in your ears: 'Why does not Great Britain do her duty?' There is one way of doing one's duty—only one. It is to do it. Great Britain has done her full duty. Open your eyes and see. The war is twenty months old. For twenty months the British navy has bottled up the Kaiser's armada. At last the German fleet ventured out and was promptly met by a squadron of British ships. A terrible battle ensued. Our hearts are sore as we read the cables telling of the gallant sacrifice of heroic lives. Yet our pulses quicken and our blood tingles when we learn that the Teuton armada, what was left of it, scuttled back to safety. Who says defeat? The Kaiser's fleet crippled and once more bottled up. Britain still mistress of the open sea." (Prolonged cheering).

An Unparalleled Spectacle.

In 1914, Sir Wilfrid proceeded, Britain had no standing army. Before enforcing compulsory enlistment she had given the world "the unique and distinguished spectacle of manning an army of five million men by patriotic voluntary recruiting." That was a spectacle unparalleled in history, surpassing even the famous "Levee en masse" of 1792.

Internal Differences Must Be Forgotten.

A touching recitation by Master Heliodore Parent of the "Last Lesson" in French in Alsace, following its concession to Germany, afforded Sir Wilfrid an opportunity to repeat to his compatriots what he said in Parliament; that bilingual grievances were no excuse for non-enlistment. Reference to the resolution of Mr. Ernest Lapointe was greeted by enthusiastic cheers, but Sir Wilfrid stayed them. The call to arms in the service of civilization was the immediate summons of duty to Canadians of all races. Differences between themselves, unless they could be happily solved by friendly appeals to the national spirit of fairness and generosity one toward the other, must be forgotten at this time, when Canada was called upon to present a united front.

"So long as there are French-Canadian mothers, their tongue is in no danger of being lost," he observed, in silencing the only spirit of dissent.

A Potent Way to Cement Races.

"I ask you, my compatriots, to leave all other considerations for the supreme task!" Sir Wilfrid exclaimed. He reminded the young men that the entente which had given birth to the resolutions of language interchange adopted by the British and French representatives at Westminster Hall, London, "began in the trenches." There was no more potent or more enduring way of cementing the two races in Canada than that way which had wiped out the recollection of centuries of strife between the two mother lands. "Seal your appeal to the generosity of your big brother Canadian by service," urged Sir Wilfrid. In fellow-service for a sublime common cause, he said, there would be born a spirit of mutual trust, mutual generosity, mutual understanding and mutual comradeship, which would stand the test of the most acute problems, and give to Canada a united citizenship built upon the best of British traditions.

Appeal For Entente Cordiale.

This, my compatriotis, is what I ask—this is the entente cordiale I would have us achieve by service together. I have followed the ideal of conscience as prompted by my heart. Do not let us waver from the right line of conduct. I am older than most of you, and I am more than ever convinced that there is no real success but that which is based and has its foundation on right and justice and the generous instincts of the human heart. Let us all unite to allay, and please God to extinguish, the prejudices that pull us apart, and do our utmost like real men and women to bring together the two elements in our country, after the same way in which they were brought together at Westminster Hall in old London. I have had successes and reverses. I trust that successes have not blinded my eyes, nor reverses discouraged me. Let there be no exultation in success and no weakness in reverse. Come, my young compatriots, with these brave young men who offer their service—their lives—that France may live, that Britain may continue her noble and generous rule, and that heroic Belgium may be restored to her standing as a nation."

In Interests of 178th Battalion.

The great rally was held under the auspices of the 178th Battalion, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Rene de Labruere Girouard, assisted by influential committees of French-Canadian ladies and gentlemen. The young commanding officer has already done his "bit," having been wounded and invalided home from service with the 22nd French-Canadian Battalion. He has recovered, and has undertaken the raising of another French-Canadian battalion from the Eastern Townships. It has been recruiting for nearly two months, and has already enrolled 600 men.

Messages from General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, and Brig-General Wilson, head of the military district, extended best wishes for the rally.

Another French-Canadian Brigade.

Col. Girouard announced that it was intended now to expand the original purpose of raising another French-Canadian battalion, and aim for he immediate recruiting of another French-Canadian brigade, "in which," he said, "our regiment will take its place and do its part to uphold the gallant traditions of our race and the record of those who have gone before."

Enthusiasm of Audience.

When Lady Laurier entered the hall with the mother of the young commanding officer they were greeted by an enthusiastic reception. Sir Wilfrid was accompanied by Colonel Girouard, Brig.-Gen. Leduc, Brig.-Gen. Labelle, Senator Ougrain and Sir Joseph Pope. Sir Wilfrid was greeted by an ovation which continued for several minutes, the great throng rising and continuing cheer after cheer in waves of enthusiasm. The hall was decorated with the flags of the allies, those of Britain and France being intertwined. The names of the two young Montreal French-Canadians who have already won their D.S.O. on the fields of Flanders, Captain T. M. Papineau, great-grandson of the famous Louis A. Papineau, and Capt. G. P. Panier of the 22nd Battalion, were also honoured. A patriotic programme of music and recitation was provided by the ladies' committee under the Presidency of Mme. A. Decary.

TRIBUTE PAID TO WORK OF CANADIAN WOMEN.

Sir Wilfrid in opening, congratulated the ladies and paid a warm tribute to the work of Canadian women since the outbreak of the war. They ranked in honour of service and sacrifice with those who, like Col. Girouard and the officers and men of the battalion, he donned the uniform and signified their eagerness to battle by the side of those French heroes who have not ceased to astonish the world.

"These young men" exclaimed Sir Wilfrid, "furnish an example for their fellows throughout the Province. It was they, and not those who protested that 'we have no interest in this war,' who did honour to their Province and their race. Nothing was more contemptible, or more contrary to common sense, than to say Canadians had no interest in the struggle. Britain and France were fighting side by side for the greatest ideals of mankind. They fought for freedom, justice and the civilization of the world."

AN INSPIRING MESSAGE.

Sir Wilfrid told how the correspondent of The London Times found in one of the shattered dugouts of Flanders the most solemn and inspiring farewell of a dying soldier. It read: "My body to the earth, my soul to God, my heart to France."

"Who was the hero who wrote this supreme farewell. He did not concern himself with vanity, else he would have inscribed and immortalized his name for poets and orators. That name was written in Heaven in the book imperishable. But that name, we, too, know it," exclaimed Sir Wilfrid. "It is numberless. It is the French army. That sublime sentiment belongs to all."

CONTEMPT FOR THE UNMOVED

The Liberal leader had contempt for men who pretended to pride themselves on their French blood, and to poise as champions of the French language, who had witnessed France for months in the throes of the most desolating and ferocious struggle ever known, with one-third of the women in France in mourning, with the savings of fifty years lost, with the life of the French nation suspended, and remained unmoved, their selfish blood cold, telling their compatriots it was no concern of theirs. Yet the whole soul of the nation was found in the words of General de Castelnau: "Rather than suffer the German yoke the whole French nation shall perish on the field of honour." Britain and France were never greater than now.

TRUE REPRESENTATIVES OF FRENCH-CANADIANS.

Others were almost as reprehensible as those to whom he had alluded. It was not sufficient to sympathise in words. It was not admiration for the sublimity of a great nation under trial that was wanted. "What is needed is action such as has been taken by these young men," declared Sir Wilfrid, pointing to the soldiers in khaki. "I honour French-Canadians like those. I salute them. I envy them. Theirs is the blood of an honoured race. They belong to the family of the heroes who have kept the flag flying high on the fortress of Verdun. They represent the French-Canadian people."

THE BREACH CLOSED FOREVER.

In the progress of the world two nations had outdistanced others in the arts of civilization—Britain and France. France had the wonderful enthusiasm, Britain had the stalwart political conception. France always came back to her ideals, even after her worst failings. Britain, though less spectacular, always maintained steady progress. For a long time they were enemies. As they learned more of each other they came closer together, and now, at last, the breach was closed forever. Sir Wilfrid thanked God he had lived to see the day. He prayed that the same entente cordiale would characterize the sons of the sea-girt isles and sunny France in Canada forever. The bond of union would be knit in this new Dominion, as in the old world, by fighting side by side for the same glorious cause.

AN INDESCRIBABLE ENTHUSIASM

The scene when Sir Wilfrid concluded his impassioned appeal cannot be described. Men and women stood, some of them on their chairs, cheering and waving handkerchiefs. The enthusiasm spread through the corridors and to the street. As some of the newspaper men left the hall they witnessed a cabman, his vehicle stopped on the street with puzzled 'fares' inside, standing waving his whip in one hand and his hat in the other, ad shouting 'Vive Anglais, vive France, vive Laurier.' Finally the gathering, inside and outside the Monument National, gave vent to their sentiments by the singing of the National Anthem "O Canada." Recruiting officers did a record night.

Sir Wilfrid is resting over Sunday in Montreal. He plans recruiting visits to other parts of the Province during the next few weeks.

ORDINATION SERVICE HELD IN GEORGE STREET CHURCH

Impressive Service Was Conducted in the Presence of a Large Number of Ministers and Laymen.

TWO CANDIDATES

"We give our best service to God and man when we carry prayer into the activities of life." The speaker was the Rev. C. L. McIrvine, ex-president of the Hamilton Conference. The occasion was the ordination service held in George street Methodist church Sunday morning when W. P. Woodger, B.A., of Cambray, Ontario, and W. R. Williams, B.A., B.D., of Yarker, Ontario, were ordained in accordance with the rites of the Methodist church. Continuing Rev. Mr. McIrvine said: "It is not much use praying for peace until we have done all we can to bring it about. The same applies to any other activity of life."

The basis of the speaker's remarks is found in John 14:12, "Greater works than these shall He do," Mr. McIrvine dwelt upon the significance of the foregoing text in the light of present day events. "Christianity has been honoured with great men," said the speaker. Among these was John Wesley, Egerton Ryerson, Dr. George Douglas and others. Methodism is primarily not just ecclesiastical organization, but a religious experience. It was not the intention of John Wesley to break away from the church. He looked out and saw the fox hunting clergy and the drinking squires and realised the pressing needs for a revival. It remains for us to continue the good work that these men have started and fulfill the trust God has committed to us.

Double Standard.

It is a popular thought that a minister should be a good man. Why should we put up one standard for the ministry and another for the laity? asked the speaker. It is good to know that we have a fine type of manhood. It is good to know that in this age we stand as one man united to fight a common enemy. God gave us men who are big enough to meet the problems of the present age. The pillars of civilization rest upon two things—religion and enlightenment.

The speaker concluded with a reference to the work that had been accomplished in the way of temperance legislation and also the need for evangelism in the church which owed its inception to a revival.

The ordination service which followed was conducted by the Rev. M. S. Sexsmith, President of the Conference.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

Fifteen delegates to the Methodist Conference have been entertained in the Y.M.C.A. dormitories. Eleven have been held, sumaining delegates, and four have been on free billets. It has been a pleasure to have these men in our building for they came just at the right time to fill the vacancies caused by the removal of the officers of the 93rd, who had been occupying our dormitories, also for the reason that they are as fine a lot of men as a person could hope to meet.

Things have seemed very quiet around our corner since our soldier boys left, and this has somewhat affected the Senior attendance at the building. The attendance of boys seems to be picking up for the reason that they are receiving a larger amount of attention since the soldiers left.

The Association desires to remind its friends that cash is very badly needed at the present time with which to meet current bills and accounts still outstanding in connection with building alterations. As a considerable amount is still outstanding in subscriptions from the canvass of 1915, the friends of the Association should realize the need as it looms up before the Finance Commitee.

A fine programme has been outlined for the boys camp which will open at Sandy Point on July 3. This camp will be an assured fact as soon as twenty boys have paid their deposit fees of $1.00. The fee for the entire camp is $7.00, and for one week, $4.

The Secret Sin At The Empire

Blanche Sweet in a Great Moral Picture

In this photoplay we have the combination of a great star and a great play. "The Secret Sin" is a bitter pronouncement against the drug evil and the trade in opium against which the United States Government for years has waged an unceasing battle.

With all the skill of the Lasky artistic forces centered on this photoplay "The Secret Sin" from the viewpoint of photography, attention to minute detail and sheer sincerity will take its place with the masterpieces of the screen.

Twin sisters, Grace and Edith, form the centre of this interesting photoplay. Circumstances make it necessary for them to earn their living as their father is poor, and Grace unable to withstand the physical hardships of menial work becomes a victim of drugs and a frequenter of Chinese opium dens. This is the secret sin.

River Trip Was Greatly Enjoyed

Saturday afternoon's outing for the visiting ministers and laymen of the Bay of Quinte Conference was thoroughly enjoyed. The "Stoney Lake" left the George street wharf at 2 o'clock, made the trip over the Lift Lock and sailed down the river to Hales' Bridge, returning to the city at six o'clock. The afternoon was delightfully cool and the river appeared in its richest colouring of spring. Besides there was the special interest attached to the Life Locks ascension. This trip was provided by Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, A. W. Creasman, W. G. Morrow, R. Neill and Jas. Kendry, and a resolution of appreciation was conveyed to these gentlemen, recognizing their thoughtfulness and hospitality. Capt. Scollard of the Stoney Lake, overlooked nothing he could do for the comfort of the visitors.

LACROSSE

The practice of the Peterborough teams will be held at Riverside Park to-night and in the future. There will be a meeting after practice.

JUNE 21ST DAY OF PRAYER FOR THE EMPIRE IN ALL CHURCHES OF BAY OF QUINTE COFERENCE

All Salaries Paid During Past Year, The Record Report of Sustentation Committee This Morning—Board of Examiners Elected For the Year—Other Work This Morning

Wednesday, June 21st, was appointed at this morning's session of the Bay of Quinte Conference as a day of prayer for the welfare of the Empire in all the churches of the conference. This action followed the presentation of a memorial from the Women's Missionary Society of Cannington, requesting that the Conference authorize Wednesday, June 28, as a day of public prayer in all the Methodist Churches of the Conference. The idea was received with unanimous assent this morning, but the date was changed to June 21st. The churches will be open all day, and the form of public service is left to the individual pastors.

ALL SALARIES PAID.

The report of the Sustentation Committee, presented by Rev. R. A. Whattam, elicited the whole-hearted approval and congratulations of the Conference. It showed that all the salaries had been paid full during the past year, Mr. Whattam observing that this was probably a record and the first time in Methodism that this very satisfactory showing had been made.

Rev. Wm. Johnston proposed an amendment, supported by Rev. J. N. Clarry, that the report be sent back to consider missions on circuit. Mr. Johnston claimed that while provision had been made by the Sustentation Committee for the regular minister, there was no inclusion for missions for a similar consideration.

Rev. Mr. Whattam replied that in this connection appeal should be first made to the Stationing Committee, asking if more men are placed on these missions than can be provided for, or it should go to the Mission Board and force the issue there, or to the standing commission of the Sustentation Committee. All the members were ready to help Mr. Johnston in his plea. Mr. Johnston wanted money for hired local preachers, Mr. Whattam said. Money should not be taken from properly ordained ministers to pay local preachers, most of whom had worked in their own businesses and then offered their help. Their assistance was welcomed, and it was prayed that it would be fruitful, but the ordained men should receive first consideration.

Rev. W. P. Rogers stated that it could be shown that some ministers on weaker service had received less than men on circuit missions.

Mr. Johnston, replying, stated that the Sustentation Committee should not classify those sent out by the Stationing Committee. Consolidation had been carried out as far as possible, but there had been no reduction of the miles these missionaries had to travel. The Missionary Committee had given it all it could, and so had the people in the missions, but Mr. Johnston claimed that the Sustentation Committee should cover the deficiencies.

Rev. Dr. Shorey agreed with Rev. Mr. Johnston, but urged that no claims on the Sustentation Fund should be made until the missions were taken into account and deficiencies previously allotted. This simply meant that no action could be taken for the present.

The amendment was overwhelmed and the report adopted.

Rev. C. E. Cragg moved, seconded by Rev. S. C. Moore, that Rev. Mr. Whattam be secretary-treasurer of the Sustentation Fund this year. Carried.

APPRECIATION OF MINISTERS TRANSFERRED.

It was moved by Dr. Ford, of Norwood, seconded by Rev. Wm. Johnston, that the Conference express its deep regard for the strength and purity of Dr. Burwash and Rev. G. H. Copeland, two ex-Presidents, who have been transferred to the Conference, and "appreciation of the good work done by them while in our midst," and that we wish them many years of happy useful service.

SERMON APPRECIATED

The Conference expressed its appreciation of the inspiring and practical ordination sermon preached on Sunday morning by Rev. C. L. McIrvine, ex-President of the Hamilton Conference in a motion by Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, of Oshawa, seconded by Rev. A. H. Going, the latter of whom urged that the ordination sermon should be preached by the retiring president of the conference for the reason that he comes into closest touch with the candidates for ordination.

VACANCY FILLED.

Rev. David Balfour of Janetville was elected to fill the vacancy in the reserves to the General Conference delegation caused by the transfer of Rev. Dr. Burwash to Toronto.

Regular Meeting Otonabee Chapter of the I.O.D.E.

Interesting Address By Mrs. Huycke —Chapter Will Hold a Fete During the Month

GENERAL BUSINESS

The regular monthly meeting of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon, the 3rd of June.

After the regular business was transacted, the Regent, Mrs. Huycke, gave a most interesting address on the annual meeting of the Order, recently held in Toronto, which she attended as the representative of the Chapter.

It was decided that the Chapter should hold a fete on midsummer, the 21st of June, by kind permission of His Honour Judge Huycke and Mrs. Huycke, in their beautiful grounds at Engleburn.

This entertainment will take the form of a garden party, and outdoor bridge in the afternoon for all who care to play. There will be no admission to the grounds. The fee for the bridge players will be fifty cents, not including refreshments. Afternoon tea will be served, as well as ice cream and soft drinks. There will also be candy and flower tables and a fish pond. Miss English is kindly arranging for a May pole, in which a number of children are taking part, and which will be sure to prove very attractive.

The proceeds of this entertainment will be for the benefit of the 93rd Battalion.

The Executive will be much obliged if all those who wish to form tables for bridge on this afternoon will notify Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, 308 Simcoe Street. Telephone 365.

TREATY WAS NEARLY SIGNED

Britain and Germany Had Come to Terms in June, 1914.

NEW YORK, June 3.—S. S. McClure, editor of the Evening Mail, in an address to a large audience at Carnegie Hall, read the terms of a treaty between England and Germany, which, he said, was drafted and initialed by the conference in June, 1914. If signed, it would have satisfied Germany for decades, he said, and would not have endangered the British Empire. By the treaty, the Bagdad Railway from Constantinople to Basra was definitely left to German capital in co-operation with Turkey. Basra was to become a sea harbour, in the building of which German capital would be 60 per cent. and English 40 per cent. For navigation from Basra to the Persian Gulf the independence of the open sea was agreed to. In the navigation on the Tigris, English capital was interested with fifty per cent., German capital with 25 per cent. and Turkish 25 per cent. The oil wells of the whole of Mesopotamia were to be developed by a British company.

A simultaneous German-French agreement left a free hand to French capital for the construction of railways in southern Syria and Palestine.

Mr. McClure said that England was ready to return the German colonies, but would insist on the restoration of Belgium. In addition to the assurance of security, he said that Germany would insist on retaining the Courland and other German sections of Russia, and on the autonomy of Poland.

A Contribution To The Tobacco Fund From Carlton, Sask.

The Examiner received on Saturday a contribution to the Overseas Tobacco Fund from Carlton, Sask. It is surprising to what extent this Overseas Tobacco Fund has developed. From a very small beginning locally it is now one of the main arteries through which our own tobacco reaches our soldiers at the front, and no little credit is due Messrs. Sodun and Cranfield who did a lot of preparatory work in getting the Tobacco Fund organization on a sound basis.

WAR BREAKS UP BIG ESTATES IN ENGLAND

Owners Are Forced By High Taxes to Dispose of Their Holdings —Americans Are Buying

SAVINGS SWEPT AWAY

"Country life in England will undergo and is undergoing a revolution such as England has not witnessed since the Norman Conquest."

In these words Frank Hirst, editor of the Economist, and one of the leading authorities on economic subjects in England, summed up one of the most striking effects of the war. What he means is that the country gentlemen of the old school are disappearing, squeezed out by the high taxation, the death duties, and killed off in man instances in the service of their country. Their places are being taken by men who have grown rich in supplying goods that are needed by England's immense armies, or are making tremendous profits out of the necessities of the people by taking advantage of the conditions created by the war.

"What will happen to the stately mansions of England after the war?" Mr. Hirst asked. He answered his question as follows:

"In individual cases the answer depends on the investments of the owners. A man who has invested in Brazil or Mexico is in a specially sad way, while the man who has put his money in ships or coal is very fortunate indeed. But on the whole the fate of the landed gentry and of the country seats depends on taxes.

SAVINGS SWEPT AWAY.

"Taxes have already risen high enough to make it certain that most large houses will be to let or for sale, for most country people before the war had places which fitted their means, with a comfortable margin for savings or special expenditure Most of them will have to move to smaller houses if they can find tenants or purchasers. The doubling and trebling of the income tax has swept away the margin, and the higher the flood of taxation rises the fewer country seats will remain unsubmerged.

"Evidently there will be a wholesale migration, and country life will undergo a revolution such as England has not witnessed since the Norman Conquest. Some of the finest estates, I expect, will be bought up by English and American contractors who have made fortunes out of the War Office and the Ministry of Munitions. Others will perhaps be put up by the Labour Ministry and parcelled out among disbanded soldiers whose jobs are gone and for whom no other employment can be found.

The present public expenditure of the Government is supposed to be about equal to the whole of the private incomes of all the the inhabitants of the United Kingdom."

SELLING THEIR ESTATES.

Mr. Hirst's view is fully borne out by the men who are in close touch with the landed gentry. A member of a famous firm of estate agents through whose hands most of the sales of property of this description pass told me that hardly a week goes by that he is not called on to arrange the sale of some large country estate, and that the smaller estates are being placed in his hands for disposal by the score.

"The country gentlemen of England," he said, "simply cannot live under the new conditions. Most of them are dependent absolutely on their rents for their income. A man has a couple of thousand acres which have been in his family for centuries He lets the land out to farmers many of whom have been on the land as long as himself. The rents were fixed years ago when agriculture was depressed, and, although times are good for the farmers now, it is too soon to raise rents.

"No one knows whether the present high prices for agricultural produce will last, and at any rate the farmers had a good many bad years to make up. The squire simply cannot raise the rents, and he cannot live on his income in the old style."

FIND READY PURCHASERS.

"So far there has not been much difficulty in finding purchasers, for there are many people in this country who have made money out of the war, and the Englishman who makes a fortune is always in a hurry to acquire a country seat. There have been a good many American inquiries, too, and some purchases by Americans, but not so many as one would have expected. I am told, however, that a good many Americans are likely to come into the market for English estates after the war is finished. They have an idea that prices may be lower then than they are now."

PRISONERS NOT STARVING.

British Official Declares Conditions in Germany Are Better.

LONDON, June 3.— Discussing in the House of Lords to-day the condition of British prisoners in Germany, Baron Newton, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said their condition was much better than at the beginning of the war, and that it was unjustifiable to contend that Germany discriminated against British prisoners.

Moreover, Baron Newton added, it was cruel to suggest, as had been done, that British prisoners were literally starving. Every week 100,000 parcels went from England to Germany, which was an average of three parcels per man per week. It was an exaggeration to say that without these parcels they would starve, because there were 1,000,000 Russian prisoners in Germany who received no parcels.

A vast majority of the German population, said Baron Newton, were probably in a condition of hunger owing to the British blockade, and prisoners naturally would share that hunger.

LAKE OF BAYS, HIGHLANDS OF ONTARIO.

The beautiful summer resort district in the Highlands of Ontario is anticipating one of the most successful seasons in its history. The Lake of Bays is reached through Huntsville on the Grand Trunk Railway, and offers splendid accommodation to the visitor, excellent boating and fishing, picturesque scenery and invigorating air.

The district is attracting many golfers. A fine course is available near the Wawa Hotel at Murray Point, and another golf course is to be opened this season at Clovelly, just across the Lake from the Hotel. The Wawa opens for the reception of guests on June 15th.

An attractive booklet, describing the Lake of Bays region may be had on application to B. A. Rose, C.P. and Ticket Agent, or C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Toronto, Ont.

NO CLUE DISCOVERED TO DELAREY'S MURDERER

All Efforts of Police to Solve Muncey Case Have Failed.

MUNCEY, June 5.—The jury which under Coroner Dr. Woods of Mount Brydges, resumed its inquiry into the death of Philip Delarey, whose body was found in the Thames here, brought in a verdict as follows:

"That Philip Delarey came to his death from a blow on the head, inflicted by some person or persons unknown."

The case was resumed to-night after an adjournment of three weeks during which the police have been trying to find a clue. All efforts have proven unsuccessful. Crown Attorney McKillop of London was here to-night and conducted the examination

MARRIED WOMEN MAKE GOOD AS MAKERS OF MUNITIONS

TORONTO, June 3.—Make way for the women! Toronto munition manufacturers are now converted to the wisdom of employing women — and particularly married women—on the making of shells and shell parts.

The scarcity of male labour is one reason. The efficient work that the women do is another. For a week or two the munition makers have been "trying out" female labour on work on small parts and they are well pleased with the experiment.

"We have 15 women at work in our plant now," said Manager Hill, of the Toronto Plate Glass Company, "and in a week more we will have 25. We find that the married women are the best workers. They will work on munitions when they would refuse work of other kinds. You see, there is a touch of sentiment and patriotism in it. They are helping to win the war as well as making a living for themselves. We pay the women $8 or $9 a week and we have a premium system which makes it possible for them to earn up to $12 a week. We were paying boys of 16 about $16 a week, but they were not steady and dependable."

Manufacturers say that unmarried women are not as good workers as the wives and widows. They are more inclined to be independent and to throw up their jobs if they don't like them, which, of course, interferes with the regularity and efficiency of the plant."

Horrors Mark Bulgars Drive Into Greece

(By Gaston Richard, War Correspondent of the Petit Parisien.)

SALONIKA, June 2.—I have just returned from a visit to Demir Hissar and Seres, where I witnessed scenes of desolation equalling in horror the exodus from Belgium into Northern France. The roads of Eastern Macedonia were choked with panic-stricken Greeks fleeing before the on-coming Bulgarians.

They were driving cattle, sheep, horses and goats before them, pushing handcarts containing their belongings and carrying their weeping children. Beneath a torrid sun the wretched, homeless people struggled along concealed in a choking dust-cloud.

Demis Hissar, when I arived there, was dense with refugees. They had been swarming into the little town since Sunday, clamouring for protection and begging for bread. But there were only forty sacks of flour for 30,000 people, and the majority of the refugees are starving to death.

All Food Seized.

The same scenes ocurred at Seres, where the authorities vainly endeavoured to collect food. Every one of these wretched people tells harrowing stories of Bulgarian abominations.

Led by pro-Bulgarian Greeks, troops swarmed into the frontier villages, seized all the available food and killed all the beasts, striking down the civilians who attempted to interfere.

I saw a girl with a deep cut eight inches long round her neck, caused by a Bulgarian soldier, who snatched a tawdry necklace from her. Another girl, who had been wearing earrings, had the lobes of both ears torn away.

A great majority of the young girls were carried off by the troops under the eyes of the officers, who also allowed the most wanton pillage.

When the people begged mercy and asked to be allowed to leave their homes, the officers cried, "Where will you go? We shall take Seres, Drama, Kavala and Salonika and hurl the allies into the sea."

Encouraged by Uhlans.

Men who returned to their villages to fetch their missing womanfolk never rejoined the refugee columns. All stories agree that Uhlans encouraged the Bulgarian pillage, but did not participate in it themselves. German officers, however, made no effort to prevent the orgies.

When a young woman, covered with blood, threw herself at the feet of a German colonel and implored his protection, he merely shrugged his shoulders, remarking:

"You knew we were coming. Why didn't you leave before?"

ALL CREMATIONS TO BE INVESTIGATED

DISCLOSURES IN WAITE CASE PROMPT NEW SYSTEM IN POLICE DEPARTMENT.

New York, June 3.—The fact that the police department has taken precautions to prevent the hiding of crime by cremation following the disclosures in the Waite case, developed yesterday when an investigation was made into the death of Daniel Dorn, a cigar maker, living in the North Hempstead Turnpike, Flushing.

Mr. Dorn died on Tuesday night, of pneumonia, and the undertaker at the request of the family, applied for a permit for the cremation of the body. The Board of Health immediately notified the Eighth Detective Branch, and Detective James Knapp made a thorough investigation of the circumstances surrounding Mr. Dorn's death. This included a report from Dr. Daniel Swann, the physician who prescribed for Dr. Dorn, an inquiry throughout the neighborhood regarding the conditions at the Dorn home. Then the permit was granted.

It was stated yesterday at the office of the Health Commissioner that for the last three weeks at the request of the police, the Health Department has notified police headquarters of all applications for cremation permits. The police then decide what action to take. This course is to be permanent.

Ashes or air slacked lime on the floors of the poultry house will assist in keeping the house free from mites.

WAR NEWS CONTINUED

Special to The Examiner:

Wounded officers reaching London late to-night report that Gen. Mercer, severely wounded, has been taken to Boulogne Hospital. If this is correct it is General Williams who has been taken prisoner.

THE BRITISH OFFICIAL.

The British official statement issued at midnight Saturday gave the following account of the battle:

"Fighting of a very severe nature continued unceasingly southeast of Ypres between Hooge and the Ypres-Menin railway. Following on their initial advantage obtained yesterday evening in penetrating our forward line in this neighbourhood, the Germans pushed their attack during the night and succeeded in pushing through our defences to a depth of 700 yards in the direction of Zillebeke.

"TThe Canadian troops, however, who are holding this sector of the defences, launched counter-strokes at 7 o'clock this morning, which have succeeded in gradually driving the enemy from much of the ground he had gained. The Canadians behaved with the utmost gallantry, counter-attacking successfully after a heavy and continued bombardment.

"The enemy losses were severe. A large number of German dead were abandoned on the recaptured ground. General Mercer and General Williams, of the Third Canadian Division, who were inspecting the front trenches yesterday during the bombardment, are missing."

Sunday night British official said: "The situation around Ypres has not materially altered. There have been artillery bombardments, and our troops retain the ground regained in their counter-attacks yesterday. No fresh attacks have been undertaken by us."

THE GERMAN VERSION.

The German report of the fight as contained in Saturday's official communication reads:

"We captured by storm on Friday the ridges of the heights southeast of Zillebeke, southeast of Ypres, and the English position beyond, taking prisoners one general, slightly wounded; one major, and 13 other officers and 350 unwounded men. The number of prisoners taken was small, the enemy having suffered very sanguinary losses. During the night attempted counter-attacks made by the enemy were easily repulsed."

Germans Unable To Gain a Yard

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS (French Official), June 5.—The Germans launched several hot infantry attacks against Fort Vaux last night employing liquid fire, but despite these attacks were repulsed, says the French official communique to-day. Elsewhere along the line east of the Meuse the fighting was heavy, but the Germans were unable to gain a yard, the statement says.

Germans Everywhere Repulsed at Verdun

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 5.—The armies of the Crown Prince battling for Verdun, continued violent assaults in the region of Dead Man's Hill, Hill 304, Fort Douaumont and Fort Vaux, all Sunday, and were everywhere repulsed, official reports to the French War Office says. A German infantry attack late Sunday, according to a report, wrested some of the French line trenches in the region between Damloup and Fort Vaux, but the invaders were quickly driven out by a fierce counter-attack.

SHOWS GREAT BRITAIN'S SUPREMACY OF SEA

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, June 5.—That fuller details of the North Sea naval battle show Great Britain's supremacy of the sea, is in no way impaired, and that the German boasts of "victory" are utterly unjustified, is the opinion of the editorials of the New York newspapers. The New York Press sum up as follow: "So far as concerns the naval power of Great Britain or Germany, the outstanding facts is that when the real fight came, the Kaiser's navy was driven off the sea."

The Sun says: "In the resumption of interrupted trading, not in lists of warships sunk and sailors killed, will be the proof of Germany victory. Until it is accomplished, the rulership of oceans cannot be said to have shifted from the Island Kingdom to the Central Powers."

SAYS HINDENBURG AND LUTZOW WERE SUNK

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 5.—British officers of the fleet which participated in the Jutland battle and have returned here, positively identify two of the big German warships sunk as the Hindenburg, Germany's biggest battleship, and the Lutzow. The Litzow, a battle cruiser of 26,600 tons, was built at Danzic, and completed in 1915.

The Hindenburg is not listed in the latest naval records. It has been reported, however, that she was a battleship of the largest and most powerful type, launched in the fall of 1915.

GERMAN DREADNOUGHT SEYDLITZ BADLY DAMAGED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 5.—Copenhagen despatches say that the German Dreadnought Seydlitz is also badly damaged in port at Kiel, as a result of Wednesday's fight. The totals at noon of the ships lost at Jutland are German 18, British 14.

Jutland Battle a Glorious British Win

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 5.—The outcome of the naval battle off Jutland is described in the Morning Telegraph, as absolutely favourable to the British. "The conditions in the North Sea have in particular been improved. There is almost complete assurance that there will be no flying visits to our coast from German battle cruisers," says the Telegraph. The morning papers with fuller details available on the great naval battle show no tinge of pessimism. The Morning Post calls the fight "a victory so momentous that the results may prove the turning point of the war."

The Graphic says: "At the first real trial of strength, the British navy has achieved a glorious victory, only robbed of its full fruit by the enemy's flight."

The Express comments briefly that "victors do not run away." Several editorials lament the misleading wording of the Admiralty's first announcements. "The navy won a great victory, and the Admiralty announced it like a defeat," says the Morning Post.

SUCCESS FOR THE RUSSIANS

Special to the Examiner:

PETROGRAD, June 5.—Russian forces have won great successes along the front from the Pripet marshes to the Roumanian frontier, according to an official announcement issued here to-day.

It is stated that the Russians took 12,000 prisoners, Turks and Bulgarians.

Inter Battalion Transfer—

No. 196504 Pte. W. F. Logon is transferred from 'B' Company to staff (Orderly) from 3rd June.

J. E. R. MUNRO, Captain,
Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

The 93rd Battalion Bugle Band has been made happy by the arrival of a new bass drum. Drummer Andy Ray can now swing his arms to his heart's content.

The number of men lost by the 93rd in the draft for the Pioneer Battalion was not as large as was first expected. Instead of fifty men, only twenty-one were selected. 'C' Company loses the most, seven men; B and D lose five each, while four were taken from A Company.

First Inspection.

The Kingston Standard says: Yesterday morning the entire camp turned out for its first inspection by the camp commandant, Colonel Hemming. Every man in camp was in line, and it was a fine sight to see ten thousand men in khaki line-up on the heights of Barriefield. The old commons never contained so many soldiers before, and it is safe to say that they never contained a finer looking lot of men, drawn from every part and portion of the 3rd Military District. A number of civilians were present to see the ten thousand men march past, and they were well rewarded for their presence. The troops gathered on the field directly in front of headquarters, and those who feel that the commons are too small to accommodate such a number, should have been present yesterday. When every battalion was in position, there was room enough left to place another five thousand without crowding. Colonel Hemming first inspected the battalions drawn up in two columns, after which the 9 battalions marched past in columns of platoons, headed by brass band, bugle band, and pipe band, and for men who had never paraded in this manner before, the showing was a remarkable one. Here and there were errors in position and conduct, but it was surprising how few in number were the mistakes made by the 10,000 men and their officers yesterday morning. Colonel Hemming, accompanied by his staff recived the salute as the platoons passed by, at a point near the junction of the main road and the central road leading into camp.

93rd Battalion.

The 93rd Battalion came first. This battalion belongs to Peterborough and is commanded by Lt.-Col. Johnston, formerly of the 3rd P. W. O. Dragoons. The battalion was strong in numbers, and made up of strong, sturdy type of men. It was headed by the fine band of the battalion, and its marching and bearing was good.

109th Battalion.

The 109th battalion comes from Lindsay, and was recruited throughout the counties of Victoria and Haliburton. It is commanded by Lt.-Col. Fee, but at the inspection yesterday, Col. Fee and his staff were absent, having gone with band and bugle band to Toronto, as the guests of Lady Eaton. The 109th was commanded yesterday morning by a young subaltern, Lieut. Brokenshire, and with a borrowed bugle band from the 93rd, swung into line and went past the saluting point with a snap and vim which showed that they had been well drilled and trained.

A LETTER FROM FRONT.

Mrs. Ratchford, 200 Edinburgh Street, whose son, Pte. Chas. Ratchford, of the Mounted Rifles, was killed in action some time ago, has received the following letter, written May 17th, from his chum, Pte. Chas. Veenman, of the 4th C.M.R., formerly of the 8th:

Dear Mrs. Ratchford,—Just a few lines in answer to your letter which I received yesterday morning. We just came out of the trenches again and are back in the rest camp again for a few more days. I was surprised to get your letter first, because I intended to write to you before we went into the trenches, but I left it until it was too late. I am awfully sorry I did because it was the first thing I should have done, because Charlie and I have been pals ever since we enlisted, and I know it would have been the first thing he would have expected me to do, and that is write to you. Well, Mrs. Ratchford, the last I saw of Charlie was when we were in the rest camp just before we went into the trenches. He came to my hut, and we both went over to the Y.M.C.A. to have something to eat, having just been paid, and it was there he showed me your picture with the children. My but he did prize that picture. He thought there was nothing else like it. Well, we talked together for quite a while, and then went back to our huts, and that was the last I saw of Charlie, for we went into the trenches that night. Charlie's company was in the trench on the left of our trench. It was a couple of days after we were in that I heard that Charlie was killed. I can't tell you how bad we felt over it, especially Jack Foster. It hit him very bad, for he used to use Charlie as if he was his own son. I was talking to the stretcher-bearer who dressed Charlie, and I am glad to be able to tell you he didn't die in pain at all for he died the minute he was hit, with a peaceful smile on his face. The chaplain was there at his burial and Charlie was laid to rest with another comrade out of his own troop in the 8th. I'd like to be able to tell you where he was buried but I can't, for we are not allowed to mention the place we are at, but one thing it is in a place where the Canadians made a great name for themselves last year. All his belongings were taken off him, and are being sent home to you, including the picture you sent him. He had a nice cross just above his grave with his name and number and name of his regiment on, so I am sure that after the war you could easily find his grave. He never said anything at all before he died, but I am sure his thoughts were with you and the rest, as they always were, for he was everlastingly speaking of the folks at home. I think this is all I can tell you about Charlie, but if there is anything else let me know by all means. I know how bad you must feel over it Mrs. Ratchford, but there is one consolation, and that is you can hold your head up and say your son was a man, not a cowardly slacker. Those fellows that are hanging back over there now won't always have it their own way for when the boys over here get back where will they stand?

I saw Jack Foster yesterday morning on our way out from the trenches, and he is looking fine. I mean he is keeping fine, for as far as looking goes over here we all look like a bunch of hoboes when we come out, but after we have been in the rest camp a couple of days we get looking spic and span, but it doesn't last long. Well Mrs. Ratchford this is all this time. The boys all wish me to send their deepest sympathy to you along with mine. So good-by.

From yours truly,
Charlie's Pal.

Word has been received that Lieut. Douglas Huyche is suffering from injuries inflicted by shell fragments in the right arm, shoulder and head. The message adds that he is showing splendid nerve and progressing favourably.

Five members of the 93rd Battalion who were ill in hospital when the battalion left last week, were discharged from hospital this morning and will go to Barriefield in the course of a few days to rejoin the battalion.

Major Cameron, A.M.C., has returned from Toronto and was duty at the armouries this morning.

Recruiting, while not a rush by any means, is continuing steadily. In the last week, Capt. Kennedy has secured a dozen recruits for the Queen's Ambulance Unified, Lieut. Ketchum and his staff have taken on the same number for the 93rd, and Lieut. Thompson, who started recruiting for the new 74th Battery, has also been successful in securing a number of men. In addition the 255th of Bowmanville took several men out of Peterborough last week.

The bugle band of the 93rd Battalion played for the 109th Battalion during the Review at Kingston on Friday. Both the brass and bugle bands of the 109th were absent in Toronto as guests of Lady Eaton and the 93rd Buglers filled the gap.

It is believed here that the Sergt. A. McBride, Canadian list on Saturday, as having been awarded the Military Cross, is Sergt. Archie McBride of Peterborough, who has been at the front with the 4th Battery ever since the first contingent reached France.

Gunner W. Sindon, formerly of the 93rd Battery, has been transferred to the 74th, and is assisting Lieut. Thompson and Corp. O'Connor in the local recruiting for the new battery.

A Rebel "Communique" Issued By The Irish Rebels During The Recent Uprising

"Flag of Free Ireland"—Connolly Issued Report of Fighting in Dublin and Referred to "Our Allies in Germany"

A copy has just been received in London of the proclamation issued by James Connolly, who styled himself "Commandant-General of the Dublin Division." The proclamation was found on the body of T. O'Reilly, one of the rebel leaders, after he had been shot leading a charge near the General Post Office in Dublin.

The proclamation, which is dated April 28, the day before the Sinn Fein "garrison" surrender, follows:

"Army of the Irish Republic (Dublin Command), Headquarters, Apr. 28.

"To Soldiers:

"This is the fifth day of the establishment of the Irish Republic, and the flag of our country still floats from the most important buildings in Dublin and is gallantly protected by the officers and Irish soldiers in arms throughout the country. Not a day passes without fresh postings of Irish soldiers eager to do battle for the old cause. Despite the utmost vigilance of the enemy we have been able to get information telling us how the manhood of Ireland, inspired by our splendid action, are gathering to offer up their lives if necessary in the same holy cause. We are here hemmed in because the enemy feels that in this building is to be found the heart and inspiration of our great movement.

"Let us remind you what you have done. For the first time in 700 years the flag of a free Ireland floats triumphantly in Dublin city.

"British Fear to Attack."

"The British army, whose exploits we are forever having dinned into our ears, which boasts of having stormed the Dardanelles and the German lines on the Marne, behind their artillery and machine guns are afraid to advance to the attack or storm any positions held by our forces. The slaughter they suffered in the first few days has totally unnerved them, and they dare not attempt again an infantry attack on our positions.

"Our Commandants around us are holding their own.

"Commandant Daly's splendid exploit in capturing Linen Hall barracks we all know. You must know also that the whole population, both clergy and laity, of this district, are united in his praises. Commandant McDonagh is established in an impregnable position reaching from the walls of Dublin Castle to Redmond's Hill, and from Bishop Street to Stephen's Green.

"In Stephen's Green Commandant —— holds the College of Surgeons, one side of the square, a portion of the other side, and dominates the whole green and all its entrances and exits).

Rebel Positions.

"Commandant De Valera stretches in a position from the gas works to Westland Row, holding Boland's Bakery, Boland's Mills, Dublin South-Eastern Railway Works, and dominating Merrion Square.

"Commandant Kent holds the South Dublin Union and Guinness's building to Marrowbone Lane, and controls Manieson Street and district.

"On two occasions the enemy effected a lodgment and were driven out with great loss.

"The men of the North County Dublin are in the field, have occupied all the police barracks in the district, destroyed all the telegram system on the Great Northern Railway up to Dundalk, and are operating against the trains of the Midland and Great Western.

"Dundalk has sent 200 men to march upon Dublin, and in the other parts of the North our forces are active and growing.

"Our Allies in Germany."

"In Galway Capt. ——, fresh after his escape from an Irish prison, is in the field with his men. Wexford and Wicklow are strong, and Cork and Kerry are equally acquitting themselves creditably. (We have every confidence that our allies in Germany and our kinsmen in America are straining every nerve to hasten matters in our behalf).

"As you know, I was wounded twice yesterday, and am unable to move about, but have got my bed moved into the firing line, and, with the assistance of your officers, will be just as useful to you as ever.

"Courage, boys, we are winning, and in the hour of our victory let us not forget the splendid women who have everywhere stood by us and cheered us on. Never had man or woman a grander cause, never was a cause more grandly served.

"James Connolly,
"Commandant-General, Dublin Division."

THE TURK IS NON-'SPEAKABLE"

British Officers Speak in Praise of Qualities of Ottoman Foe

To the average American the Turk is a swarthy cut-throat, waving a scimitar, bellowing "Allah," and wallowing in the blood of infidel giaours, says the New York Tribune. History is responsible for the epithets "terrible" and "unspeakable" which have clung so tenaciously to the popular conception of the Ottoman that it comes as a rude shock to find the average Turk a human being, and, furthermore, decidedly "speakable."

During the recent British campaign in Mesopotamia a band of Arabs, retaining all their ancient notions of warfare, proved a thorn in the flesh of both the English and Turkish forces. Hovering about the flanks of both armies, they would raid first one side and then the other, choosing opportunities for securing the most plunder with the least risk to themselves. Those tactics naturally proved so annoying to both sides that one commander sent his opponent the following message:

United Against Common Foe.

"I am thoroughly tired of these Bedouin robbers and their treachery. You must be also. Let us, therefore, make a truce with one another for two or three days and mete out to these Arabs such punishment as will put an end to their tricks."

The author of this unusual request was not the British commander, but the "unspeakable" Turk! The Turk who writes of this incident does not add what answer was given, but it is safe to say that such a sporting proposition could not be turned down by a true Britisher.

From the very entrance of Turkey into this world war — a step repulsive to a people already heartily sick of being drafted into the ranks—the English press has taken a different attitude toward their Turkish foes than it has toward the Teutons. A gleaning of the leading periodicals reveals countless incidents of the Turks' chivalry as fighters and aboveboard methods when not under the direct observation of their German officers.

Praised by British.

"I have such admiration for the Turks," wrote a British officer serving in Mesopotamia to "The London Morning Post," February 7, "the pukka Turks, I mean, not the Kurdish savages who butcher Armenians or the Bagdad Turco-Arabs, that I wonder more and more how they ever come into the German net. They did a thing after Ctesiphon that commands recognition.

"A bargeload of 300 of our wounded stuck in the mud, and with some medical personnel on board had to be abandoned. The Turks towed the barge downstream, and under cover of the white flag, sent the whole lot, including the medical personnel, back to the British camp unharmed in any way.

Humane Act.

"I know of two wounded British officers left out the night after the battle who were found by the Turks. In both cases the Turks took away all their equipment, haversack, belt, revolver, papers and field glasses, but both men say they were not harmed in any way. In the case of one man they gave him water to drink, loosened his coat and made him more comfortable. They left both for our people to collect the next morning. It is the Arabs who maltreat our wounded and commit all sorts of atrocities."

Munition Making Is Hard On Women

Not Because of the Work But Because of the Long Hours Necessary

Who Used to Spend Their Evenings Dancing and Card-Playing—Food Difficulty.

LONDON, June 5.—The sheer necessity of the war has forced women of every social grade to undertake arduous and alient labour, for which, by reason of their long enforced inactivity and exclusion from the fields of labour, they are as yet, unprepared to meet without a certain amount of physical discomforts.

The long hours that, though acknowledged as undesirable for women workers, are inevitable in successfully meeting the present needs, are already a source of much illness. Eight hours a day is admitted to be quite sufficient for a woman, yet, at the moment, it is impossible to substitute these more preferable hours for the 12-hour system to-day existing. The eight-hour shift would necessarily mean a change either late at night or in the early hours of the morning, when it is impossible for the woman worker to reach her home.

This very formidable difficulty is fully recognized, and every effort is being made to alleviate the strain imposed by the long hours. The Minister of Munitions has appointed a responsible person whose sole charge and duty is to ensure the physical welfare of the woman worker. The remedy lies in the conditions, not in the reduction of work, for the work is certainly not proving too hard.

Hurts Less Than Dancing.

As Dr. Mary Scharlieb, the eminent woman specialist, remarked only a few days ago: "Work alone never kills; conditions may tend to sickness and disease, but solid useful work, such as the munition worker is doing to-day, is far less injurious to the health than the undue excitement of the bridge-playing and dancing of normal times."

Certainly it appears far more healthy, for several women friends who used to spend the days idling, and the nights in card-playing or other such frivolities now work hard in the munition factory for 12 hours, and spend the rest of the day in well-earned rest, and all agree they are infinitely better for the changed conditions. As one of them so ably, though somewhat crudely, expressed it—"Hard work keeps your liver in good order."

Intervals of rest to overcome mental and physical fatigue are the most essential need in the successful employment of women to-day, for not only is the work wearying to the woman worker, but anatomically and psychologically she is unfit for the monotonous strain for any length of time.

Short Breaks at Intervals.

Plenty of rest and comfort is most essential to safeguard her health. Many managers speak highly of the efficiency of a 10 or 15-minutes' break every three or four hours. This provides ample time for the women to refresh themselves by a wash, or to make a cup of tea, and enables them to continue their work with renewed energy. An hour for the hot mid-day meal, or midnight, is most necessary, as the comfortable consumption of food is essential to ensure against the ravages of indigestion and its attendant diseases to which women are so subject.

Many of the women munition workers suffer great difficulties about their food, which, while often proving most acceptable and highly gratifying to the ordinary woman labourer, will invariably appear unappetizing and coarse to the more delicately natured woman, who will be obliged to either eat the food with little or no satisfaction or go without. If provision and means were given the women to make their own tea and heat their own food, they can eat and enjoy; for it must be remembered that the woman worker to-day is drawn from every class and type—from the coster, the domestic, the dressmaker, shop-assistant, the art and university student, to the social woman whose hitherto sheltered existence renders the present conditions trying and exacting. Much thought and care must be exercised to extract the utmost amount of working capacity.

BABY IRENE WILL HAVE TWO MOTHERS

JUDGE LANDIS ORDERS INFANT TO HOSPITAL WHERE TWO WOMEN CLAIMANTS MAY SEE HER

Chicago, Ill., June 5.—Irene, the infant daughter of Mrs. Dollie Lerger-wood Maters, or of Miss Margaret Ryan, is to have the benefit for several weeks of two mothers. Both of them will have to see her at the Michael Reese Hospital at specified hours, which Judge Landis will determine to-morrow morning.

Judge Landis to-day ordered the baby to be taken to the hospital where if Dr. Mark Jampolis determines it will not be harmful to her both women may see her.

Judge Landis said he would take the case up as soon as the State's action against Mrs. Maters on a perjury charge is settled.

"Now, Johnny," asked the gentleman who had consented to take the class, "what does this fascinating story of Jonah and the whale teach us?" "It teaches us," said Johnny, whose father reads practical articles on practical people, "that you cannot keep a good man down."

War Press Service In Paris Elaborate

All News Matters, Except Censorship, Disposed of at House in Rue Francois

Two Trips in a Month to Front, Each Limited to Four Days and Half Dozen Men.

PARIS, May 27.—The "Maison de la Presse," or the "Home of the Press," is the name given to a new apartment building in the Rue Francois that now shelters the war press service of France. All transactions between the Government and representatives of the press, local and foreign, are done there except the censorship of news. The service has been installed in these more commodious quarters in order to bring about more satisfactory relations between the press and the Government and between the press and the army.

Though the news censorship is kept apart, the war films are shown there for the first time and examined by the military authorities. Everything else concerning the publicity and propaganda of the war is centred there, including the photographic service. There are separate departments for the French press and for the foreign press, with commodious waiting rooms and work rooms for journalists; there is a department on diplomatic information and a department on military information, the former subsidiary to the Foreign Office and the latter to the War Office; it is there the war correspondent must go for the rare and persistently sought permit to approach the field of military operations.

Correspondents' permits are given out in batches of six or fewer at a time, and there are about two trips of a maximum of four days each every month on the average. Since there are upward of a hundred or more regular American and English newspaper correspondents waiting their turn, to say nothing of authors artists, intermittent and special writers of all kinds, with a considerable number of Italian, Spanish, Russian Swedish, South American, Norwegian, and Swiss correspondents, it is a great school of patience to the ardent journalist.

Periods of Waiting.

The period of waiting is not devoid of heartburnings, for the correspondent who was here "before the war" and has held the fort ever since. He often sees a "special" man who arrived in the morning going out with a party to the front the same or the following day. That has frequently happened for reasons that are best known to the French Foreign Office but are supposed to be chiefly psychological. The old war horses have become a little worn, the new arrival with a fresh face comes in with a more optimistic view of the situation and he generally has some new argument to prove that he is the one marked predestined to be the proper exponent of the situation in France to the American public. He has the further advantage of never having yet had occasion to complain that the time is long between trips.

It requires something like a hundred capable men, in a large proportion Parisian newspaper men, mobilized and detailed by the General Staff, to do this work. There are among them such conspicuous representatives as Robert de Jouvenel, editor in chief of the Matin, M. Chaumeix one of the members of the editorial staff of the Journal des Debats, Rene, Puaux, a war correspondent and a member of the special staff of the Temps.

There are also men from the diplomatic service detailed to look after the propaganda of the war to the limited extent that France has engaged in such work, but chiefly to take care of the wants of correspondents of foreign newspapers. This service is under the immediate direction of Henri Ponsot, a man of considerable experience in the consular and diplmatic service abroad, and possessing the energy required in dealing with the mass of detail connected with the desire of so many correspondents to be all at the same time on the firing line. Associated with M Ponsot in this work is G. B. d-Anglade, former Consul General at New York.

All these services are under the general direction of M. Gauthier, selected by the Government for general supervision of all the affairs connected with the press.

Trips to the Front.

The correspondent who has complied with the regulations adopted at the beginning of the war, has a medical certificate, references from his Ambassador as to his honorableness and who is fortunate enough to get his permit to go to the front, joins a party of from four to six, goes by rail to a point decided on in advance, and is there met by the officer detailed by the General Staff to show the party over the itinerary previously arranged. Few insignificant modifications and no changes in the itinerary are possible, and so long as the party is under the conduct of the officer it is subject to military regulations.

"What they see at the front is nearly every case a repetition of what was seen by the previous party, but that is the fault of the trench warfare, which has introduced into the military operations a monotony that does not at all further the interests of the war correspondent. The trips are generally so managed that the correspondents are able to sleep in a comfortable bed at some hotel near enough to the front to be easily accessible in the motor car. They pay their own hotel bills and their own railway car fares, but the motor cars are requisitioned vehicles provided by the General Staff. When it is all over and the cop is ready, it must be submitted to the officer who has guided the party for his censorship, and to avoid friction and curb the zeal of any correspondent tempted to get the better of a rival, an hour is generally fixed by the officer for the submission of the cop in common.

The revision of it is sometimes a simple matter—occasionally quite serious. The correspondent must not give names of officers, numbers of regiments and names of places; he must not describe damage to buildings from bombardments if he named the buildings and the town; he is frequently allowed to mention officers if he does not name localities, and he can under certain circumstances, name localities if he does not mention officers or men or any specific destruction. In no case may he talk about the number of troops or the nature of the troops, whether active, reserve, or territorial; neither can he say where they come because an indication of the homes of certain soldiers would give the German Staff the numbers of the regiments and thus help them to arrive at an estimate of the total forces in front of them. In describing bombarded towns he must be careful not to mention any important buildings that have escaped damaged.

RUSSIA'S PRISONERS RAVAGED BY DISEASE

CAMP OF AUSTRIANS A SCENE OF GREAT DESTITUTION—ITS GOVERNOR ACCUSED OF GRAFT

VIENNA, May 24.—Seventeen thousand Austro-Hungarian prisoners of war out of about 80,000 confined in the camp at Orenburg, Eastern Russia, have died owing to the absense of good sanitary measures, bad food, lack of clothing and exposure to the cold according to Report No. 5,879 of the American Embassy at Petrograd, dated March 15, 1916.

This report evidently is by an attache of the Petrograd embassy who recently made a tour of inspection of the Russian camps in which prisoners of war from Austria-Hungary and Germany are being held. It charges the Governor of the Orenburg camp with having misappropriated large sums of money and of paying no attention to the complaints of the prisoners.

Several months ago the Austro-Hungarian Government asked the American Government to inquire into the state of affairs prevailing in Russian prison camps in which Austro-Hungarians had been confined.

A high Government official states that at that time the Austro-Hungarian Government was afraid to let the truth become known and that it still hoped that the reports which had come to Vienna were greatly exaggerated.

Since then the Government has received a number of reports, among them several from the American Embassy at Petrograd. To-day the Austro-Hungarian Government has despaired of ever getting many of its prisoners of war back from Russia. Though accurate figures are still lacking, it is believed that so far more than 30 per cent. of all Austro-Hungarian prisoners in Russia have died, most of them from camp or filth disease of the order spread by vermin, typhus having the lead.

The report of the American Embassy at Petrograd here cited, and which the correspondent has read, shows that the camp at Orenburg has forty-five sheds, none of which is suitable for human habitation in the Winter. Each shed has a stove, but at the time the investigation was made the prisoners said that they were given no wood, despite the fact that wood for fuel is plentiful in that part of Russia.

The prisoners are obliged to sleep on wooden benches without even a straw mattress. No blankets have been issued them according to the report, and the men have no other covering than their own clothing and the rags left by those who have died. Vermin abound, and the result is wholesale infection. Nearly all the men have been sick at one time or another. As a rule they are given no medical attention, and are left to die, the report states, their suffering being eased by their comrades as best this may be done.

Attached to the report is a statement by the investigator that after he had been in camp at Orenburg the Russian authorities prevented him from visiting other points, and that for this season he had made up his mind to report what he had seen.

The Austro-Hungarian Government has so far withheld from the people any account of what conditions in the Russian prison camps are, fearing that thousands of families would be subjected to great mental torture should the actual state of affairs become known to them.

"LOW VISIBILITY"

The expression "low visibility," which was used in the first British official statement about the North Sea battle, is the cause of some perplexity. The statement said, "The German battle fleet, aided by low visibility, avoided a prolonged action with our main forces." This means that a slight mist, prevalent on the North Sea at this time of the year owing to evaporation caused by the heat of the sun on the cold water, makes it impossible to see the sky-line or horizon. Under such conditions it might be impossible to see more than five or six miles, whereas otherwise the British might have located fleeing German vessels at a range of eight or ten miles. The matter of light from the setting sun is another factor and again the British, as at Coronel, were to the west and the Germans on the land side in the gathering gloom. Low visibility is a decided advantage for destroyers and submarines.

BIRD HUSBANDS ACT JUST LIKE MEN

Bird husbands have some human traits, it seems Mr. S. T. Brixley put up an elaborate four-apartment birdhouse in her back yard in Euclid Heights, Cleveland, O., a few weeks ago. She was puzzled when half a dozen or more birds loafed on the roof of the house, but built no nests. She finally figured out the situation. "While their wives are nesting elsewhere the men birds have been using my birdhouse as a club," said Mrs. Brixley indignantly.

NAVAL VICTORY DECISIVE BLOW TO GERMAN NAVY

Regarding the battle of the Skagerrack the Admiralty says:

"The British losses have already been fully stated. There is nothing to add to or subtract from the account published by the Admiralty. The enemy losses are less easy to determine. That the account they have given to the world is false is certain, and we cannot yet be sure of the exact truth. But from such evidence as has come to our knowledge the Admiralty entertain no doubt that the German losses are heavier than the British, not merely relatively to the strength of the two fleets, but absolutely. There seems to be the strongest ground for supposing that included in the German losses are two battleships, two Dreadnought battle cruisers of the most powerful type, two of the latest light cruisers — the Wiesbaden and the Elbing — a light cruiser of the Rostock type, the light cruiser Frauenlob, nine destroyers and a submarine."

In these words the British Admiralty gives ample evidence that the first reports sent out from Berlin of the greatest of naval battles were either deliberately false and concocted to deceive the German people, or were the result of fragmentary information picked up before the return of the German fleet to its home ports. The probability is that the first bulletins were prepared in Berlin before the details of the battle had been learned by the German Admiralty. It is inconceivable that even the conscienceless liars of the Wilhelmstrasse would permit the people of Germany to celebrate as a great naval victory what was in reality a crushing defeat, for if Germany has lost even one battleship of the Kaiser type, the pre-Dreadnought Pommern and two battle cruisers, she will not be able again to make headway against the Grand Fleet under the command of Sir John Jellicoe. The loss of two battle cruisers would leave her almost without fast battleships. If the Derfflinger and Lutzow are gone Germany has only one battle cruiser able to steam thirty knots and no battleship able to steam more than twenty-two or twenty-three knots. On the other hand, Britain has at least five battleships, and seven battle cruisers of greater speed than twenty-five knots, one of the battle cruisers the Tiger, being the fastest armoured vessel now afloat.

The effect of the loss of even three Dreadnoughts upon the German naval strength must be decisive. Berlin admits the loss of but one Dreadnought, the battleship Westfalen. But there is decisive testimony from Sir David Beatty himself that he saw a battle cruiser of the largest class sink. Other officers have informed the Admiralty that they passed another battle cruiser in a sinking condition while pursuing the German main fleet, and upon their return failed to discover her. There seems little doubt that out of her strength of 24 Dreadnought battleships and battle cruisers Germany has lost at least three vessels, perhaps four, while Britain's loss of three similar vessels must be deducted from a total strength of 45 such ships, leaving Britain still 42 ships of the Dreadnought class, against 21, the greatest possible German total. In other words, the odds in favour of Britain have been increased as a result of the engagement from 45 to 24 to 42 to 21. The battle proved that the Dreadnought is the decisive factor in sea power. Possessed of a two-to-one supremacy, Sir John Jellicoe has a strangle-hold that has not been in the slightest relaxed but rather strengthened as a result of the battle of the Skaggerrack.

Berlin admits the blowing up of the small cruiser Elbing. There has been no official admission so far of the loss of the Westfalen. That loss, however, was unofficially announced in wireless despatches received in London from Berlin on Saturday. This doubtless means that the information is still withheld from the German public, although given out to the world. Whether the Hindenburg, Germany's greatest super-Dreadnought, was also sunk does not yet appear. The British Admiralty, in a statement issued last night, says: "No information has been obtained concerning a report that the Hindenburg was sunk."

The reassuring information given out upon the authority of Whitehall has wrought an entire change in British sentiment. The first frenzied call for the replacement of the higher naval command has been followed by a somewhat shamefaced silence. In a few days when the full significance of the battle grips the public mind, Sir David Beatty, who, despite an inferiority so great as to warrant his flight when he discovered the strength of the German High Seas Fleet, brought on a general action, may become a national hero. His temerarious attack may prove the decisive act in the naval war.

Men Behaved Gallantly When Attacked by the Enemy in Recent Offensive—Germans Penetrated at One Point on the Line

HEAVY LOSSES

LONDON, June 5.—Describing the action in which the Canadians took such a prominent part and lost so many men, a war expert says: "On Friday evening the enemy concentrated a terrible artillery fire against the south eastern portion of the British salient, particularly that portion extending from Hill 60 to Hooge, a distance of about two miles. The entire front was held by Canadians. The whole salient and the lines of communication in it and behind it for miles was heavily shelled, but the line against which the enemy made his infantry attacks was on the south-east, where the third Canadian division held out. The Canadians behaved magnificently. They retained most of their positions along the two miles of front attacked. Only in the centre opposite Zillebek, did the Germans gain ground and here along a front of about half a mile the enemy advanced a distance of third of a mile."

RELIEF FOR THE RELIEF OFFICER

Mr. F. W. Miller Has Been Asked to Vacate His Present Quarters

For some unexplainable reason Relief Officer W. F Miller has been asked by the Water Commissioners to vacate the room occupied by him as an office wherein relief is dispensed to the needy. Until the City Council provide Mr. Miller with new quarters, the relief officer will be on the street. The room which up to the present has been occupied by Mr. Miller contains among other things a number of utensils used in the testing of the city's water supply. Some persons humourously inclined have designated the room as a "labratory". What it actually contains is a few glass test tubes, a quantity of bottles and considerable rubbish. The latter predominates.

Up to the present both Sanitary Inspector Spence and Relief Officer Miller have occupied the same quarters.

Foresters Attend Divine Service

Canadian Order of Foresters Attend St. Andrew's While Ancient Order of Foresters Attend St. Luke's Church

Members of the City Courts and visiting members of the Canadian Order of Foresters attended divine service in St. Andrew's Church yesterday. A very eloquent sermon was delivered by the Rev. F. J. Shorey of Port Hope, a member of the Methodist Conference, at present meeting in this city.

On returning to their hall on Simcoe street, D.D.H.C.R. J. J. Hartley called the brethren to order and, in a few well-chosen remarks, thanked the brethren for their interest in turning out in such good numbers, commenting favourably on the address they had just listened to, its lessons that could be taken to heart by each and every one.

The following resolution, moved by Bro. Wm. Carter, seconded by Bro. D. Menzies, that a hearty vote of thanks be extended to the Elders and Managers of St. Andrew's Church, for the use of the sacred edifice; the ushers, for seating so comfortably the members; the Choir Master and members for the appropriate music so well rendered; to the Rev. T. H. Mitchell, for his ready response to the Committee's request to preach our annual sermon, and to the Rev. F. J. Shorey, for his sound, Gospel truths, so clearly expounded, and which were listened to with such rapt attention by all present."

The meeting closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

A. O. F. ATTEND ST. LUKE'S.

The Ancient Order of Foresters attended St. Luke's Church in a body. Despite the unfavourable weather conditions there was a fairly large turnout. The Rev. W. H. White took for his text the first epistle general of John 3:14: "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." The speaker pointed out how the principles underlying fraternal organizations is the basis of Christian principle. This was worked out under three heads, namely, the benefit department, the fraternal and social departments and the patriotic and imperial aspects.

Jelly bags, pudding bags and strainer cloths should be thrown into clear warm water immediately after using them.

WEDDING BELLS

HOOPER—LEE.

A very quiet wedding took place in Wesley Methodist Church, Calgary, Alta., on Wednesday, May 24, when the Pastor, Rev. Mr. Farrell, united in marriage, Miss Marie Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lee, Peterborough, Ont., to Mr. Frank C. Hooper of Edmonton, Alberta.

Mr. and Mrs. Hooper will reside in Edmonton, Alta., and will be at home after June 1st at 11648 Athabaska Avenue.

IMPORTANT MEETING

The Women's Auxiliary of the Speakers' Patriotic League will meet to-morrow (Tuesday) at 3:30 pm. in the Teachers' room at the Public Library (entrance on McDonnel St). An important matter to come before the meeting is the manner in which Tag Day Fund—$850—shall be presented to the 93rd Battalion.

HAND KEY TO BULGARS.

Greeks Open the Way to Macedonia, Long Coveted.

SALONIKA, June 5.—What the Bulgarians are really after is possession of Greek eastern Macedonia, which they have always coveted. The gates to it have now been opened by the Greeks themselves, and, with the Dervendi in their hands, the rest lies at the mercy of the invaders.

The situation now is that Greek Macedonia has been separated into two distinct parts. West of the Struma it is under the allies' military occupation, while the districts east of the river, it they are not under occupation by the Bulgarians, are under their influence.

EARL KITCHENER LOST WITH ENTIRE STAFF

ADMIRALTY CONFIRMS LOSS OF CRUISER HAMPSHIRE

ADMIRALTY CONFIRMS THE LOSS OF EARL KITCHENER AND HIS ENTIRE STAFF

British Minister of War Was on His Way to the Russian Front When the Cruiser Hampshire Struck a Mine on the North Coast of Scotland and Sank With All on Board

WAS ENGLAND'S FOREMOST SOLDIER

Special to The Examiner.

London, June 6---Earl Kitchener and Staff were on board British Cruiser, Hampshire, which has been sunk by a mine off Orkney Islands. It is feared all were lost.

This report was subsequently confirmed by a later dispatch from London.

LONDON, June 6.—Earl Kitchener, Minister of War, with his entire staff, was lost when the cruiser Hampshire was sunk off the north of Scotland. This has now been made official by the Admiralty. The Admiralty's statement indicated that the Hampshire was torpedoed off the Orkney Islands. The Hampshire was a British cruiser of the Argyll type. Her complement was 655 officers and men. She was 450 feet long and displaced 10,850 tons. Her armament was four 7.5-inch and smaller guns. There has been no mention in the cables or the wireless of the cruiser Hampshire having taken part in the great sea battle last week off Jutland. The first announcement from London did not indicate the circumstances under which the Hampshire was sunk.

Horatio Norbert Kitchener was England's foremost soldier, taking that distinction when Lord Roberts ("Little Bobs") died. He was born at Crotter House, Bally Longford, County Kerry, June 24, 1850. It is announced that H.M.S. Hampshire was on its way to Russia. One report says four lifeboats were seen to leave the ship, but have not been picked up yet.

Artillery Action of Unprecedented Violence On the Verdun Front

Germans Bombard Fort Vaux, Following the Failure of Two Violent German Infantry Attacks Along the Vaux Dam Loup Line---French Official Communique---Demand Restoration of Admiral Von Tirpitz as Head of German Sea Forces.

A CONCERTED ACTION

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 6.—(French Official)—The German artillery is bombarding Fort Vaux with unprecedented violence, according to the official French communique to-day. The shelling was undertaken last night following the failure of two violent German infantry attacks along the Vaux-Damloup line.

PARTIES ARE DISSATISFIED.

LONDON, June 6.—Despatches from The Hague to London say that since the Skagerack sea fight there has been a growing demand for the restoration of Admiral Von Hirpitz as head of the German sea forces. The despatches say that German Conservative and National-Liberal parties are making a concerted action in this direction, not being satisfied with the result of the sea fight.

Germans Still Battering Against Canadian Front

Canadian Artillery Has Been Reinforced and is Inflicting Terrific Losses on the German Troops---Attacks at Verdun Have Weakened---Russian Artillery Bombardment On the Austrian Front.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 6.—Late reports from Flanders say the Germans are still battering heavily against the Canadian front, but making no progress. The Canadian artillery has been reinforced heavily and is inflicting terrific losses on German troops and positions.

LONDON, June 6.—Officers from the front say General Mercer was wounded in the thigh by an explosion which buried him for a time. When he recovered he was wounded in the head and sustained concussion.

ATTACKS HAVE WEAKENED.

PARIS, June 6.—German attacks against Verdun have weakened, apparently as reinforcements are drawn away to the German positions in Flanders.

RUSSIAN ARTILLERY BOMBARDMENT.

VIENNA, June 6.—Official statement last night reports heavy Russian artillery bombardment on the whole front. Infantry attacks are expected. Russians used gas shells in attacks.

VIENNA, June 6.—Austrian statement claims to have captured a large number of Italian troops on the Trentino front.

Vice Admiral Beatty's Daring Won The Victory For Britain

LONDON, June 6.—"We lost cruisers which we can afford to lose. The Germans lost battleships which they cannot afford to lose."

This was the summing up by Admiral Lord Beresford, of Metemmeh and Curraghmore (retired), of his impressions of the battle between the British and German fleets.

"Though a hard earned sea fight," he said yesterday, "it was a British victory. There was no mistake in strategy made. The British objective was to sink the German fleet or compel it to return to its base.

"In the absence of Zeppelins for scouting purposes the British navy was obliged to send out heavy cruisers as outside scouts, because light cruisers would have been driven in without procuring the needed information.

"Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, in pursuance of this object, tackled a vastly superior force, hoping to delay it until Admiral Jellicoe's battle fleet arrived to destroy the Germans. Vice-Admiral Beatty achieved a brilliant success, because on the arrival of Admiral Jellicoe the Germans fled.

"We attained our object. The Germans failed to attain theirs. We lost cruisers which we can afford to lose. The Germans lost battleships which they cannot afford to lose."

Casualties Are Heavy

130 Canadian Officers Already Reported Dead, Wounded or Missing ---Casualties Among Rank and File Are Coming in Every Hour

NO WORD OF MERCER

LONDON, June 6.—It was impossible for the Canadians to retain the positions recaptured in counter-attacks, but the fighting is still intense.

The casualties among Canadian officers now amount to 130 already reported. There are seven hundred names already in the casualties among the N.C.O.s and men, and more coming every hour.

OTTAWA, June 6.—Major-General Mercer has not been located, and it is feared he is dead or a prisoner.

PETROGRAD, June 6.—The Russians in their new drive have already taken thirteen thousand Austrians, Bulgars and Turks, and are still going strong.

TORONTO, Ont., June 6.—Lieut. Beadle of the "American legion" here, is under arrest charged with assaulting a superior officer and drawing his revolver on the military police.

REAPING RICH HARVEST.

Police to Put an End to Fortune Telling in Paris.

Fortune tellers, card readers, clairvoyants, and diviners of all kinds have been reaping a harvest in Paris since the war began. Now the police are about to take the matter up to put an end to their frauds on the public and their cruel exploitation of the anxieties of the wives, mothers, and daughters of men at the front.

As a matter of fact, the war has been a gold mine for them, and the development of their business has reached the proportions of a national scandal. The clients of these fortune tellers have steadily increased since the conflict began, and now include, the Temps says, persons who before the war would have scrupled to yield to such weaknesses. It would seem as though the fear in which those live who have some dear one at the front, exposed to every peril, has ended by altering the moral well-being of the clearest and most steadfast minds. Without really believing in the power of divination, they apply to mediums and card readers in the hope that the pretended gift of intuition will furnish some new argument leading them not to despair.

BERLIN GIRL DROWNS WHEN LAUNCH HITS LOG IN THE SPEED

Nine Young Women Have a Struggle For Life When Boat Capsizes

BERLIN, Ont., June 5.—Tragedy followed an enjoyable river excursion of nine young women clerks of the Lang Bros. store, when the launch in which they were boating struck a log and capsized. One member of the party, Miss Margaret Clork, aged 21, was swept to her death in the flooded Speed River, and the others had a hard battle for their lives before being brought to shore.

STRUCK A LOG.

Miss Nellie Baker, daughter of John Baker, owner of the launch had invited her friends for an evening excursion on the river. The happy patry had gone some distance up the Speed and was returning to Berlin when the log was struck. As the heavy launch turned over every one oof the ten occupants of the boat, was torn into the water. Mr. Baker, who had been steering, swam to shore with Miss Pearl Wanklin, who lost her hold on the branches of the tree that had caused the accident. It was a hard battle to make the shore in safety but Mr. Baker succeeded in towing in the unconscious girl.

RESCUED BY ATHLETES

Nearby ball players, who heard the screams of the girls, rushed to the assistance of the party and brought all to shore that were clinging to the tree. It was after they had been rescued that Miss Clark's absence was noticed and an immediate patrol of the river was started. Watchers were posted at the dam and the search was continued until long after midnight.

The drowned girl, was a Huron County resident, having come from her father's farm, near Bayfield, some two years ago.

Miss Clark was to have been married shortly to one of Berlin's young merchants, Mr. Lippert of Sauder & Lippert.

The young ladies who went to Hespeler on the 6 o'clock G. P. and H. car were Misses Baker, Stella and Pearl Wanklyn, Jeannette Smith, Olive Boegel, Bertha Pfaulkner, Margaret Clark, Ethel and Lilli eAmy. The Misses Amy were not occupants of the boat.

Eugene Sauder of this city, upon learning of the accident, motored to Bayfield and brought the father of the unfortunate young lady to Hespeler. The young ladies who returned to the city state that but for the timely arrival of the Hespeler ball players there would have been additional fatalities. The bravery of Mr. Baker who was in charge of the boat, is also highly praised.

Rodney F. Cousins, of San Francisco, laid aside his Kipling and pondered. Then he took a pencil and paper and write:

Then he turned on the gas. His body was found Saturday. The volume of Kipling lay near it.

The note was addressed to Mrs. Hattie Kritsen. She denied knowledge of why Cousins should have ledge of why Sousins should have killed himself.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS.

"Now the mirror," she said to Code, and, still wondering, he handed the trinket to her. "Tell about this," she directed him with a smile and a long look from her deep dark eyes.

And Code told them. He told of the time his father first gave it to him, of his experiments in astronomy, and of Nat's coveting the mirror. He told of that night after the first race when he had looked for the log-book of the May and had seen the mirror in its drawer. He told of its final discovery in the secret box of the storeroom on the Nettie.

As he talked the memory of the wrongs against him flamed in his breast, and he directed his story at Nat, who sat silent and immovable in the corner.

"If I found this aboard the Nettie it proves that he must have come and got it!" he cried. "He hoarded the old May, but it was not for this that he came!"

"What, then?" asked Hardy.

"To damage the schooner so that she would break down under the strain of the next race," flared Code, facing Nat dramatically. Burns only clenched his jaws tighter on his cigar.

"You don't believe this, perhaps, squire, but listen and I'll tell you how the old May sank." And once again he described the crashing calamity aboard the overloaded boat as she struggled home to Freekirk Head with the last of her strength.

"You, squire, you've sailed your boats in your time! You know that never could have happened even to the old May unless something had been done. And something was done! Burns had weakened the topmast and the mainstay!"

All eyes were fixed on Nat, but he did not move. He was very pale now, but apparently self-possessed. Suddenly, with a hand that appeared firm, he removed the cigar from his mouth and cast it on the floor.

"That," he said with deadly coolness, "is a blasted fine plot that you have all worked out together. But every word of it is a lie, for the whole thing is without a single foundation in fact. Prove it!"

"I'll give you a last chance, Burns," said Elsa in a level voice that contained all the concentrated hatred that Code had deflected in her before. "Dismiss these charges against Code."

"Never!" The word was catapulted from him as though by a muscular convulsion. "He murdered my father, and he shall pay for it!"

Without a word Elsa rose from her chair and walked back into the adjoining room. A moment later she reappeared, leading a beautiful girl who was perhaps twenty years old.

The effect was electric. The people in the little group seemed frozen into the attitudes they had last assumed.

Only in Nat Burns was there a change.

He seemed to have shrunk back into his clothes until he was but a little wizened man. His face was ghastly and clammy perspiration glittered on his forehead in the lamplight.

"Caroline!" he cried, in a hoarse voice that did not rise above a whisper.

"Yes, Caroline," said Elsa, her black eyes flashing fire. "You had forgotten her, hadn't you? You had forgotten the girl who loved you, that you drove away from the island. You had forgotten the girl that gave you everything and got nothing! But that has come back upon you now and these people are here to see it. Even your father, in his log-book, mentioned when my sister left Grande Mignon apparently to work in the factory at Lubec. As though my sister should ever work in a factory!"

"So this explains why she went that time," said Squire Hardy gently. "We all wondered at it, Elsa—we all wondered at it."

"And well you might. But he is the cause! And he wouldn't marry her! I have waited for this chance of revenge and now he shall pay."

Caroline Fuller, who was even more beautiful than her sister, looked at Nat in a kind of daze. Suddenly there was a spasmodic working of her features.

"Oh, that I could ever have loved him!" she said in a faint voice. "Here Elsa, read it to them all!"

From under her cloak she drew a crumpled envelope which she passed to her sister.

With a snarl like that of a wild animal Nat leaped from his chair toward the girl, but Durkee struck him violently and he reeled back into it.

"You swore you burned them all!" muttered Nat. "You swore it! You swore it!"

"Yes, and she did the innocent child—all but this one that she had mislaid in a book you once sent her," cried Elsa. "But I found it, Burns. Where do you think I've been all this while? At St. John's, where she lives with my aunt. And do you think there was no reason for that letter being saved? God takes care of things like this, and now you've got to pay, Nat Burns! I knew there would come a time. I knew there would!"

She was still standing, and she drew the letter out of the envelope.

"Look, Squire, Code, any of you who know. Is this Nat's writing?"

"Yes," they all declared as the letter passed from hand to hand.

"Read it," said the squire, forcing Caroline Fuller to sit down in his chair.

"I'll spare him hearing the first of it," said Elsa. "It is what men write to women they love or feign to love, and it belongs to my sister. But here"—she turned the first sheet inside out—"listen to this."

Involuntarily they all leaned forward, all except Durkee, who went over and stood beside Nat. The latter gave no sign except a dry rattling sound in his throat as he swallowed involuntarily.

"I've got him, Caroline—I've got him!" she read. "He'll beat me again, will he? Well, not if I know it. Everybody in the Head seems tickled to death that he won, but you know how little that means to me. It is simply another reason why I should beat him the next time.

"Dearest little girl, it's the easiest thing in the world. I've just come back from going over the May (it's midnight), and the thing looks good. You know Schofield is a great hand to carry sail. Well, when you hear about the race, maybe you'll hear that his foretopmast came down in a squall. If you don't, I'll be much surprised, for I've attended to it myself, and I don't think it will take much of a squall.

"Maybe you'll hear too, that his maintop snapped and his sticks went into the water all because he carried too much sail. I shouldn't be surprised. I've attended to that, too. So I guess with his foretopmast cracked off and his mainstay snapped the old M. C. ought to romp home an easy victor, if she is an old ice wagon. I tried to get Schofield to bet, but he's so tight with his cash that he would not shake down a five cent piece. Good thing for him, though, he doesn't know it. Nothing would do me more good than to get his roll, the virtuous old deacon!"

She stopped reading as a rumble of mirth went round the circle. Code in the role of a virtuous deacon was a novelty. Even the hard lines of Elsa's face relaxed and she smiled, albeit a trifle grimly.

"That's all," she said, folding up the letter and putting it back into the envelope. "The rest is personal, and not ours. Now Mrs Durkee if you still care to consider Captain Schofield as the defendant in those two suits I want your arguments."

"I don't Mrs. Mallaby," said the detective, and called the Freekirk Head jailer. "But I know who is going to take Schofield's place."

He glared at Nat Burns, who cowered silent and miserable in his corner. Despite his sailing as Nat's guest he had never brought himself to like the man and now he was glad to be well rid of him.

Code stepped out a free man and his first action was to take both of Elsa's hands and try to thank her. Her eyes dropped and she blushed. When he had stammered through his speech he turned to Caroline Fuller and repeated it, but the sad smile she gave him tore at his heart.

"I came because Elsa asked me to save a friend," she said, "not because I wished to revenge myself on Nat. I am glad it was you for I would do anything on earth for Elsa."

Code turned mystified eyes upon Mrs. Mallaby.

"I though you did this to revenge yourself on Nat," he half whispered.

"I did, partly," she replied. She lifted her eyes to his and he saw something in them that startled him—something that in all his association only had the story of Code's sudden stood silent, amazed, overwhelmed, while she turned her face away.

CHAPTER XXX.
ELSA'S TRIUMPH.

Code Schofield's appearance at his schooner the next morning to help the crew unload was the signal for a veritable native-son demonstration. Not only had the stor yof Code's sudden liberation and Nat's as sudden imprisonment spread like wild fire clear to Southern Head Light, twenty miles away, but the tale was hailed with joy.

For Nat had come into his own in the hatred of his townsfolk. Among the fleet he was heartily unpopular because he had not fished all season and then had tried to catch the first market with a purchased cargo, merely to revenge himself on Code and the Tanners. Throughout his conduct had been utterly selfish whereas others had worked for the island and for its salvation.

With the landing of the two schooners from the fleet the women-folk were soon appraised of Nat's action, and had it not been for Elsa's sensational disclosures in the little jail that made him the sudden occupant of a cell there is no question but what the women of Marblehead would have been equalled by the women of Freekirk Head; and Skipper Ireland would not have ridden down to history alone in tarry glory.

But now, since Code was free, the whole town exulted, and there was a steady procession to the jail to look in upon the first real criminal the village had mustered in years.

Code, after checking the scale-tally all morning as his stalwart men swung the baskets of salted fish out of the hold, went along the road to Squire Hardy's house after dinner and interviewed that worthy man.

"You've got him where you want him," said the squire, "but you can't get much, except damages."

"I don't [illegible] even damages," said Code. "I [illegible] t him to take all his things, and go away from here, and never come back. Since he didn't do any real damage to anybody I don't care what becomes of him so long as he leaves here."

"Well, all you must do is to withdraw your charges against him—they were put in your name so that Mrs. Mallaby's would not have to appear."

"But even if I do, won't the state take it up. You know a murder case——"

"Yes, my boy, but this is no murder case now. On the face of it Nat did not set out to murder his father; he did not set out really to sink your schooner—merely to disable it; the proof is indisputable and self-evident by his own confession and letter."

"Well, now, in a private racing agreement between gatlemen, if both vessels are registered and rated as worthy, nothing that happens to one can be laid to the other unless, as in the present case, one deliberately damages the other. The principal punishment is a moral one administered by the former friends of the dishonest man, but the victim can collect money damages. Naturally the insurance company will change its course so as to accuse Nat instead of you.

"They have a proven case against him already, and he will have to pay them nearly all they gave you—so that in the end he really pays you for the damage he did that day. Then, I understnad, he is going to pay an amount to the family of each man who lost his life in the May, on condition that they will never sue him."

"Whew-ew!" whistled Code. "When he gets through he won't have much money left, I guess."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Doctor's Story

By H. SANBORN BROWN

When I began to practice medicine I was inclined to give my patients a diagnosis of their cases, but when I had been detected in a number of errors I found what reputation I had gained as "one of those frank, outspoken doctors, with no pretense about him." gone. That I had diagnosed whooping cough as a bad cold and measles an eczema, with a number of other blunders, got abroad, my practice dropped away, and I was obliged to pull up stakes and begin over again in another locality.

In my new field I looked wise and said nothing, or if I did say anything it was that the case had not sufficiently developed to admit of diagnosis. This would have done very well had I stuck to it stoically. Unfortunately, patients or those interested in them need at times to be buoyed. This fact got me into trouble again. Called in to see a little child who showed plainly the symptoms of diphtheria, when I looked into the mother's eager, questioning eyes I had not the heart to tell her of her darling's danger, so I told her it was a case of sore throat.

All went well with the child, and the diphtheritic membrane in the throat was breaking down when the child's grandmother came to the house. The old woman had seen a case of diphtheria and on looking into the throat saw that which she recognized.

"Heavens," she exclaimed to the mother—"the child has diphtheria!"

The mother fainted. The grandmother ran to the telephone and, ignoring me, called on one of my fellow practitioners to come in hot haste. He at once pronounced the case one of diphtheria, but, learning that I was treating it, returned to his office and called me up by telephone. I explained the matter; but, realizing that I had lost the confidence of the family in question, I begged him to take up the case where I had left off and finish it. He did so, and the child, who was already nearly well, recovered.

That young mother soon knocked my practice into smithereens, by telling every one of her acquaintances that I didn't know a case of diphtheria from one of sore throat.

Considering that my crime had really been nothing more than a tenderness of heart, this was hard to bear. Women are apt to accept statements without question, and I was laboured without an opportunity for defense. The husband of the lady in question asked me about the matter and when I explained it tried to pacify his wife. But no such excuse would be accepted by her. "Any doctor not fit to treat a cat could get off with such an excuse as that," she said.

This time I made up my mind to stand my ground. If I fled from the tongues of the laity I would not be worthy of a place in the profession. After all, whatever success a physician attains, his real intrinsic standing is fixed by his fellow workers. They may not agree with him, but they will not deny his ability. For a long while I was dropped out of practice almost entirely. But gradually other doctors got into the habit of calling me in for consultation and recommending patients to me in cases coming within my especial province, and at the end of about five years I found myself again making a living. In ten years I stood at the head of my profession in the city in which I practiced.

But by this time my work as a general practitioner had given way to surgery. There were but few recognized surgeons in the place, and this was of great advantage to me.

One would suppose that a woman who had been indignant at my calling a case of diphtheria one of sore throat and in consequence had ruined my practice for several years would never again have any use for my services. But the child upon whom I was supposed to have made such a blunder, when twelve or thirteen years of age, contracted a bad case of appendicitis. An operation was considered necessary by the family physician. He was not a surgeon and would not operate himself. When the mother asked him to nominate a surgeon for the case he recommended me.

Meanwhile the tongues she had set wagging to my discredit had gradually got to swinging in my favor. The estimate of my coworkers in the profession, together with the testimony of patients I had helped, had reached the lady's ears, and, although she still believed that at the time I treated her child I didn't know a case of diphtheria from sore throat, affected by the praise of me she heard, she greatly desired that I should perform an operation involving life or death upon her son.

A physician as such should have no accounts to settle with those who have injured him. I undertook the service required of me with no more feeling than if I had never known her or her child. But her former error forced her on the second occasion to hear the truth. When the operation had been performed—and while performing it I forgot whose case it was—and the mother asked me if her boy would live I replied:

"Do you wish me to speak plainly?"

"Yes," she faltered. "Tell me the worst. What chance is there for him to recover?"

"To the best of my belief, one in ten."

But the boy recovered.

LIVES WITH STEEL IN HEART.

Whether Splinter Works in or Out Means Life or Death.

A Canadian soldier in a hospital near Bromley, Kent, has a thin metal sprinter from an explosive bullet lodged in his heart, says the London Times. Its presence was disclosed by X-rays, and for the time being no operation is contemplated. Whether the metal splinter works in or out means the difference between life and death for the patient.

The patient who gets about as freely as any convalescent, feels the splinter much in the way that a nail in a boot irritates the foot. He cannot sleep on his left side nd finds that practically sitting up in bed all night is the easist way of getting rest.

MAD WEAK HEART MAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

British Submarine 46 Days on a Trip
Sank Enemy Ships and Escaped From Others

LONDON, June 8.—A record of a submarine staying out on a trip lasting forty-six days without touching land has been achieved by a British undersea boat. This feat, which excels any known record during the war by any other of the belligerents' craft, was revealed recently by a high authority.

During its long journey the British submarine participated in many thrilling episodes, including the sinking of more than one German warcraft. It encountered many narrow escapes from being sunk by the enemy, while at other times it had to pick its way gingerly through mine fields, in imminent peril at any moment of striking one. It towed many floating mines toward various ports, turning them over to other British craft.

One striking feature of the forty-six-day trip of this submarine was that during the first forty-eight hours out it had to keep under water forty hours without once coming to the surface for air. The Times is informed that the commandant of the submarine, who is one of the most skillful officers in this branch of the British Navy, showed great daring throughout the whole expedition. His submarine was amply equipped with fuel for the forty-six-day trip. In fact, it had enough left at the end for a few days more, while plenty of food was at hand all the time. This incident was related to The Times correspondent during a discussion of the feasibility of the German scheme of running merchant submarines from Germany to America during the war.

From the viewpoint of ability to make the trip across the Atlantic without the necessity of taking on extra fuel, this official said the idea was entirely practicable. All that the German submarines have to consider, he said, was whether the British Navy would be likely to intercept the submarines and sink them. This official expressed himself as surprised that the Germans had not tried the scheme before this, if they were confident they would be able to avoid British warcraft.

TELLS OF CONDITIONS AT SALONIKA FRONT

A graduate student in Columbia University, who before the war travelled extensively in France and had the oportunity to become intimate with some of the Republic's citizens, with whom he has kept up an intermittent correspondence, in the recipient of a vivid pen picture of the conditions at the Salonica front.

The author is Mr. Pierre Stephen, the well known French actor, winner in 1908 of the "premier prix de comedie du Conservatorie de Paris" and of numerous other honours since, who early in the war abandoned the stage for the trench. Exigencies of war, it appears, have converted him into a physician, probably because of his knowledge of some "first aid" principles. Mr. Stephen writes: —

"Mr. Dear S.—It is impossible today to leave one's shelter. There is a regular flood outside. It is raining pitchforks and has been doing so continuously for twenty-four hours. Our subterranean dwellings cave in one after the other. It is no fun in the middle of the night to be covered by a carload of mud, but that has happened to many of us. My abode has not caved in yet, thank Heaven.

You asked me in your last letter whether we had bathtubs here. By Jove, I had a bath last night as good as ever any human being has had; the trench was a regular torrent. The supplies could not reach us, and as a matter of compensation more men were exempted from duty.

"Nevertheless, I the Pere Mangan ate, as the boys call me, had to go the rounds. I got stuck in the mud up to the knees and lost a wooden shoe, which I have been unable to find. It sounds like fun, doesn't it? I am going to have a very disagreeable day; nothing to read. I am still waiting for newspapers. But Heaven only knows when they will arrive. They do not spoil us here.

"What more can I tell you of our experiences? If you want to know what the country around here is like, then just imagine a desert containing nothing but sky and earth, and you will know the landscape as well as I do.

"But let me show you my residence. Just walk into my apartment on all fours, if you please. It is seven feet by eight feet and it fulfills at the same time the purpose of a parlor, dining room, bathroom, kitchen and bedroom. Let me call your attention to the furniture and the hangings, the latter guaranteed pure sackcloth. As a whole everything is first quality, even the bed, the mattress of which is entirely vegetable in its composition. The sideboard is not so bad either, though we made it ourselves. Another piece of furniture, not yet ready but in course of construction, is our table. Three of its legs are still wanting, but we expect some wood to finish it.

Now, you have an idea of my hotel. We have just experienced an invasion of certain animals of small type. I immediately compounded unguents and salves of various kinds and colors. They proved very effective and my comrades thanked me profusely.

"To add to our troubles, a little epidemic has broken out here in the form of skin eruptions. Every one is suffering from them. The men think it is caused by the cholera vaccination and by the climate, but it is caused by the frozen meat which we get to eat.

"I have plenty of work and responsibility, there being no physician with the battery. The echelon with the medical equipment is more than three miles away. I have to rely upon myself, but my patients seem satisfied, so everything is alright."

How Germans Are Stretching Food

Dried Raspberry Leaves and Thyme Most Popular Substitutes For Tea.

We are indebted to the Berliner Tageblatt for much curious information gathered from learned authorities at the Ministry of the Interior, the Imperial Physico-Technical Institute, and the Health Institution of Bonn on food equivalents and food substitutes. These are not synonymous terms. A food "equivalent" has almost the same value as the food it replaces. For example, margarine is an equivalent for butter. A "substitute" merely imitates the taste of what it replaces, as saccharine does sugar, but is valueless as food.

But, in addition to these, there is an intermediate class of articles which are called "war foods," in which genuine food is "stretched" by adulterating it with a certain percentage of substitutes. Prof. Neumann, of Bonn University, has some interesting things to say about a number of foodstuffs. White bread, he says, has disappeared altogether, and its place has been taken by the well-known K-bread. Among other kinds of bread which have arisen owing to the exigencies of the war the best known are "Cologne bread," "straw-flour bread," and "blood bread." "Cologne bread" is made of a mixture of maize, rice, and barley. "Straw-flour bread" contains from 15 to 20 per cent. of powdered straw; it is very moist, rather sour, leaves a bitter taste in the mouth, contains much waste matter, often produces irritation or inflammation of the bowels, and is in general not to be recommended. "Blood bread" is obtained by mixing 20 litres of fresh blood, 10 litres of water, and some salt with 120 pounds of rye-meal and 15 per cent. of potato starch meal, mixed, with the addition of yeast and leaven. Dr. Neumann describes the result as tough and leathery to cut, of a "neutral" taste, and difficult to assimilate in digestion.

"Stretched" Foods.

Butter is one of the articles to which the process of "stretching" is applied. After being "stretched it is called "war butter." The stretching is done by mixing butter with flour, milk, and yolk of eggs. This is nourishing enough, but it does not "keep." Other mixtures of starch, milk and mashed potato contain so very small a proportion of fat that they can hardly be recommended even for frying potatoes. With regard to fruit, the excellent harvest of last year favoured the production of enormous quantities of jam. But the stocks are beginning to give out, and "stretched" or "war jam" is taking its place. In this case the "stretching" is done by adding beetroot, carrot, and turnip. An "equivalent" which had a great vogue for a time was a curious mixture of mashed potato, ground herrings, and various spices, but it was finally prohibited as being dangerous to health. For whipped cream, so beloved by German women, a "substitute" has been found consisting of sugar, water, vanilla extract, and gelatine—a most deceptive thing that cannot "take in" a school girl.

Of the numerous plants either already used as equivalents for tea or strongly recommended, dried raspberry leaves and thyme are far away the prime favourites. "Germania" reminds its readers that in view of the scarcity of tea there are many "native teas" which, though lacking the alkaloid theine, are very agreeable drinks. Among these are the young dried and chopped leaves of the strawberry, blackberry, bilberry, marshberry, cranberry, black currant, holly, cherry, birch, elm, willow, wild rose, blackthorn, and mountain ash. The announcement naively states that it depends on the taste of the individual which leaves he prefers.

Gypsum and Sawdust Flour.

The municipality of Charlottenburg has informed the Lokal Anzeiger that most "reprehensible" methods are being practiced for adulterating important foods, and gives an instance of this in a prosecution they have begun against a number of traders in that town. It seems that these traders have been in the habit of powdering the top crust of their bread with "wood flour," which is simply finely ground sawdust, and with "benzine and other forms of plaster of Paris." This stuff until lately has been sold in shops all over greater Berlin, and although in some cases it is probable that bakers are unaware of the ingredients in this flour their ignorance is culpable, and in far too many cases they have known all about it. The municipality in its note says that the numerous complaints which have reached them of execrable flour show that this disgraceful traffic has been widespread

MARRYING FRENCH GIRLS

MANY ENGLISH SOLDIERS WILL TAKE BRIDES HOME WITH THEM.

British Headquarters, France, June 6.—One of the results of the presence of the British army in France is that a good many British soldiers will take French wives home with them. The difference in language fan from being a bar, is an accessory. Mr. Atkins teaches Miss France English and Miss France teaches Mr. Atkins French.

There is plenty of leisure for the courtship to develop. Frequently British battalions remain in the same section for months on end.

When the men have done their shift in the trenches they return "in rest" to the same village where they were before. Usually they have quarters in French houses. In a sense they become members of the community.

With the French men folk away, Mr. Atkins lends a hand with any heavy work that requires a man's strength. Only to-day the correspondents saw a British soldier driving a harrow.

A feminine hand does some sewing or cooking for his in return. The romantic atmosphere is not lacking. It is not romance alone that leads the Briton to marry in France. He has learned to admire the thrift and cleverness of the French woman and her industry in taking the place of her fathers and brothers who are at the front.

Heart's Action Was Weak And Circulation Poor

He Was Always Tired and Nervous and Had Pains in Feet and Legs —Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured

The heart is a wonderful worker, plodding away year in and year out, forever pumping the blood through the body. So long as the blood is rich and nourishing it renews its own waste and keeps up a vigorous circulation of the blood thrugh the arteries and veins of the human system.

But when the blood gets thin the nerves are starved, motive power is lacking, the heart's action weakens and the circulation is slow. The hands and feet feel cold, there are cramps and pains in the legs and through the body, digestion fails, you become nervous and irritable and do not rest or sleep well.

This letter will give you some idea how admirably Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is suited to overcome derangements of this nature. It is, above all, a creator of new, rich blood, and with the blood in good condition the nerves are soon restored and bodily organs resume their natural functions.

Mrs. E. A. Hutchings, "Prairie View," Elva, Man., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my husband had tried almost every remedy recommended as a tonic. He suffering with cold feet, poor circulation of the blood, and was always tired. He had pains in his feet and legs, and could get no rest or sleep at night. After the first box of the Nerve Food we could see an improvement, and now after using it for six months, he is an entirely different man. He eats and sleeps well and has no pains in his feet and legs. It has built up his health wonderfully, and we can recommend it as a splendid nerve tonic."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S BLOUSE.

By Anabel Worthington.

The shortest road to getting the best results in supplying the boy with his blouses for the summer is to follow the guidance of a reliable pattern; the gain will be as much for the mother who makes the garment as for the boy who wears it. Full and roomy blouses, properly cut, are so absolutely necessary for reasons of economy and comfort that they should always be made at home.

In No. 7,701 the edges of the fronts are so treated—being hemmed at both sides and having a tuck in the left front—that a simulated box pleat effect is given; this tempers the plainness of the garment, which would be noticeable without such feature. According to the taste, a back yoke is used in making, or it will be omitted—also with the removable collar. If a permanent collar is desired, work buttonholes in the neckband. Link cuffs on the full sleeves and a pocket in the left front have due importance for completing a smart, sensible blouse.

The pattern may be had in sizes 4 to 12 years. To make in size .. 1¼ yards of material 36 inches wide is required.

If you will send * to the office of this publication the pattern will be promptly forwarded to you.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

MEAT FAMINE FACED BY RURAL GERMANY

Taking a recent communication by Councillor Schmidt of the Saxon Ministry of the Interior as its text, the Leipziger Volkszeitung publishes an article on the food situation in the German Kingdom, declaring that no blacker picture of conditions could be painted than that of this official communique, and that it is clear that the masses can look for no improvement.

Herr Schmidt said that the first concern of Saxony was the regulation of the meat supply. The meat card, he added, was a leap in the dark, and had its drawbacks. It would cause, however, no hardship to the great part of the population, who had anyhow not hitherto been in a position to consume more meat than the cards allowed. Undoubtedly, said the Councillor, the near future would bring a great stringency of meat.

As for sugar, the supply had been overestimated; the enormous production of jam, used instead of butter, had used up vast quantities of sugar, and much land formerly planted with beets was now under corn or potatoes. Things, said the Councillor, will be better in the near future.

The Volkszeitung says that particular importance must be attached to the admission that the meat card has no significance for the poorer classes, and that the reference to some grand new system which is shortly to make things better is nothing more than a dishonoured draft on the future.

As proof of the contention that even in rural Germany there is a real shortage of meat, the London press is reprinting the following excerpts from a letter from a Brandenburg butcher to The Korrespondenz Wolter of Berlin:

"Quite extraordinary views seem to obtain among you at Berlin. We are supposed to fatten pigs on two pounds of potatoes daily. That is not enough to fatten a young pig, let alone a hog. . . . In the Berlin papers I am always reading of great agricultural profits. Here one does not notice anything of them. Only of losses, sales of farms, and want of labourers, scarcity of manure, want of fodder, high prices for seed, and diseases of live stock.

No Live Stock to Slaughter.

"At one time I often used to deliver to Berlin six or seven cattle ready slaughtered once or twice a week; to-day I receive for my customers 165 pounds of meat weekly from Berlin. The whole amount is sold out within an hour. Any one who comes later—and those who do so are in the majority — receives nothing. And so it is with all the butchers here and in the neighbouring places.

"Neither I, with my journeyman and apprentices, nor my colleagues, have anything to slaughter. Our shops are constantly closed because our customers force our houses. And yet you write in the papers that there is an abundance of meat in the country.

"We have to cut down our consumption more than the Berliners, who can get all the want for money from the markets and shops, but here nothing is to be had for love or money. Just explain matters to people, and tell them of the women in the country who are now left alone and have to look after great businesses because their husbands are on military service or their sons are in the field.

"The Berlin women are a hundred times better off than ours. In many places prisoners of war have been placed at our disposal, but they cost more than free workers, because we have to give them lodging, food, and wages. The cost comes to $1.10 each man a day."

In the face of desperate efforts by both the Imperial Government and the municipal authorities of Vienna to regulate the food supply of the Austrian capital, prices are constantly rising and the situation is steadily growing worse, according to a report of conditions prevailing in the market the last week in April appearing in the Vienna Arbeiter-Zeitung and reprinted in the London press. The big market halls are thronged with would-be buyers, largely because of the difficulty of obtaining supplies at the smaller shops. Only very bony pieces of meat may be had at less than 80 cents a pound, and the compulsory purchase of extra bones and scraps drives the price up, in some cases, to $1.12 and occasionally to $1.25. The Arbeiter-Zeitung complains that this and other tricks of the dealers add from 20 to 40 cents a pound to the price. It is hard to obtain pork, the staple meat, under 85 cents, and if the Hausfrau requires a piece of boneless pork, and that not of the best quality, she will be lucky to get anything under $1 a pound.

Fat Is in Demand and Scarce.

The demand for fat cannot in any measure be satisfied. To secure a piece it is necessary to be in the line by daylight. By 8 o'clock not a scrap of fat is left. On the morning to which the report of the Vienna journal refers a small handcart laden with fat appeared at one of the market halls. It had been followed through the streets by a crowd, and in a few moments its load had disappeared, sold at 80 cents a pound. Compared with the week before Easter, meat prices have risen from 2 to 6 cents a pound.

In the markets where other articles of food are sold conditions are the same. It is a mistake, says the Arbeiter-Zeitung's reporter, to suppose that the anxious, struggling multitude proves the existence of money in the pockets of the people. On this particular morning certain vegetables could be had at fairly reasonable prices—that is to say, not much above 200 per cent. dearer than in 1914; but eggs and fruit continued to rise. Very ordinary cooking butter is 80 cents a pound, and table butter of fair quality is 90 cents. As a matter of fact, butter is no longer used for cooking anywhere. Margarine can be had for 75 cents, but in very small quantities — not more than one-half pound per customer. Cooking oil is $1.45 and goose dripping $1.25. Olive and other vegetable oils have totally disappeared. And at these prices the people "must wear their feet off" running about from shop to shop before they can get approximately what they require.

Spinach is four times its normal price, lettuce three times. Cucumbers are 20 cents each. The supplies of turnips and beets are quite inadequate, and certain kinds of cabbage, of which sauerkraut is made, are being sold at 8 cents a pound. Potatoes, for the present, have ceased to mount in price, but fruits has totally disappeared from a large number of markets, and this notwithstanding one of the most bounteous apple harvests on record. In certain places indifferent apples may still be had from 10 to 14 cents. Oranges can only be indulged in by people who can afford to pay from 8 to 10 cents each for them.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

Say Germany Is Tired

PETROGRAD, June 2.—There is a good deal of speculation here as to the probable plans of the Germans. The expected German offensive on the Russian front has not begun, and there are no signs of its beginning in the near future.

On the Riga and Dvinsk fronts, where a German offensive is considered possible, a state of minor warfare prevails. There is a continual exchange of artillery fire, in which the Russian artillery, by virtue of its admirable marksmanship, more than holds its own. The Germans keep up the bombardment of Illukst bridgehead with varying intensity. Their scouting is now limited to aerial reconnaissance, and, apparently with a view of economizing men, they have stopped sending out infantry as scouting parties. But they continue to strengthen their fortifications, and from time to time bring up fresh artillery.

One very curious and characteristic fact may be noted. In the German army on the Riga front there are persistent rumours of an early peace. It is even asserted that on June an armistice will be concluded between the belligerents. The German soldiers believe these reports, in spite of Von Hinderburg's order of the day telling them that peace will not be made until Riga and Dvinsk are taken. This attitude is very interesting, in view of the peace rumours that Germany is diligently spreading just now all over Europe, but all suggestions of peace at the present stage of the war are indignantly rebuffed here. As the Novoye Vremya says:

"There are able men in Germany, and they are clever enough to see it would be a good thing to conclude peace now before Germany is completely exhausted. The present German kite, like that of August of last year, is not a decisive symptom on which strategy might base its calculations. Germany admits she is tired. All the better. We have long looked forward to this moments. Germany is tired: let us redouble our blows. No other answer can be given to the Kaiser's proposals."

A frock of black Georgette with bands of white marabout was worn by one of New York's most smartly dressed women at the recent Belmont meet.

GERMANS COMBAT ALL FOREIGN STYLES

A Losing Fight in Some Parts of the Empire Against the Waste in Clothing

DEALER ADVERTISES LONDON AND PARIS MODES NEWSPAPER PROTEST AGAINST EXTRAVAGANCE IN DRESS.

Attempts by the German Government to regulate the styles of women's clothing in the interest of economy in goods and in behalf of the institution of simple costumes throughout the Empire have stirred up such a row among the makers and wearers of the latest "creations" of German art that it seems as though a movement that would have meant so much to the pockets of the male subjects of the Kaiser is destined to come to naught.

Detailed reports in the German press, amplifying the brief cable dispatches on this subject, show that while the military commanders of some of the districts are valiantly promulgating manifestoes and orders in favour of simplicity, the bulk of the female population, reinforced by the few men makers of women's clothing not at the front, refuse to take the Government's campaign seriously, and there is not likely to be any great change in the styles until next Fall at the earliest. In fact according to Konfection, a clothing trade paper, the commander of the Seventh Army Corps, when asked by a committee from the local organization of the People's Party what he intended to do in his district to put an end to the present wasteful women's fashions, replied that it was too late to do anything now, as the goods had been already cut up, but that, "the Ministry of War had taken steps to see that the styles next Autumn and Winter would follow an other and less wasteful direction."

In its issue of April 30th the Hamburger Nachrichten declares that, in spite of military suggestions regarding styles, there has been no improvement in conditions, and cites as proof of this contention the following advertisement of a Hanover tailor:

No lady can continue wearing last year's fashions, because of the great change in the modes. As most of my German assistants have joined the colours, I have engaged first-class tailors from the prison camp at Holminden. Your toilets will be cut by Poles and French men who belong to the first London and Paris (Rue de la Paix) establishments. I beg you to take note of this.

Then the Nachrichten remarks:

The war, with all its bloody sacrifices, has thus been for nothing in so far as effecting feeling in Germany. We are just as we used to be and continue worshipping the fashion devils at Paris and London.

On the other hand, Vorwarts of April 20 reported that the women's organizations of Karlsruhe had sent a request to the Minister of the Interior of the State that measures be taken to regulate the use of material for women's clothing, and that the Ministry of Baden had assured them that it had forwarded their petition to the Imperial Ministry of the Interior with the recommendation that a uniform regulation for all Germany be enacted.

In response to a memorial on the style question sent to him by thirty five women's clubs of Cologne, Governor von Zastrow, according to a despatch dated April 19, printed in the Berliner Tageblatt, said:

"I agree with the NNational Women's Union that fashion excrescences should be combated by every competent authority, because of their involving a waste of material that is harmful to the economic interest of the people. Consequently, I have instructed the police officials to forbid any individual window displays that are likely to provoke annoyance and scandal. A number of exhibitions have already been removed from the show windows. In the future I shall, as far as possible, use the powers in my hands to prevent the incitement of public anger by crazy styles."

One of the most courageous champions of simplicity in dress is the commander of the military district of Cassel, judging from the report of his work printed in the Berliner Tageblatt of April 17. Early in the campaign against wide skirts and similar styles necessitating a waste of cloth, the General issued a strong pronouncement aimed at the show windows containing samples of skirts with many folds and obvious ly patterned after French styles, regardless of the anti-patriotic and anti saving sentiments thus promoted and asking for the cooperation of the patriotic public in opposing the new fashions. This proclamation, while heeded to some extent by part of the female population of the district drew considerable ciriticism from fashion and trade circles, in answer to which the doughty General put out a second statement reading, in part, as follows:

"In the first place, it is asserted that the edict of the commanding General is directed against a German style that ought to be created at this time for patriotic reasons in order to break the dominance exercised up to now by foreign styles. This assertion is not true. French fashion journals now at hand show clearly enough that the point of departure of this latest style is located in France just the same as that of all its predecessors. Consequently, this style is not German, but French. It is impossible to discover any patriotic object that might be served by the new style. It merely serves the commerical interests of those who have brought this style of follies into existence and to whom the greatest possible consumption of such goods is advantageous, regardless of whether this useless wholesale consumption injures the economic interests of the individual and of the community.

"In conclusion it is asserted that the rejection of the new styles would entail damage to the people's economic interests. This assertion is foolish. Only the constant, sudden changes of style year in and year out that actually force individuals to supply themselves with new clothing and to throw away as worthless old clothing, which may still be very serviceable, is economically injurious to the people. And, above all, in time of war, when it is all important that each individual's hard struggle to hold out economically should be made easier, when high and low must endure serious restrictions of all kinds, is the foolishness of the new style an economic crime against the people.

"Let all dress themselves plainly and properly, without paying any attention to old or new styles and without trying to distinguish themselves from their fellow human beings through externalities that may be bought. Whoever wish to distinguish themselves have more than enough opportunities at the present time in performing the tasks imposed by duty and Christian charity.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

How They Help

ST. RAPHAEL, ONT.

Four years ago I had such pains in my back that I could not work. The pains extended to my arms, sides and shoulders. I used many kinds of medicine for over a year, none of which did me very much good. I read about Gin Pills and sent for a sample and used them, and found the pains were leaving me and that I was feeling better. So I bought one box and before I used them all, the pains were almost gone and I could keep at work. After I had taken six other boxes of Gin Pills, I felt as well and strong as I did at the age of 30. I am a farmer, now 61 years old." 50

NO HOPE THAT EARL KITCHENER IS SAFE

CANADIAN CASUALTIES WILL BE VERY HEAVY

LITTLE HOPE OF ANY SURVIVORS FROM THE LOST SHIP HAMPSHIRE

Four Boats Were Seen to Leave the Hampshire But Heavy Seas Were Running---Search Parties Along the Shore Found Only Bodies of Drowned Men and One Capsized Boat---News of the Loss of Kitchener Has Stunned London, Already Hardened to Shocks.

53 MORE CANADIAN OFFICER CASUALTIES

LONDON, June 6.—The news of England's greatest general loss since the war broke out, which has stunned London, already hardened to shocks, was issued in the following formal bulletin:

"The Admiralty report with deep regret that the ship Hampshire with Lord Kitchener and staff on board, was sunk last night about eight o'clock off the Orkney Islands by a mine or torpedo. Four boats were seen by observers on the shore to leave the ship. Heavy seas were running, but patrol vessels and destroyers at once proceeded to the scene. The whole shore has been searched, but it is greatly feared that there is little hope for any survivors. No report has yet been received from the search party on shore."

LONDON, June 6.—A later announcement from the Admiralty said that searching parties sent out in boats along the coast had found only bodies of drowned and one capsized boat. There was still a faint hope that possibly some might have reached shore and proceeded in search of aid. On account of the high sea, however, this was not considered likely and the Admiralty did not encourage the hope of any survivors being found.

It was stated that Kitchener was on the way to hold a conference with officials at Petrograd.

KITCHENER'S LOSS WILL NOT AFFECT CAMPAIGN

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 6.—J. W. T. Mason, chief critic of the United Press says: The death of Lord Kitchener will have a depressing effect upon the United Kingdom because of his services early in the war, but it will not cause anything of a break down in the management of Great Britain's part in the Allies' campaign.

During the past year Lord Kitchener's responsibilities have been gradually curtailed, until at the time of his death he had little control over the strategy of the war, and was engaged almost exclusively in matters of organization.

The British Empire owes a large debt of gratitude to Lord Kitchener for the manner in which he stimulated recruiting during the first months of the war. But he was allowed to take too much power in his own hands.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Regarding the question "What was Kitchener doing on a cruiser north of Scotland? a New York agency says: "The main base of the British High Seas Fleet is supposed to be in the neighbourhood of the islands north of Scotland. For this reason it is believed Lord Kitchener with his staff went to the Orkney Islands for the purpose of reviewing the battle fleet after the Jutland engagement. It is considered probable also that he was engaged in a conference with other high officials regarding the programme to be followed to meet any new move from Germany. As Minister of War, Lord Kitchener was responsible for the defense of England, in the event of any attempt at invasion."

Consternation Over Death of "K. of K."

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 6.—Public consternation and amazement to-day followed the announcement that Lord Kitchener and his staff were sent to their deaths by a mine or torpedo which blew up the cruiser Hampshire off the Orkney Islands. Crowds gathered in Whitehall about the War Office seeking further details. Following the formal announcement of the loss of "K. of K." the flag on the War Office was at half staff and the blinds of the office were drawn. The air of officials indicated clearly that they held no hope that Kitchener has escaped. Surprise was expressed that a cruiser bearing the Minister of War could have been destroyed either by a torpedo or mine. It is probably that the question whether the cruiser had an escort of torpedo boats, and whether she was provided with any protection against submarines, will be put directly to the Government. Many comments were heard in the crowd about the War Office. Many remarked that it "was lucky it didn't happen before conscription became effective." They referred to the great power of Kitchener's name in stimulating voluntary recruiting.

LONDON, June 6.—According to official announcement made here today the following were included in Earl Kitchener's party:

Lt.-Col. Fitzgerald, Brigadier-Gen. Elloishaw, Sir H. Frederick Donaldson and H. J. O'Beirne, at one time Counsellor to the British Embassy at Petrograd.

Only Personal Staff Was With Kitchener

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 6.—It is not likely that any army officer of high standing other than Kitchener was lost with the Hampshire. Cables make it plain that it was Kitchener's "personal" staff, that is personal secretaries and orderlies were with him. There is no ground for the rumour that Gen. Sir Wm. Robertson, Chief of the Staff of the British army was on the Hampshire.

Another Big List of Officer Casualties

OTTAWA, June 6.—Further lists of casualties among Canadian officers in the heavy fighting of last week indicate eight killed, thirty wounded, fifteen missing, largely from Montreal and Western Canada points.

POLICEMEN ARE SEEKING AN INCREASE IN PAY

Request was Placed Before the Board of Police Commissioners at a Meeting That was Held Yesterday Afternoon—Matter was Laid Over.

McARTHUR'S RESIGNATION

Members of the city police force are seeking a raise of pay. An increase of fifty cents a day was the amount specified in a communication addressed to the Board of Police Commissioners by the members of the force. The document was placed before the Board at a meeting that was held yesterday afternoon. The Commissioners were a unit in declaring that present conditions justified an increase in the case of the man who patrols the beat. It was generally agreed that the executive officers of the force were sufficiently paid The high cost of living and the fact that other classes of labour are paid higher wages, was cited as one of the chief reasons why the increase should be granted. The communication was signed by each member of the force with the exception of Chief Thompson. Letters from municipalities of about the same size as Peterborough, showing the scale of pay for the police force, were laid before the Board. In every case the scale was higher than that paid in Peterborough. The matter was laid over for the time being.

SANITARY INSPECTOR.

Judge Huycke, chairman of the Board, expressed the hope that the Council would not appoint a member of the police force as Sanitary Inspector. is Worship Mayor Duffus assured His Honour that it was not the intention of the Council to appoint a member of the force.

"I was sorry to see those two men apply," said Judge Huycke.

The resignation of P. C. McArthur was received by the Board. McArthur, in his letter to the Commissioners, intimated that he was getting double the salary that he received as a member of the force. He is now employed in a local factory as a machinist.

Judge Huycke: "That may be all right for now. He may want to get back sometime in the future."

"I wonder will he expect us to pay him damages for keeping him out of good pay?" enquired Police Magistrate Dumble.

Chief Thompson was authorized to place a man temporarily on the force as a constable, at the rate of pay for third-class constables.

ACCOUNTS PASSED.

The following accounts were presented for payment:

Peterborough Utilities Commission $2.21; Blewett and Middleton, $3; Banks' Garage, $9.25; Bullied and Irwin, $15.10; Bell Telephone Co. 25c.; Fanning's Steam Laundry, 60c; W. H. Hamilton, 70c., Peterborough Examiner, $16.56; Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co., $1; F. L. Robinson, $2; Benjamin Shortley, $1.25; W. J. Sherwood, $1; Trebilcock Bros 85c.; D. Thompson, $5; J. C. Turnbull, $1; White and Ackford, 25c.; F. R. J. McPherson Co., $2.25; "My Valet," $2.75; W. E. Lech, $40; Merrill and Meredith, $288.

COLLECTION OF RAGS TO-NIGHT

The rags will be collected to-night between 5.30 and 8.30 from the section from Smith to Bolivar streets, between Park Street and Monaghan Road.

On Wednesday night Ashburnham will be canvassed. The collectors would greatly appreciate it if the housekeepers would put their rags and papers in a convenient place for collection.

CANADA'S TOLL WILL BE LARGE

No one Could Live in the Re-captured Trenches, the Bombardment by the Germans Representing the High Water Mark Reached on Western Front.

SPIRIT IS SPLENDID

LONDON, Tuesday, June 6.— The Times correspondent at British headquarters, describing the situation a Ypres, explains that the Canadian forces were unable to retain their ground recaptured from the Germans last Saturday owing to the intensity of the German artillery fire. The correspondent concludes his despatch by saying: "You must be prepared to hear that the Canadian losses have been very heavy."

"As soon as they had re-occupied the trenches and killed or driven off the enemy," the correspondent says, "the Canadians found themselves again under the same terrific artillery fire as had preceded the first enemy assault on Friday. Everywhere the trenches themselves were either demolished by gunfire or heaped with dead. To hold the positions won was impossible, for the mere reason that no one there could live.

"The Germans are now in possession of a mile of front to a depth in places of 250 yards back from the original Canadian front line.

It is considered by competent judges that the character of the bombardment here during the last two or three days represents the high watermark thus far attained on the western front. It has certainly been, and continues to be, of the most terrific severity. It has been so marked as to almost create a new phase in the war. The scale of which guns and ammunition were used is almost incredible, judged by my standard of experience.

"Whatever the outcome of the present fighting may be, you must be prepared to hear that the Canadian losses have been very heavy. As compensation for their losses the Canadians have the satisfaction of knowing that no troops could have shown finer gallantry than theirs. Their spirit is splendid."

SUNDAY WAS QUIET.

LONDON, June 5.—The fighting on the Canadian front at Zillebeke was continued on Saturday night and Sunday, but died down during the day, and Sunday night passed quietly. The Germans made a slight night attack, but it was easily repulsed. On Monday there was a good deal of shelling on both sides, according to Sir Douglas Haig's report from headquarters. Supplementing his despathes giving details of the Ypres fighting up to Saturday afternoon Frederick Palmer in a despatch under Sunday's date reports that the Canadians in counter-attacks were successful in re-entering their trenches but they were unable to retain the bulk of the captured ground. Hard fighting was in progress when he sent his dispatch.

The German War Office statement on June 5 reads: "The British on Sunday evening again attacked the positions captured by us south-east of Ypres. The attack broke down under our artillery fire."

GENERALS MERCER AND WILLIAMS.

No official news has been received regarding General Mercer and Williams. General Carson assured The Mail and Empire correspondent tonight that he had heard absolutely nothing concerning either of the missing generals.

A few slightly-wounded officers who were on the fringe of the fight have already arrived at London hospitals, most of them appearing ignorant of the serious extent of the action. A veterinary officer from Toronto, wounded by shrapnel while treating a horse's injury, said that the real action commenced a fortnight ago, and since then the bombardment had been kept up unceasingly. The Germans were entrenched

LIEUT. HARRY ROGERS

The news that Lieut. Harry G. Rogers of the Canadian Mounted Rifles and eldest son of Mr. R. B. Rogers has been wounded in the recent heavy fighting near Ypres will be regretfully received. Lieut. Rogers is a very popular officer and he was a popular citizen and Peterborough people will unite in hoping that his injuries are not serious and that he will soon recover. He is a graduate of McGill University and was a member of the championship rugby team of the University. When war broke out Lieut. Rogers was occupying a very important position in the west on the engineering staff of the C.P.R. Realising the need for men he endeavoured to enlist in the Engineers, a corps for which his training had peculiarly fitted him, but at that time the different Field companies were filled so Lieut. Rogers came home to Peterborough and secured a commission in B squadron 8th C.M.R. going overseas with the 8th and afterwards being transferred to another Mounted Rifle Battalion at the front. Lieut. Rogers' brother, Pte. Herber Rogers of the Machine Gun Section of the 2nd Battalion is a prisoner in Germany, having been wounded and captured in the second battle of Ypres last spring.

LIEUT FRED HUBBS

Lieut. Fred Hubbs formerly of B squadron 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles is officially reported missing. The news will bring regret to a large circle of friends both here and in Hastings, where for a number of years Lieut. Hubbs has been editor and publisher of the Hastings Standard. Prior to that time he was employed in the press room of the Peterborough Review and previous to that with the Examiner, and he is widely known in Peterborough.

Lieut. Hubbs has been a member of C squadron of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons and in the spring of last year he was given a commission in the Peterborough squadron of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles with whom he went overseas. Lieut. Hubbs is a son of Mr C. E. Hubbs, accountant at the Peterborough Hardware Company and is a South African veteran, having been one of the Peterborough contingent who went to South Africa with the Mounted Rifles.

THE 93rd BATTALION MORE COMFORTABLE NOW WITH FLOORS IN TENTS

Battalion Fund Subscribed By the Citizens Comes in Useful in Assisting in This Much Needed Improvement--Camp Delighted to Hear of Excursion From Peterborough ---Recruits to Queen's Ambulance Leave To-morrow ---To-day's Military News.

Barriefield War Camp, June 4.—Sunday found the men of the 93rd more comfortable than any day since arriving at camp.

Saturday proved to be very disagreeable owing to a continuous shower of rain which of course, meant the grounds were one mass of mud and water but as lumber had been ordered early for the purpose of flooring the tents it arrived on the scene at about ten a.m. and both officers and men worked hard with a long pull and a strong pull and all were finished by 5 o'clock when everybody was tired but cheerful and ready for a good dinner and a night's rest.

The citizens of Peterborough may rest assured that the money subscribed to the 93rd Battalion Fund is being put to a good use as the Militia Dept., only allow $400 worth of lumber to a battalion and with that they have to erect, a cookhouse, canteen, guard houses and other buildings which are a necessity, which means that there is very little if any lumber left for other purposes and if the men want or need floors in their tents they must be paid for out of their own funds, which costs about $3.75 per tent. In the case of the 93rd this expense comes from the regimental fund.

Sunday dawned a fine clear morning and by 2 o'clock the grounds were getting fairly dry once more. This morning a drum head service was held at 9.30, the different battalions forming up in company formation on their own parade grounds and then marching to the heights immediately east of headquarters, where Major Davidson took charge and conducted a most impressive service attended by the officers and men of the 93rd, 109th and 136th Battalions and also by Col. Hemming and his staff.

PIONEERS LEAVE.

Orders were received from headquarters this morning to prepare the volunteers from the 93rd for the Pioneer Battalion, to leave at once and at 11.30 they marched off the grounds to leave for Ottawa where they will receive further orders.

This afternoon everything is quiet but cheerful around camp. Some men have left for the city while others are busily engaged getting rid of the mud and dirt which still clings to their shoes and clothes with a vengeance.

The many friends of Lieut. A. R. Stevenson will be glad to learn that he is out of the hospital and has left for a short leave.

Lieut Gillham who is at the present time confined to Kingston hospital is progressing favourably and expects to report in a few days.

Mr. "Sam" Mills, son of Lt.-Col. Mills, and formerly of the Bank of Montreal staff who is attending the P.S.I. at Barriefield is an occasional visitor to the 93rd camp.

SOCKS APPRECIATED

The men of the 93rd Battalion as a whole take this opportunity of tendering a vote of thanks to the ladies and members of the 57 Chapter I.O.D.E. and also all others who contributed to their sock shower for the men of the 93rd as they have already put them to a test owing to the wet weather which has prevailed and it is quite common to hear compliments passed in reference to their quality of the same. Some amusing incidents have happened as a man with a small foot will have a large pair of socks and another with a large foot will have a small pair but we are glad to say that this troubles easily remedied by exchanging with one another.

Capt. Hicks of Queen's Field Hospital who has been overseas with other Canadian troops has been attached to the 93rd Battalion as Medical Officer and is capably assisted by Sergt. "Tun" Maguire and his staff.

Bandmaster Hughes who is keeping his band in the canal good form purposes giving a band concert the day of the excursion from Peterborough and also there will in all probability be a list of sporting events held so that visitors will find a great deal of

SAVING THE SITUATION.

History of each year repeats itself. The Canadian divisions at St. Julien, by pluchy tenacity and with great loss of life, held the German foe at bay till reinforcements came and "saved the situation." The square-jawed, determined Admiral Beatty, with his comparatively little flotilla, the cruiser squadron, with indomitable pluck and daring, and great loss of life and ships, held off the whole German fleet till the first line giants of the British navy came into action and sent the German fleet scurrying to its shelter. The bulldog breed grows strong and true to type under the old flag, whether in the "tight little isle" or in the broad expanses of Canada and the other dominions beyond the seas. The soil does not change the race—non mutat genus olum.

CONFIDENCE STILL.

If the Cisatlantic people had believed the first lying reports sent out by the Germans of their Jutland naval "victory" and the destruction of the British fleet, stocks in the United States would have taken a tumble. There was no appreciable reduction of securities prices. This shows that the stock operators, who are able to "size up" things pretty accurately, do not believe the German yarns and have lost no confidence in the power of the British navy to control transportation courses and to control the commercial situation. And as the truth has leaked out and the result is a big victory instead of a defeat, or even a reverse, this confidence in the stability, strength and integrity of the British navy is amply justified. The fact that another instance has come to light of the utter unreliability of news from German sources should make us incredulous. We are getting enough bad news these days without having added the monstrous exaggeration of the German Ananias department. We must keep our heads level and face heavy losses with courage. There is reason to believe that we can take comfort in the fact that the darkest hour is just before the dawn. The Teuton allies are making desperate attempts on all fronts to gain some striking advantage that will allay the growing distrust of the people of the central empires in the invincibility of German military force, stave off knowledge of the certainty of defeat. Lines of German soldiers are being sacrificed by battalions to try to gain an advantage at Verdun where success, if even gained, would be an empty victory with no strategic advantage. The desperate attempts being made by the Germans and their allies doubtless mean that they represent the final struggle to gain some big advantage and redeem in small part, the continuous failure of the Germans since the war began, to realize one of their great plans or realize any ambition except the ambition of destruction of life and property.

HOW TO READ WAR NEWS.

Not all of us have learned to read aright the news from the theatre of war, or to interpret the bearing of the events we read of, which, stupendous as they are, are mere incidents in a mighty arena of war horrors. We are to remember that a whole continent is at war; that the area of active fighting and fierce struggle, unequalled, or even approached, in intensity in the history of the world, is nearly three million square miles—nearly as large as the whole of Canada; that battle lines of a length of nearly fifteen hundred miles, with warring adversaries facing each other on every mile of this length. We read of a reverse or victory in some isolated spot that has only its proportional importance in relation to the immense area involved, and has a merely local effect with individually little comparative bearing on the great struggle of the nations. We cannot justifiably emphasize isolated incidents, nor can we use them to justify discouragement and depression. True, we must and do, deplore the loss of life, but that is in war, often the price of victory. And though, at times, the clouds lower so heavily and darkly that they seem to be in reach of the hand, and it would be less than human not to feel discouragement for the moment; yet the situation, as a whole, is not adverse to us; but the trend of the war is distinctly and inevitably in favour of our forces, and those of our allies. The progress is painfully slow, but it is still progress, and we have no reason to doubt that the end—and its beginning may be at hand—will be the triumph of the sacred cause of divine right, involving human right and liberty. We need not be elated unduly with a single success, nor be downcast over a single reverse. The crop grows into harvest with alternate sunshine and shade, and victory and reverse must needs alternate in this great war we are taking our part in; and, so long as the tide of victory in the main—and on the main—overcomes the tide of reverse, we are going to wards victory. Germany may congratulate herself that a part of her fleet is, for the moment, safe in harbours, to which the British fleet drove it, but we and Britain may congratulate ourselves that in spite of great losses the British fleet is stronger than when the war began, and that Britannia still rules the waves; that Britain holds, against all odds, the supremacy of the sea, and in her hands the reins of victory.

COMPENSATION.

It has been noticed that since the opening of the war there have been few deaths amongst the great captains of the forces, and the great governing statesmen. But if Lord Kitchener has gone down in the mine-sunken Hampshire we have had a great calamity, one whose full gravity and seriousness cannot be easily estimated off hand. His loss would be deplorable, but not necessarily irremediable. The history of the world shows that Almighty God in planning the human element of the government of the world, did not provide that one man, in any age, or in any sphere of action or responsibility, should alone carry the world on his shoulders, as the fabled Atlas was believed among the ancients to have done. There has never yet been any man, occupying any place of great responsibility in the world, or, for the moment, supremely great in achievement, whose place has not been, after his passing, filled, and whose achievements repeated—in another form perhaps, but essentially equalled. A generation ago Sir John Macdonald was regarded as so essential a figure in Canadian life that some, doubtless, felt that when he passed, Canada would collapse. But he was gathered to his fathers, and Canada lived on, and has, perhaps, become greater in material progress under other rulers. Englishmen, some of them felt, that when Brougham, Disraeli, Gladstone and Salisbury should die, the crack of doom would come for Great Britain. But the country has grown and flourished. Great men for the needs of the Empire have arisen, and to-day we have at the head of the Empire, guarding its destinies, as great a man as any in the history of the United Kingdom. Wellington and Nelson have had their worthy successors, and Lord Kitchener is—we won't yet write "was"—one of them. If he has gone down we have enough faith in the history of the past, to feel sure that a man will be found to take his place and do the work he given his life in doing. If as we believe we are—as we are—fighting in a righteous cause, the Great Captain will provide a leader and we shall go on waging this war as we have been doing, steadily and relentlessly, and surely, if slowly, to the triumphant end.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

MINISTER OF MUNITIONS AS MINISTER OF PEACE IN THE EMERALD ISLE

The best news that has come over the cable for a considerable time is that which tells that, in response to a patriotic appeal from Mr. Asquith, all parties in the British House of Commons have united in approval of the new effort which the government is to make, through the instrumentality of Mr. Lloyd George, to find some ground for common action in the solution of the Irish problem. The divisions among the Irish people, and their representatives have been the greatest obstacles to the efforts of English statesmen to give Ireland a satisfactory system of local government. These differences took on their most dangerous form very shortly before the outbreak of the war, when the two bodies of volunteers—one favoring the Home Rule Act and the other opposing it—were armed and drilled for conflict. The situation at that time was so alarming that one wonders what would have happened if there had been no war. Dreadful as the European war has been in many respects, it seems to have been almost a blessing to Ireland, since it caused the Irish people, with the exception of the comparatively small number composing the Sinn Fein Society, to forget their differences and unite for the service of the Empire. It was worth something to have John Redmond, Sir Edward Carson and William O'Brien on a common platform. Irish soldiers have played a splendid part in the war, a fact that must be remembered at a time when the madness of the Dublin rebels is so much in the public eye. All parts of the Empire recognize this fact, and see in it a ground for hope that men who can be brought into such unity for the service of the war can be brought also in unity for the management of Irish affairs. Mr. Asquith took a wise step when he went over to Ireland to personally look into the conditions there. It is most gratifying to know that, despite the many difficulties he met, he has found reason to hope that out of all that has happened there may emerge a better day for Ireland. In selecting Mr. Lloyd George as the Minister to act as a conciliator between the various Irish sections, the Premier has given the best evidence that the recent reports of estrangement between himself and the Minister of Munitions have no foundation. They have differed, as Mr. Lloyd George frankly told his constituents a few days ago, only as to the time and manner in which a measure of compulsory enlistment might be applied. Since they have now reached the same conclusion, and compulsion has only been adopted after the voluntary system has to its credit the magnificent army of over five millions of men, there is no longer any cause of disagreement, and Mr. Asquith is able to nominate Mr. Lloyd George for the performance of a new duty of the very highest importance to the United Kingdom and to the Empire. All patriotic citizens must unite with the leaders of all parties in the British Parliament in the hope that success may crown the efforts of the Welsh statesman to find a solution of the Irish question that can be accepted by all.—Journal of Commerce.

The History and the Strength of the Navy Breed Confidence

There is no call for panic over the serious British losses in the North Sea. It appears that the German navy paid heavily for its temerity and in the end had to run for shelter. In any event a single battle can destroy neither the prestige nor the power of a navy, which has kept the seas for 100 years, and the splendid history of which goes back over 200 years to Blake's victories in the Channel, and more than 300 years to Drake. Sir Humphrey Gilbert, Sir Walter Raleigh and the Spanish armada. It was the British navy which smashed the world pretensions of Philip of Spain, and which broke Napoleon's power after he had prepared for the invasion of England. But for the same British navy which has kept open all the Allied coasts for the movement of troops, munitions and supplies, Germany would have won the war in six months. This same old, but ever new, British navy is to-day still the chief factor in holding the Hohenzollern in check and in the end it will be the main instrument in his downfall.

During the thousand years of "our rough island story" the doughty seafaring breed has suffered many defeats, only to hang on to the foe with bull-dog tenacity, and in the long run to emerge triumphant. Reserves have been but the stepping stones to ultimate victory. We have generally managed to win the last battle of each war for British freedom, and therefore, constructively and by precedent and example for world liberty. Drake and Blake and Nelson all met with checks, only to raise the British flag and British prestige higher than ever before they passed. There were dark days in the Seven Years' War before Wolfe and Clive and the navy won Canada and India thus establishing the British Empire upon the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans. The British at home endured long months, and even years of anxiety and impatience while Nelson roamed the Mediterranean and the Atlantic in search of pulsant foes who ever evaded his clutches and sometimes seemed to worst him.

But the skies cleared when he died victorious over the combined fleets at Tarfalgar, and we need have no doubt that the skies will again clear over the more turbulent North Sea. The Kaiser's navy has made a daring and successful dash from the Kiel Canal, taken heavy toll of a British fleet and again fled for cover to its secluded harbours. The escapade may be repeated once or twice, but we believe that in the long run the superior striking power of the ever-growing British navy, backed by its age-long traditions of efficiency and victory, will be fully equal to the vital task set for it by civilization.

Zeppelins and submarines and mines may do their worst, but it must not be forgotten that Britain's losses in ships since the beginning of the war have not been nearly as large as German's or that by reason of new construction the British Empire to-day is nearly twice as strong at sea as it was when the conflict began. In a world-war temporary reverses and isolated defeats must be expected. Such checks do not dismay a great and self-reliant race. British history abounds in instances where seeming defeat has proved the road to the most triumphant peace. Let every British man and woman the world around have faith in the breed the Grand Fleet, the Allies and in the proneness of history to repeat itself where the cause is noble and its defenders worthy of their valiant ancestors.—Toronto News.

"A MOTHER IN A MILLION" SEEN THROUGH SON'S EYES

The Commonplace Woman Became Angel of Hope and Cheer at Bedside of Wounded Boy Soldier

I saw her buying oranges in the squalid street that runs along by the hospital gate—a short, shapeless woman, with mouse coloured hair, a sallow complexion, and tired, expressionless eyes of pale slate gray.

Like the rest of her type, lacking the humour and colour of the center, she was dull, uninteresting and mediocre—so commonplace a figure that I should probably never have noticed her but for the glistening white roses in her hand, accentuating and calling attention to her drabness.

Passing up the wide stone steps, I made my way through the colonnade, and into the military section of the great hospital. As the doors of the first ward swung to behind me the occupant of the nearest bed looked up with a start.

"I thought you were my mother."

A smile of apology brightened up his face, but could not dispel the disappointment from his eyes, which even as he spoke, stole anxiously to the door. "I wonder if she'll come," he continued, half absently. "She promised."

"Oh, I am sure she will," I replied, "It is quite early yet."

My groundless optimism seemed to reassure him; he lay his head back on the pillow.

"It's nearly eight months since I saw her. They've just brought me over from the base hospital in France—leg off and shrapnel wounds," he explained, casually. "And you can just guess how I feel—all nerves like with hoping and waiting. There's only me and her! Father died when I was ever such a kid, and Billy went down in the Pathfinder."

His boyish face fell as the door opened to admit the ward sister, and closed again behind her.

"You ought to know my mother," he continued, confidently. "She's fine. A mother in a million. A real chum to a fellow, and that clever at seeing the bright side of things! She's young, too, and pretty." He thought a moment. "Fair."

"I should like—"

But the fever heavy eyes had travelled past me and a little cry of pleasure broke from the young boy's lips.

As the ward doors bell to with a low 'swish' behind me, I moved hastily away with a sudden sense of intrusion.

But even as I did so I yielded to a sudden desire to see the newcomer to the bedside I had left. And it was she with whom I was already familiar—the buyer of oranges in the squalid street.

But I say her now not as a drab and commonplace figure, but as the boy's cherished mother, her face no longer weary and careworn, but radiant with love for and pride in her son. How could I have thought her dreary and pitifully dull. As I stood there beside her son with tears of joy in her eyes—they were so bright now, and blue—she was nothing less than an angel of hope and cheer Commonplace after all perhaps—but only in the sense that to her own child she was a "mother in a million."

Maimed Prisoners Go Through Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, June 1.—The great task of exchanging wounded prisoners between Russia and Germany through Sweden will be continued throughout the Summer. The exchange applies only to those prisoners totally unfit ever to serve again. One glimpse at a trainload of these miserable war derelicts leaves no doubt as to their disability. Missing legs, missing arms, sightless eyes, shattered jaws, twisted spines, and here and there the glassy stare which tells its own story of a burned-out brain—these are the evidences the Swedish people see of the war that surrounds them.

The transfer through Sweden is handled entirely by the Swedish Red Cross or "Roda Korset" of, which Prince Carl, brother of the King, is the active head. The German prisoners are received from the Russians at Harparanda, at the Swedish-Finnish frontier, only a few miles south of the sweep of the Artic Circle. In trains specially fitted for their use the wrecks of men are taken south through Sweden, a journey of three nights and two days, the pace of the train being timed for the utmost of comfort. At Trelleborg, the southern-most part of Sweden, the one-time soldiers of the Fatherland are placed upon German hospital transports for the short sail across the southern reach of the Baltic to the German port of Sassnitz. From there they are taken to Hamburg and held in detention for one month as a guarantee against the importation of any infectious disease. This quarantine period ended, the men, most of them dependents for life, are returned to their relatives and homes.

In the case of the Russian prisoners the operation is just reversed. The work has begun this year with one train a week in each direction. This month the number will be increased to three in each direction. The trains consist of about 235 soldiers. When the work is fully under way the rate of exchange will be about 3,000 prisoners a month. As the percentage of "totally unfit" among the men must be comparatively small, some idea may be gained as to the total number of prisoners held on both sides of the Russian German battle line.

Debarkation of Russians from a ship at Trelleborg had been under way for ten minutes when there suddenly appeared among the human fragments at the foot of the gangway a man who had been entirely lost sight of as he made his way to shore. Both of his legs were gone, and his head scarcely showed above the gangway rails as he swung the remnants of his body along between two stubby little crutches. It soon developed that he was not alone, in his misery, for there were several others like him. It seemed that the crutch process would never end, for the doctors said the number of "leg cases" was unusually high in this first shipment of human wreckage home to Russia. One of the leg cases was a boy of 15. His left leg was gone well above the knee, but with the dexterity of youth he had learned to hop along with only one crutch, and had thrown the other away as so much impediment.

is sent direct to the diseased parts by the Improved Blower. Heals the ulcers, clears the air passages, stops droppings in the throat and permanently cures Catarrh and Hay Fever, 60c. a box; blower free. Accept no substitutes. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

DOES THIS MEAN YOU?

Are you one of the many who are suffering with eczema, obstinate sores, ulcers or any other skin trouble? If so, lose no time in trying Zam-Buk, and you will be amazed at its curative powers.

The healing power of any ointment is in proportion to its medicinal ingredients. Ordinary ointments being composed chiefly of animal fats, with only a small percentage of medicinal ingredients, have not sufficient healing power to overcome a bad case of skin trouble. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, is purely herbal, and is all medicine, which explains its superiority over other ointments, and its many marvellous cures.

Besides being best for eczema, ulcers, and skin diseases of all kinds, it is equally good for blood-poisoning, piles, burns, cuts, heat rashes, sore and blistered feet, insect bites and sunburn. 50c. box all druggists, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp for postage on free trial box.

AUSTRIA UPHOLDS MARRIAGE LAW

STATUTE PROHIBITING WEDDINGS BETWEEN CHRISTIANS AND NON-CHRISTIANS HOLDS IN GERMANY.

Berlin, June 6.—The Austrian Supreme Court has decided that the law prohibiting marriages between Christians and non-Christians applies to marriages outside of Austria. The Court held invalid the marriage of Count Rudolf Schirding and a Protestant woman of Berlin.

The Count left the Roman Catholic church in 1913 and was married here in August, 1914. In the following August he returned to the Catholic faith. The lower courts held the marriage was invalid and this decision is now sustained by the Supreme Court.

Under the Austrian law now Christians may marry Jews but not Catholics or Pdotestants.

To obtain good fertility and vigorous chicks the breeders must have ample exercise.

HIGH PRICES HALT DEMAND FOR HORSES

Just Now There is a Lack of Supply of Kind of Animals Needed for Military Work

BUFFALO, June 3.—With an ever growing scarcity of good horses and a reluctance on the part of the European governments to pay the prices for them, the war despatches may soon contain thrilling tales of cavalry dashing into action mounted on skatemobiles or astride the old reliable hobby horse. Thousands of horses have been sold for the allied armies in Buffalo and the other big horse markets of this country and it is said that just now there is a lack of supply of the kind of animals needed. The very best horses are sought by the agents of England, France, and Italy, and horse dealers here say they are slow about paying the price that the market conditions have created.

Buffalo has not participated in the war business to as great an extent as have some of the other large horse trading centres. St. Louis, the largest horse market in the country, has devoted much of its business to the war trade. Now it is reported that dull times have set in there. Chicago is the second largest centre with Buffalo third. While many horses have been sold for the war service here, the commercial trade has been kept up and this city stands in a good position to push its way into second or first place as a horse market.

Prices Especially High.

Horse prices are especially high, extra good horses of the heavy draught kind being particularly scarce. This is usually the dull season in the business, however, and the demand now is pretty well filled, horsemen say.

Buffalo is in a strategic position, having a good territory to draw its supply from and having the eastern states to sell to. Horses come here from Iowa, Ohio and Pennsylvania. New York State is more of a buyer than a seller. Buyers from the eastern states find this city a convenient market to purchase horses. They can come here on Saturdays and Sundays, buy their horses and get back to their business the first of the week. With these advantages it is the opinion of Buffalo horse dealers that the market here is bound to develop.

Few carriage or coach horses are sold here, these days of the automobile.

HOTELMAN ACCUSED OF ASSAULTING OFFICER

Recruiter Wanted Windsor Man to Let Bell Boy Get Away.

WINDSOR, June 4.—Charging that Edward E. Ingram, proprietor of the British American Hotel, assaulted him, Lieut. R. A. C. Hollis, recruiting officer for Royal Canadian Dragoons, laid information against Ingram.

Lieut. Hollis said he called at the hotel to ask Proprietor Ingram to allow Kenneth Wilson, a bell boy who had enlisted, to leave without giving notice, as officers are anxious to have Wilson sent on with next draft. The officer charges that instead of complying Ingram forcibly ran him into the street. Police Magistrate Leggatt will hear the case on Tuesday.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

20 PER CENT. OF METHODIST MINISTERS HAVE ENLISTED

30,000 of the Laity Are in Khaki According to Report of Mr. Hazzelwood of the Army and Navy Board—Capt. Clarke Urges That Renewed Activities Be Carried On By the Church.

The activities of the Army and Navy Board of the Methodist Church in the interests of Canadian Methodism in the war were sketched to the Bay of Quinte Conference yesterday afternoon by Mr. Oliver Hazzelwood of Toronto. It was strictly a Methodist organization, he stated, with Dr. Chown, General Superintendent of the Church, as chairman, Rev. T. Albert Moore, secretary, and associated with them, Dr. Long, Rev. Hiram Hull of Toronto, Hon. E. J. Davies of Newmarket, Col. Chipman and Mr. Hazzelwood.

The reason of its establishment were the many complaints that Methodist had not received a fair share of appointments as chaplains to various military units, that some who were appointed were without conferential sanction, and that men were or might be appointed who could serve the cause better at home.

And another reason was that since it was desired that justice should be done to Methodism, so it should deal out justice to the great cause for which we are struggling.

Some Truth in Claims.

The Army and Navy Board found that there was some truth in the complaints that had been voiced. At the same time, said Mr. Hazzelwood, "the records showed we were far from our duty. We felt that since our boys had been taught the principles of sacrifice they should be the first to respond." The Board found that many boys were attested as Wesleyans and as belonging to another denomination who were shown to be Methodists upon careful enquiry.

On December 22nd last the Board sent letters to every circuit, and although replies from all of them were not received the Methodist people had then enlisted 16,000, the Bay of Quinte Conference showing 1,529, this was 1 3/10 per cent. of the Conference. There were then four chaplains in the Conference, and there are now five. The Conference now shows 2,949 recruits or 2 4/10 per cent. With four chaplains to this number was doing very well, Mr. Hazzelwood remarked.

"No doubt we can show a much better enlistment than most people give us credit for, but we have not done all we ought to have done. Throughout Canada 2 8/10 per cent. of the church membership had enlisted, and 10 per cent. of members and adherents. The enlistment of Canadian-born of British descent was 18 per cent. Of the British-born it was estimated that 60 per cent. had enlisted.

Turning to the response from the Methodist ministry Mr. Hazzelwood stated that 181 had offered themselves as chaplains, and 41 had been appointed. Enlistments other than chaplains showed 220 ministers and probationers, making a total of 260, an exceedingly creditable record, the speaker stated. "It shows that our ministers are not afraid to make the sacrifice for the Christianity they are preaching and exemplifying.

Follow Up Recruits.

After relating various work the Board had done, Mr. Hazzelwood appealed for the co-operation of the Church so that every Methodist boy who enlists will be kept in touch with, that he may know he is being prayed for by those for whom he fights. Trinity Methodist Church, Toronto, has 180 recruits. The congregation has prayed for them not in any perfunctory manner, but in all earnestness and so far none of them are known to have been killed. Several have been invalided home and one of these has re-enlisted.

"I believe more than ever in the power of prayer for the spiritual and physical welfare of these boys," said Mr. Hazzelwood. He remarked that Trinity Church had a system of regular and frequent letters to all its boys, and a parcel every five weeks. In their replies many of them have stated that Trinity Methodist Church means more to them to-day than it ever did before. The Church has a great opportunity of gripping these boys by prayer and material remembrances. When they return they will direct the destinies of Canada and it is the duty of those at home to see that they come back attached to the Church.

Mr. Hazzelwood exhorted the Church members to send letters and parcels. It was impossible to appreciate what these mean to the boys at the front; and pray for them, have special prayers, and let them know they are being remembered in your prayers. This was a very important matter, he said, and hoped it would be generally adopted at once.

Capt. Clarke's Remarks.

Captain Clarke, Chaplain of the 235 Battalion, remarked that Methodism is awakening, but that it has taken it a long time to awake. Our boys have got to get into it, not let the other fellows do it. Sixteen thousand recruits in December last had now reached thirty thousand from the Methodist Church. There were not 2,000 Methodist ministers in Canada; subtract those who are over 50 years and a possible 1,500 remain from whose number there have been 260 recruits. Twenty per cent. of the physically available ministers of the Church have enlisted.

"We have in our midst," continued Captain Clarke, "eight more, four of whom have enlisted, and the other four will be in khaki inside of a month. Whatever the representation of the Church membership, none could show the lead in respect to the enlistment of ministers. Nothing more could be expected of the Methodist ministry. In the counties of Durham and Northumberland in which the 235th is recruiting, there were 60,000 Methodist Church members and adherents, the Captain stated. "This is our war," he concluded, "and by the strength of the conviction that's upon me, this is a holy war. We must go back from this Conference and throw ourselves into the work as we have not done in the past, and say Methodism must rally to the call."

Rev. C. H. Coon and Rev. J. P. Wilson spoke briefly, and Mr. Hazzelwood, speaking again, paid tribute to the patriotism of the Methodist parsonages. The sons of Methodist ministers deserved all the praise that could be given them. More of their sons had gone than the sons of others.

CHATHAM SOLDIER MAY HAVE ENDED LIFE AT WINDSOR

Hat and Overcoat Found on Dock's Edge

OBSERVED BY WATCHMAN

Letter Indicates That James Codere, Formerly of 70th, Is Drowned.

WINDSOR, June 6.—James Codere of Chatham, believed from papers found in his clothing to be a discharged soldier from the 70th Battalion, is thought to have committed suicide by jumping from the Canadian Pacific dock into the Detroit river. J. Hornsby, a railroad watchman, saw a man walking rapidly along the edge of the dock, but by the time he reached the spot the stranger had disappeared. Lying on the edge of the dock was a hat and overcoat, in the pockets of which were papers furnishing clews to the man's identity.

A letter addressed to Codere, evidently written by his wife, told of her bein gill and spoke of their six children and asked him to come home.

A discharge certificate showing Codere had enlisted September 8, 1915, and giving his residence at 154 Colborne street, Chatham, was also found.

The river was dragged all day, but the body was not recovered.

Canada's Toll Will Be Large

on a ridge to the north-east, from which a fierce bombardment preceded, the heavy artillery pourir down upon the lower level held by the Canadians until the trenches were so badly pounded up that they gave little or no shelter. Notwithstanding serious losses, the Canadians patiently endured all this, and then early on Friday resorted to a mode of attack for which they have gained fame among British troops.

Stealing back to the trenches which had been evacuated under an intolerable fire, our men, mostly newcomers of the Third Division, dashed over No. Man's Land hurling bombs and grenades while our artillery from behind supported the attack, with the result that at least part of the lost ground was retaken.

The Evening Standard, commenting on the latest action, says Paardeberg, Neuve Chapelle, St. Julien and St. Eloi have shed undying lustre on Canadian arms.

The heavy casualty list which the Record Office transmits to Ottawa today shows once again that the name "Ypres" spells mourning to many Canadian families whose names are household words. Such names as Buller, Gault, Baker, and Shaw indicate that Quebec and Ontario units were in the midst of the heaviest fighting.

JAMES A. GARFIELD INJURED IN PLUNGE

GRANDSON OF THE LATE PRESIDENT HAS NARROW ESCAPE WHEN AN AUTOMOBILE DROPS INTO A RIVER

Winstead, Conn., June 5.—James A. Garfield, of Cleveland, Ohio, a student at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., and a grandson of the late President Garfield, had a remarkable escape from death at Pleasant Valley, 5 miles east of Winstead, this morning, when his automibile crashed through an iron rail fence at the approach of a bridge and dropped 20 feet into the Farmington River.

In a dazed condition he wandered in the direction of a light, which took him to the home of Walter Manchester, where his injuries were treated. They were not serious.

"ROBIN HOOD"

To Be Presented Here By the De Koven Opera Co.

"Robin Hood," the best comic opera America has produced, will be sung at "The Grand" Thursday, June 15.

The story of this popular and artistic success is based upon the old English tale of Robin Hood and his band of outlaws, a story used by Sir Walter Scott in his famous novel of Ivanhoe. The romance of this picturesque bandit possesses a charm which can never die, and in the opera of "Robin Hood," Reginald de Koven has given the world a musical setting as immortal as the wonderful story itself. The delightful melodies are as appealing to the musical public today as when first sung, and the opportunity to hear this beautiful music again is distinctly a privilege.

It is a pleasure to announce that this masterpiece, which demands the finest vocal talent, will be sung in the coming production by artists of the first class. Foremost among them is Ivy Scott, a dramatic soprano from the "Madame Butterfly," and Girl of "The Girl of the Golden West" companies of Henry W. Savage. Miss Scott will sing the role of Maid Marian, and her art in using her lovely voice has never before been equalled in this part.

The title role will be sung by Ralph Brainard, whose splendid tenor voice will be a revelation. Friar Tuck will be played by William Schuster. His unctuous performance of the character is a classic. Cora Tracy will be the Alan-a-Dale, who sings the always popular "O, Promise Me"! James Stevens, a fine baritone, from the Chicago Grand Opera, will be the Little John, and Herbert Waterous, as Will Scarlet, will sing the famous "Armourers' Song." The chorus is especially fine vocally, and a notable feature of this company is the augmented orchestra.

The de Koven Opera Company, which is under the direction of Fred E. Walker, is elaborately staged and costumed, and in detail is the same as that given at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, during the long run in that city last season. The performance here is sure to be a social and musical event.

PARTY POLITICS A BAR TO GOOD GOVERNMENT

McCarter, M.P.P., of Guelph, States That Good Government is Impossible With the Patronage System Going Full Blast—Interesting Addresses in George Street Methodist Church Last Evening

Social service and evangeliam was the keynote of two stirring addresses given last evening in George street Methodist church by the Rev. W. J. Smith, B.A., Field Secretary, and Mr. Samuel J. Carter, M.P.P. of Guelph. The meeting opened with an address by Mr. D. W. Dumble, who is an ardent advocate of social service and evangeliam. "I am for anything that makes this world better than we found it," said Mr. Dumble.

Rev. Mr. Smith who was the first speaker, deplored the conditions that permit children of immature years to seek employment in factories. This evil, the speaker allied with the liquor traffic. "We are burning up our great natural asset," said Mr. Smith. "Right in the midst of such conditions we have placed the licensed bar and the club. These things tend to destroy the home and lower the efficiency of the nation as a whole. Speaking of the temperance movement, Mr. Smith said that the Methodist church has always stood for total prohibition. The first public action reprehending the liquor was taken at a Methodist conference. It was Mr. Samuel Carter, a member of the Board of Social Service and Evangellism, who conceived the idea of a committee of one hundred. The result has been the enactment of a total prohibitory law for Ontario that will take effect next September. Such legislation will do much to clarify the moral atmosphere of the community. The liquor traffic confuses moral ideals. People speak of Kaiserism as though it was something that sprang into existence since the outbreak of the present war. The Methodist church has been fighting kaiserism since its inception.

Law Enforcement.

"We will soon be confronted with the problem of enforcing the new legislation," said Mr Smith. If the law can be successfully enforced some wonderful things can be accomplished. Law enforcement is one of the surest educators to be found in any community that is well looked after. The non-enforcement of law produces lawlessness in the community where such a condition exists. If the present law is not enforced we will retrograde.

"Religion," said the speaker, "is the unifying influence of the human life. Religion is the impulse and soul of our daily lives. It should predominate in our homes. Destroy the home life, send the child on to the street and its playground under the horses feet and you rob the child of its home life, which is essential to its proper development.

In the Crucible.

Mr. Samuel Carter, who was the next speaker, referred to the heavy casualty list resulting from the recent severe fighting on both land and sea. "The navy sent over five thousand lives to the bottom of the sea in order that liberty might be preserved, said Mr. Carter, who also paid a glowing tribute to the pioneers of the ministry who travelled throughout the country on horseback. They were big men and represented not only the Methodist church, but also the Presbyterian and other churches. They believed in the true religion and did not attempt to distort the message.

"Things have changed," said Mr. Carter. For upwards of twenty-five years we have been in the crumble. Men of the early days did not stop to argue whether the book of Genesis was right. They never doubted it for a moment. They were the men who rode through the forests and planted little churches here and there. They did much to create a proper type of manhood based on true Christian citizenship. Mr. Carter did not hesitate to record his disgust for party politics. He referred to the efforts made by the liquor men to preserve their interests through the medium of party politics. "You cannot have good government with the patronage system going full blast," said Mr. Carter with a wave of his hand. In conclusion the speaker related the efforts by which prohibition was obtained for the Province of Ontario. The movement was born in the social service department of the church. The result would ultimately pave the way for the realization of glorious opportunities for Ontario. Evangelism and social service must go together, said Mr. Carter.

COUNCIL GRANTED $1,000 FOR SOLDIERS.

$700 to the 93rd Battalion Fund and $300 to 52nd Battery.

The Council, last night, contributed $700 to the 93rd Batallion fund and $300 to the 52nd Battery, a total of $1,000. This action was taken on a motion by Ald. Dobbin, seconded by Ald. Stratton, following addresses by members of the Battalion Fund Committee. Those who addressed the Council were Mrs. W. R. Morris and Messrs. A. E. Coulthard, E. A. Peck, R. R. Hall and Major W. C. Ackerman. Mr. Peck stated that $1,600 had been received from the Townships, and the least the city could do was to give $1,000. Mr. Hall referred to the encouragement this remembrance would be to future recruiting, apart from the comforts it would afford the members of the 93rd Battalion. Mrs. Morris observed that with the Council's grant of $700 the fund would fall short of the $10,000 that had been sought. If the Council could exceed that sum it would be greatly appreciated by the men of the battalion. Major Ackerman made a plea for the recognition of the Peterborough boys who had enlisted in the 52nd Battery.

Among those who waited on the Council were Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Dunsford, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Sharpe, Mr. J. A. Aylmer, F. D. Kerr, E. A. Peck, J. A. Sharpe, W. C. Ackerman, A. E. Coulthard, W. R. Morris.

An Attractive Style is the Dominating Influence in the Purchase of a Waist

POSSIBLY that is the reason why we are doing so big a Waist business (and Waists include Middies.) When it comes to the question of value in a waist it's a very difficult matter to determine whether the waist is worth 50c or a dollar more than the marked price. The reputation of the store is the strongest factor in influencing you to make a purchase—aside from the style which you prefer.

SERGT. COOPER, RETURNED SOLDIER IS APPOINTED SANITARY INSPECTOR

Salary is $700 Plus $2 a Week to Cover Transportation Expenses--Council was Unanimous in Making the Appointment

Sergeant G. R. The resolution of appointment was unanimously carried on motion of Ald. Saunders, seconded by Ald. Evans. Prior to the Council meeting Sergt. Cooper and Mr. E. F. Mason, of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, waited upon the Property committee. A special committee composed of Mayor Duffus, Ald. Saunders and Ald. Weir appointed at the last meeting of the Council to consider the applications for the position, reported in favour of Sergt. Late Garret Guiry Laid To Rest

The funeral of the late Garrett Guiry took place from his late home on Saturday to St. Luke's church, Downeyville, where grand high mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Guiry of Kinmount, son of the deceased. Rev. Father Maguire of Ennismore, acted as deacon, with Rev. Fr. Phalen of Peterborough sub-deacon.

The funeral sermon was handled in a masterly manner by the Rev. Fr. Maguire, late parish priest, of Downeyville. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, of Peterborough; Rev. Mons. Casey, Lindsay; Rev. Fr. Ferguson, Lindsay; Rev. Fr. Meader, Toronto, and Fr. Galvin, parish priest, were inside the sanctuary rails.

A large number of Lindsay's prominent citizens followed the remains to Downeyville, where they took part in the ceremony.

DAYLIGHT SAVING SCHEME WAS ALMOST ADOPTED BY COUNCIL

The Vote Last Night that Refused to be Altered Very Nearly Put Peterboro in the Big City Class--Opinions of the Aldermen.

When the Council divided by 5 to 4 against the Daylight Saving innovation last night, Mayor Duffus ineffectually tied the vote, and Peterborough's clocks will continue to mark time in the same staid old fashioned way. Alderman Edgar, Dobbin, Stratton, Evans and the Mayor were in favor of giving the proposed Daylight Saving scheme a trial from June 15th to Sept 15th, but Alderman Saunders, Duncan, Langford, Weir and McIntyre opposed it. Thus, with a tie vote there was no alternative but to dismiss the idea as far as this city was concerned.

The question was introduced by a communication from City Clerk Littlejohn of Toronto asking Peterborough Council to endorse a movement asking for a Dominion wide daylight saving law.

Ald. Dobbin led off with a query as to whether the interests of working men and girls had been consulted.

A prominent employee of the De Laval Co., had expressed his support of daylight saving to Ald. Edgar, who suggested that the Mayor call a meeting at which all the large employers of labour could express their opinions.

Ald. Saunders wasn't in favour of the bill since he now rises at five and with the bill in force he would have to turn out at four. There were many labouring men who get up even at four, he said. Ald. Saunders said he had seen many girls going to work at six-thirty and they should be considered.

Ald. Duncan did not think it a good thing at all. It would be a detriment to efficiency of labour and nothing should be done until it had received further consideration.

There's nothing urgent, Ald. Langford said, but he felt that if anything were to be done it should be when other cities were adopting it.

Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Weir felt that it was best to leave well enough alone.

Ald. Evans believed that a week's experience of the change would be so satisfactory the difference would not be realized. The East City representative, like the far-famed Brodie was game to take a chance for this year anyway.

Ald. Stratton expressed his support of the changed time providing it would not be inconvenient to the banks and would be helpful to the merchants and their employees and to those who worked in factories. He believed that the advantages of the scheme outweighed whatever disadvantages might be experienced. In any case he wanted to give it a trial this summer.

Mayor Duffus expressed a desire to find out whether daylight saving was the practical measure it was generally regarded.

TWO MOTIONS FAILED.

Ald. Stratton moved seconded by Ald. Dobbin that the Council take the steps necessary to put forward the clock one hour at midnight, June 14th and put back at midnight on Sept 14.

Ald Saunders moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan that no action be taken. The amendment carried. It was supported by Ald. Saunders, Weir, McIntyre, Langford and Duncan. Aldermen Edgar, Dobbin, Stratton and Evans voted for the "Daylight Saving" plan but were not numerous enough to carry it.

Ald. Edgar was disappointed and said so. He strongly believed the idea was favoured by the majority of citizens.

Ald. Saunders reiterated his objections, and Ald. Stratton stated that four or five manufacturers had approved of the idea and had hoped it would be put into force in Peterborough. He moved that the clocks be advanced one hour on June 10th.

This second attempt to follow the Daylight Saving crowd of municipalities likewise failed. Mayor Duffus voted in favour of the idea thus equally dividing the Council's opinion as follows:

In favor of daylight Saving—Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Edgar, Dobbin, Stratton and Evans.

Opposed--Aldermen Saunders, Duncan, Langford, McIntyre and Weir.

REPORT HAS NO FOUNDATION

LINDSAY, June 6.—During the past fortnight a report has been in circulation to the effect that Capt. F. W. Kennedy, of Lindsay, formerly with the Canadian Machine Telephone of Peterborough, has been killed at the front. The Post refrained from giving this rumor publicity, and now it appears that it has no foundation whatever. His brother, Mr. H. P. Kennedy of Toronto, and his Peterborough relatives have received no such information and are at a loss to know how the rumor originated.

Lightning Destroyed Barns of Smith Township Farmer

Two Cows, a Number of Small Pigs, Besides a Quantity of Hay and Grain were Consumed when Lightning Struck Barns of Mr. Robert Bell.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Yesterday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, the barn and buildings of Mr. Robt Bell, 4th concession of Smith Township, were struck by lightning and destroyed. Two cows were killed and a quantity of hay, straw, grain etc. were consumed. It is supposed that the two cows were killed by lightning. The deluge of rain which accompanied the storm kept the flames in check and gave Mr. Bell and his son time to get five cows out of the burning building. Both Mr Bell and his son were effected by the shock. Mr. Bell had just left the cow stable when the building was struck, while the son was in another part of the building. The latter was knocked down but not severely hurt.

SMALL INSURANCE.

The buildings destroyed were a large frame barn and two smaller ones. In the barn were a number of little pigs, which were burned to death; also a quantity of grain, including two hundred bushels of oats fifty bushels of wheat and a quantity of barley and rye. The exact loss is not known, although it will be heavy. There was a small amount of insurance on the buildings. The storm was particularly severe in Smith Township, and the rain poured down in torrents.

Mrs. R. J. Devey has received the following letter from her son, now in England with the Canadian Field Artillery:

Dear Mother.—I am now in London having a very good time. The clocks were put on an hour to-day. Yesterday I paid a visit to St. Paul's Cathedral and walked around looking at the monuments, paintings, etc. They are still at work strengthening the supports of the dome, so that the bottom may be fixed. Of course you know of the various statues there. I went down into the Crypt, where I saw Nelson's and Wellington's "Tarcophagus," also the tomb of Lord Roberts, which lies in a niche about as big as my bedroom at home. On the front is a marble slab inscribed, "Roberts." Anyone who has heard of Lord Roberts, would at once know to whom it referred. It is in accordance with the simple life he led. A few feet away lie the remains of Sir Garnet Wolsely, whom if I remember history correctly, was instrumental in quelling the Red River rebellion of 1870 in our now far-off land of Canada. A simple wreath of flowers is on the tomb, but a mural tablet decorates the wall behind, placed by Lady Wolsely. Near by is a lovely creamy white marble tablet on which is engraved the figure of a nurse giving water to a wounded soldier. Of course it was "The Lady of the Lamp," Florence Nightingale. Passing a window in the wall we saw that the wall was twenty-four feet thick. On reaching the main floor attention was called to a new bronze tablet lately installed in memory of the brave explorer Scott, which is very artistic. Then I went up to the whispering gallery, just under the great dome. The verger spoke in a whisper from one side with his mouth close to the wall. He told the history of the cathedral briefly, and although we were on the other side, we heard every word. Outside of the gallery we had some fine views of London. One view showed the nine miles distant Crystal Palce, another hemish hills, another hills of Surrey, wher our camp, Witley, is situated. Right at our feet was the Thames, the tide being then out, showing broad strips of mud on either side of the river Blackfriars, Waterloo, the Tower bridges were easily located, also the historic tower of London, another view showing the houses of parliament and "Westminster Abbey." Descending the 627 steps we left the Cathedral as the organ began to play for the 10 a.m. service. Cousin Jen is at Salonika; it was seven weeks before he got a parcel from his mother.

I heard the true story of Gallipoli the other day. The Lancashire Fusiliers, in the teeth of fire, such as the Light Brigade encountered at Balaclava, in almost insurmountable difficulties made a landing on the shores of Gallipoli, and held it against the Turks. Out of 1200 men in one battalion, when roll was called after the battle only 150 men answered to their names. Digging themselves in they held the position until the Anzacs came along, taking over the hard fought ground and getting all the praise.

The tale dare not be told in Lancashire. Frank Roberts may be on leave soon and I shall try to see him Good-bye.

From your loving son,
HAROLD.

One hundred men are needed. Full particulars may be secured at the recruiting office at the corner of George and Hunter streets.

Pte. C. H. Butterfield of the Times Office, who has enlisted with the Queen's Field Ambulance unit, and who leaves with the first draft to-morrow, has been presented with a very handsome fountain pen and an address from the employees of the Times.

Enlisted with Queen's Ambulance are six or seven well-known boys who are recent graduates from the Collegiate Institute. Among them is Fred McNeely of the Y.M.C.A., who has been accepted as a bugler, and C. E. Voaden and E. D. Smyth, now employed in local banks. Another well-known citizen who joined the Queen's Ambulance, yesterday, was Mr. W. F. Hamilton.

The 93rd Battalion left Peterborough a week ago to-day. Since that time forty citizens of Peterborough have joined the colours in the Queen's Field Ambulance, 93rd Battalion, 235th Battalion and the 236th of Bowmanville.

Council Passed Board of Education's Request For $15,000

Ald. Stratton Reported That Proposed Improvements to South Central School were Interdependent and Half Measures Would Not be Satisfactory---Other Items of Business.

After visiting the South Central School on Saturday with members of the Board of Education, Alderman Stratton at last night's Council meeting moved that the Board's request for $15,000 to cover extensive alterations be granted. Alderman Weir seconded the motion which carried without further question. Alderman Stratton stated that the proposed changes to the building were interdependent. To excavate the basement, one of the primary improvements, it was necessary to raise the floor in that section and this entailed other work. The furnaces were out of condition, and to improve the ventilation it was necessary to put in new plumbing. The alterations dovetailed, Alderman Stratton explained, and one necessitated the others to secure a satisfactory school.

Withdrew Application.

Police Sergeant Kidd wrote the Council that he wished to withdraw his application for the Sanitary Inspectorship because he did not wish to be considered for the position when a returned soldier was an applicant.

Booth on Market for 12th.

Mrs. Wm. Watt, president, and Mrs. W. J. Byers, secretary, of the Ladies' Aid of Knox Church, applied for permission to conduct a refreshment booth on the Market Square on July 12th. Referred to Property Committee.

Wants Street Cleaning Contract.

W. H. Hamilton, president of the Dominion Dustless Sweepers Ltd., asked the Council for the contract of cleaning the paved streets of the city. With its motor pavement sweeper the company claims it can clean the paved streets more satisfactorily than it is now done. This will eliminate the frequent water and thus prolong the life of the pavement. Referred to Board of Works.

Appreciate Faster Train.

Mayor Duffus reminded the Council of the improved passenger service between Peterborough and Toronto recently renewed by the C.P.R.

Alderman Stratton moved, seconded by Alderman Dobbin, that the clerk convey to the C.P.R. officials the city's appreciation for the faster train provided for the local service.

Wants a Sewer.

M. A. Turner, Dublin street, petitioned for a sewer on that street from Aylmer to G.T.R. Referred to Board of Works

Re. Filling Space Between Rails.

City Engineer Parsons regarding the filling in of the G.T.R. on Bethune street, between their rails reported that he could not find that the city could ask the company to either plank or gravel the space between the rails so that it would be level with top of the rails.

Water Over Simcoe St. Walk.

Regarding water in the lane on the east side of the King George Hotel, Simcoe street, Mr. Parsons reported that after every rainfall the water rushes down this lane and over the sidewalk on to Simcoe street. A catch basin costing from $15 to $20 could be put in the lane back of the sidewalk, but the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., and Bradburn Estate would have to be first consulted. Board of Works.

Sewer Service Cost $55.

Regarding the request of Mr. W. Fleming, 913 Water street, for a sewer Alderman Duncan moved, seconded by Alderman McIntyre, that this be referred to the City Engineer and Alderman McIntyre to interview Mr. Fleming and report to the Board of Works, which was given power to act. Mr. Parsons reported that to provide a sewer service to this dwelling it would have to be constructed in a narrow strip between the property line and the sidewalk on the west side of Water street northerly from Anson street, at an estimated cost of $55.00.

Gospel Hall Meetings.

Mr. C. W. Mulligan's annual request to hold religious metings in Central Park on Sunday nights was granted on motion of Alderman Duncan, seconded by Alderman Stratton.

Another Prospective Booth.

Mr. Jas. Middleton applied for permission to erect a refreshment booth on Central Park, July 12th, and was informed he would have to apply to the committee in charge of the celebration. He said he wasn't particular about having it on the Park, but would be satisfied to locate near it. No booths are allowed on the streets, and if he opens one on private property he has to secure the regular license from the city.

Poultry Men Heard From.

Mr. Jos. Kelly, Mr. Stenson, and other members of the Poultry Association asked the Council for information regarding the restrictions imposed on henneries by the recent by-law. It required them to be 25 feet removed from any place where food was prepared, etc. They claimed that this would be a severe blow to the raisers of fancy fowl, all of whom kept their poultry yards in sanitary condition.

Alderman Duncan stated that the by-law provided that in such cases the Sanitary Inspector was empowered to grant a permit when applied for if he was satisfied the poultry coops were not a menace to health.

Mayor Duffus contended that this was not provided, and in order that the Poultry Association men might be safeguarded it was decided to amend the by-law giving the Board of Health control of such exceptional cases.

Social Service and Evangelism.

Rev. T. H. P. Anderson presented the report of the Committe on Social Service and Evangelism, which first expressed profound gratitude to God for the victory won all along the line for the prohibition of the liquor traffic. The work of the Methodist Church in furthering the temperance cause was referred to. "We are not indifferent," the report continued to, "to that large measure of appreciation due the Premier of the Province. The Hon. Mr. Hearst for the noble and statesmanlike stand taken by him and his government."

Tribute was also paid to Mr. N. W. Rowell and his united following for their support.

"And we rejoice that this prohibition legislation was enacted with a Methodist as premier, and supported by a Methodist leader of the Opposition, and supported by both parties without a dissenting vote."

"We recognize the need of unabated watchfulness and zeal on the part of all temperance people, especially in securing the best possible enforcement of the Prohibition measure that it may not during the term of its probation become discredited by persistent violation."

The report requested that the Dominion Government be requested to advance in the Criminal Code the age of consent from fourteen to sixteen or eighteen years.

"Further we urge our ministers to counsel parents and guardians of our young women to earnestly advise their daughters and young friends to keep before them that standard of young womanhood which is destined to be the chief glory of our land."

Appreciation was expressed of the work among the youth of Mr. W. L. Clarke of Leamington, and of the similar activities among girls of Miss Beatrice Brigden. Pastors were urged not to desist their efforts to obtain pledged abstainers from liquor, tobacco and profanity. The "harmful cigarette" was particularly selected for attack.

General Hughes' efforts for a dry canteen were recognized by the Committee.

The following nominations were adopted:

General Board—Rev. T. H. H. Anderson, Smithfield; Mr. A. H. Mcmasters, Trenton.

Executive of Dominion Alliance—Rev. J. N. Clarry.

District Secretaries:
Belleville—Rev. J. E. Robson.
Napanee—Rev. E. Farnsworth.
Picton—Rev. W. J. Wood.
Brighton—Rev. T. H. P. Anderson.

Cannington—Rev. A. L. Brown.
Lindsay—Rev. J. R. Butler.
Peterborough—Rev. Wm Higgs.
Campbellford—Rev. Isaac Snell.
Madoc—Rev. R. L. Richards.

State of the Work.

The Committee on the State of the Work, Rev. Wesley Elliott, chairman, and Rev. R. T. Richards, secretary, rejoiced that the church had made progress during the year; that the membership had increased by 164; that in spite of numerous calls for money for patriotic purposes the finances of the church are in good condition. There was a marked increase in missionary giving and in nearly every other department there has been an increase.

It was deplored that in many and on an increasing number of the charges, especially the rural circuits, there are many appointments where there are no week-night services. "We heartily endorse the recommendation of the Laymen's Association concerning the attendance at the mid-week service, and we hope that the laymen in attendance at conference will heartily support, by precept and example, attendance at the mid-week service. As a committee we recommend that at every appointment an honest effort be made to institute and carry on a mid-week service, either a prayer service, or an Epworth League or some combination of both that will serve to stimulate and intensify the spiritual life of the community. We recognize and appreciate the valuable work of our Sunday schools, but would suggest that attendance at Sunday school should not take precedence over attendance at public worship, and as a committee we would recommend that every pastor urge the heads of families to see the importance and value of the ordinance of public worship for each and every member of the family, and that the family pew be used as the best means for accomplishing this purpose.

We would recommend that during the coming year that on every charge some special evangelistic effort be made either the "win-one" campaign, decision day in the Sunday school, or regular Evangelistic services.

Superannuation Fund.

The report of the Superannuation Committee presented by Rev. R. Bamforth, treasurer, was as follows:

Circuit amounts	$11,428.00
Personal amounts	2,833.19
Total	$14,261.19

General Hughes' Reply.

General Sam Hughes replied to the Conference's tribute as follows:

Ottawa, June 5.

Rev. Marcus E. Sexsmith, President Bay of Quinte Conference, George St. Church, Peterborough:

Please accept my sincere thanks for your very hearty endorsation in the resolution recently passed by Conference on the 31st ult., and conveyed to me by Major Williams on behalf of the troops both in Canada and Overseas, the same is very highly appreciated by me.

SAM HUGHES.

Epworth League Report.

The statistics of our Young Peoples' Societies reveal some increases in the membership and especially in an increasing of of nine Junior Leagues and of 200 in their membership.

Recommendations — That special emphasis be laid upon the Christian Endeavour Department with wise use of the week of Bible study and evangelism. (2) That we make a strong effort to secure an increase of 10 per cent. in our missionary givings. (3) That we encourage in every way the facing by every young man of the question of his personal relation to the needs of his country and the Empire to-day, and to encourage the recruit of every eligible man in some form of Empire service. (4) That we loyally support our Conference Summer School at Albert College.

(5) That, as life grows by sacrifice, we may whole-heartedly do our best to follow the larger vision the Kingdom of God presents, and grow in greater likeness to the King of Kings.

Sabbath Observance Committee.

Your Committee notes with regret the increasing tendency to convert the Lord's Day into a day of recreation and pleasure; resulting in a laxity in the matter of church attendance that cannot fail to bring disastrous results to the moral and spiritual life of our people.

We also commend the hearty support of the Lord's Day Alliance to our people.

LETTER FROM ALBERTA

A Rainy Season so Far—With Sunshine the Crops Promise to be Large— New Elevators Going Up.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

Youngstown, Alta., June 1, '16.

There has been heaps of rain lately, and as the wheat is all in, all that is needed is lots of sunshine and everything will be fine. Another bumper crop will set this country right on its feet. The rain has made the prairie green, and the wheat is coming up, so that everything looks lovely.

There is a new elevator going up here, which makes five, and two more to go up before fall, so this looks like a good little town for the next three or four years.

Building is going ahead all the time and the number of houses, shacks and granaries going up is marvelous. If some of your people landed in here or any other of these new prairie towns I am afraid you would be disgusted particularly with me, when I am contented in this little office after such a nice one as I had in Peterborough.

LAWN BOWLING

The general meeting of the club last night was largely attended and evidenced great enthusiasm.

The committee to appoint skips was appointed. The skips will be selected next Monday. The rinks will be made up the same night and the regular work of the season will begin.

The trophies have arrived and are on exhibition at Mr. Fitzgerald's office.

GOLF.

A bridge and tea will be held at the Club House Saturday, June 10th. Will the members who intend being present kindly notify the house committee, Mrs. Goodwill, or Mrs. Roy. Tables for bridge can be reserved. Bridge and tea 50c. Afternoon tea 25c.

Two Men Shot In Coney Island Row

RESTAURANT PROPRIETOR STABBED AS CUSTOMERS FIGHT DURING CELEBRATION.

NEW YORK, June 6.—A fusilade of shots fired two blocks off Surf Ave., Coney Island, about ten o'clock last night caused intense excitement among scores of persons. When the reserves from the Coney Island station entered the Vesuvio restaurant at No. 176 West Sixtieth street, Coney Island, from whence the sounds came, they found two men had been shot and another badly cut.

The two men shot are Louis Feare, thirty-two years old, longshoreman, No. 176 Hester street, shot in the breast four times, and Vincenzio Cuimollillo, twenty-six, a machinist, of No. 2,709 West Fifteenth street, Coney Island. Both are in a serious condition.

John Maresco, owner of the restaurant, said that Feare and five other men left an automobile and entered the restaurant. They talked, he said, about a young girl's first communion and said that they were celebrating it. Soon they began an argument with Cuimollillo, who, with another man, was sitting at a table. Then the shooting began. Maresco was stabbed.

The police said there had been trouble between certain foreigners in Manhattan and those of the same nationality in Coney Island and that they believed the shooting was the result of that feud.

Two Slayers Die In Electric Chair

Sing Sing, N. Y., June 6.—With his broken hearted mother keeping vigil outside, Roy Chamberlain, 25 years old of Wellsville, N.Y., was put to death in Sing Sing's electric chair along with Giovanni Supe, 35 years old, of Moneola, L.I.

Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, the convicted poisoner, who had been in the death house only 18 hours, was the only inmate who slept through the night.

Chamblain's mother, Mrs. C. A. Hensing, lingered about the warden's outer office and lawn all night, waiting to hear that all was over and to claim his body. He was convicted of shooting to death his uncle, Henry Magee, when Magee interfered in a quarrel between his daughter and Champlain. As he came through the corridor chanting prayers after the Rev. Father William Cashin, he faltered to call back, "Good bye, Frank." Frank Ferrar was one of the "gunmen," who killed Barnet Baff. Champlain received four shocks upon signal from Dr. A. O. Squire.

Then Supe was led out. He declined spiritual consolation at the last minute so the priest did not walk with him. He walked rapidly and sat down quickly to permit the guards to strap him into the chair. Three shocks were sufficient to take his life for the murder of Frederick Battiolle, in a quarrel in Westbury, L.I., a year ago.

LORD DERBY MENTIONED AS KITCHENER'S SUCCESSOR

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, June 6.—Already there is much discussion as to who will succeed Kitchener as Secretary for War. If it goes to a civilian it is generally thought that Lord Derby will get it. If a soldier is made secretary, the favourite for the position in public opinion is Sir Wm. Robertson, at present Chief of Staff. He would, of course, have to be elevated to the Peerage or elected to the Commons to hold the post.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. JOHN M'INTOSH

Wife of Mr. John McIntosh, Reeve of North Monaghan---Funeral To-morrow

The death took place Monday evening, June 5th, 1916, of Jane Eliza McFaul, beloved wife of Mr. John McIntosh, Reeve of North Monaghan. The deceased, who apparently was in the best of health, was taken suddenly ill a week ago Sunday, and on Wednesday of last week was removed to Nicholls hospital where she died from heart trouble. She was born in Mount Pleasant, Cavan sixty-three years ago, and was married thirty-five years ago last January to Mr. McIntosh, who survives together with one daughter, Mrs Lillico, North Monaghan, and two sons, Gordon and John, both at home.

The late Mrs. McIntosh was a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church at Springville. She was an estimable woman and much beloved by those who were fortunate to have her acquaintanceship.

The funeral will take place Thursday, June 8th, at 2 o'clock, p.m., from the family residence, Lot 2, Concession II, North Monaghan, to Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

Absorption Process Makes Faces Young

Success has at last come to scientists who for years have sought some method of removing the outer veil of facial skin in cases of unsightly complexions, which would be both painless and harmless. The new process is so simple, so inexpensive, the wonder is no one had discovered it long ago. It has been amply demonstrated that common mercolized wax (sold by druggists in ounce packages) entirely removes, by gentle absorption, the withered, lifeless, surface skin, showing the youthful, roselike skin beneath. The wax is applied at night like cold cream, and washed off in the morning. The absorption also cleanses clogged pores, increasing the skin's breathing capacity and preserving tone, color and nautural beauty of the new skin.

A simple and harmless wrinkle-remover which has also proved quite successful can easily be made at home in a jiffy. All one need do is to dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel and bathe the face in the solution once a day for a while. After the very first application the finer lines disappear and the deeper ones soon follow.

FACE DEATH UNDER TRAIN.

Station Agent's Vigilance Prevents Twelve Lads From Being Killed on Handcar Ride.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Twelve small boys who took a ride on a handcar on the Lackawanna Railroad, had a narrow escape from death. They found the hand car on a siding and started for a ride.

Frank M. Barr, agent there, saw them and knew that an express train was due to pass on the rails they were using. He telegraphed to a towerman near by, who turned the switch and sent it on to a side track just before the express whizzed by. The handcar overturned and several of the boys were slightly injured.

A Stimulus To Recruiting

This and a Public Demand For the Internment of All Enemy Aliens Regardless of Age, Sex or Naturalization Are Results of Earl Kitchener's Death

A SUCCESSOR

LONDON, June 7.—A marked stimulus to recruiting to-day, the last day under the voluntary group system, and a general demand for the internment of all enemy aliens in Great Britain, regardless of age, sex or naturalization, are the immediate resultants of the death of Lord Kitchener.

There is a possibility of a political struggle in the background concerning the appointment of Kitchener's successor.

Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, is one civilian who has been spoken of for the place, but Robertson is the popular choice. The demand for the internment of all aliens grows out of the fact that the belief is almost Britain wide that the Germans knew exactly of the movements of Lord Kitchener.

The Morning Post says: "Circumstances point at espionage or treachery, and the country will suspect this the more owing to the singular fee freedom still allowed to enemy subjects of Great Britain."

The Northcliffe group of papers ask that the internment of aliens of belligerent origin take place at once.

The Morning Post urges Lord Milner as Kitchener's logical successor, and holds that the appointment of Lloyd George would be a mistake.

Italians Report Austrians Repulsed at Every Point

Despatches Received in Washington From Unofficial Sources in Rome Tell of Gains by Italy on the Entire Adige-Brenta Front

ROME, June 7.—That the strong resistance of the Italian troops has checked the Austrian centre drive, as well as the drives on the two wings, is reported in cabled despatches received here.

These despatches come from unofficial sources at Rome, but their accuracy is not questioned.

According to this information, the Italian General Staff is most optimistic concerning the outcome of the action, which is still in process of development. The situation is thus described in one despatch from a highly responsible source:—

Huge Austrian forces, with numerous artillery and machine guns, which for several days have been attacking the Pasubio-Monte Cangio front in an endeavour to reach the Fugazze road and open a way into the Astico plain, have been repulsed everywhere with heavy losses. North of Asiago the Austrians have not only been unable to advance during the last few days, but in some sectors have been compelled to submit to a successful counter offensive.

"As a whole, notwithstanding the fact that the Austrian action is still in full development over the entire Adige-Brenta front, the situation is constantly and steadily improving, so much so that the outcome of the great struggle now in course may be looked for with well founded confidence."

Military observers here attach much significance to these reports. It is recalled that official despatches from Rome have told of the complete checking of the Austrian drives on the wings. It is believed the later successes reported indicate that the Italians have the whole offensive movement of their enemies in complete check.

GYPSIES KIDNAP TWO BOYS AT PLAY

They Seize Victims in Lighted Pittsburg Street and Escape in Automobile.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 6.—Kidnapped by gypsies in East Ohio street, on the north side, in the glare of several arc lights to-night, Joseph Sherwitz, eight years old, and John Shields, nine, were placed in an automobile and carried off before pedestrians attracted by the boys' cries, could reach the abductors.

A few minutes later a girl of fifteen ran into Central police station and breathlessly told how the boys, one of them her brother, had been kidnapped.

The abductors drove at high speed and crossed the Ohio river bridge to the west end. It is believed the automobile was headed for McKees Rocks. The police ascertained that a band of gypsies were camping near McKees Rocks, and an automobile load of police was detailed to the camp. A search was made of the camp and all wagons, but no trace of the two boys was found.

HAVE BEEN RE-INFORCED

LONDON, June 6.—"We have been pounded out of the trenches we recaptured, but the Germans are not able to hold them. Our artillery is now giving the Huns tit for tat and one little gleam we are getting out of this terrific fighting is that things are just as uncomfortable behind the German lines as ours. The Canadian losses have been tremendous, but reinforcing drafts have already arrived, fresh and eager. We will get back at them somehow." That is what a division officer, who returned wounded to-day to be married, says.

WHERE IS MERCER?

General Mercer, according to latest reports, was in the thickest of the fighting like an old warrior. At one time he was leading the Canadians to a counter-attack when the regiment was thinned out terribly and forced back. It was found the General was missing. The Canadians rallied for another attack. A handful held back the Huns while others searched among the wounded.

GERMANS LET UP.

There was a lull last night as far as infantry attacks were concerned, but the Huns' big guns have never stopped. Neither have ours. There is practically an area of a square mile pitted with shell holes and seared with mine craters.

A wounded officer says that in this hinterland of death there are easily three thousand corpses, many of them Canadians, but the majority are Huns. It has been easily five to one of toll in our favour in a hand-to-hand. Possibly there are some alive, yet, stumbling blindly through the screen of German scrapnel.

Splendid Canadian battalions from Eastern Ontario, Quebec, Winnipeg, Calgary, the Scottish from Montreal, Vancouver, and Toronto have rushed these small craters, got to gripe with the Huns, killed all who have not fled into barrage. Canadian batteries have been keeping up the last three days some of the most terrible personal combats, rivalling those of French fighters at Verdun.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"No, I guess he won't," agreed the judge, "and it serves him right. He'll probably have to sell his schooner and start life over again somewhere else. I hope that he starts honestly this time. Then you won't take any action against him, Code?"

"Me? Oh, no!" said Schofield. "I have nothing against him now. Let him go. But, I'll tell you one thing squire—he had better be smuggled away to-night quietly, because if the crowd gets hold of him, it might not be good for his health."

The squire agreed and Code went back to his work. Late that afternoon Pete Ellinwood swung the last basket of the catch to the scales and Code completed his tally.

"Sixteen hundred and seventy quintal," he announced, "and forty-three pounds. At a hundred pounds a quintal that makes 167,078 pounds, and at three cents a pound totals to $5012 34. Not bad for a two months' cruise, but my soul and body, Bill Boughton, how the fish did run!"

"It's a good catch, Code, and fine fish," answered Boughton, who had been writing. "How will you have the money, in a lump or individual checks?"

"Separate checks." Boughton went back to his glass surrounded desk to write them.

Code, being the sole owner of the Charming Lass, took two thousand dollars as his share, and the rest was divided almost equally among the other nine men, a trifle extra going to Pete Ellinwood for his services as mate.

"It was a toppin' haul," declared Pete jovially, slapping his well-filled pocket after a visit to the bank. "an' the rest of them poor devils won't get over two and a half a pound—some of 'em only two, when there's lots of fish. Half a cent a pound is a pretty good bonus."

Code had dinner with his mother that night and appeared for it carefully dressed. What was his surprise to see his mother in her one silk dress.

"I'm going up to Mallaby House," he said in answer to her inquiring look. "But you! What's all this gaiety, mother?"

"I am going to hear an account of how you behaved yourself on the voyage, Code," she said, attempting severity.

"By an eye witness?" Visions of Ellinwood, painfully arrayed, danced in his head.

"Yes."

"Um-m. Well, I won't be home until late, then, because it's a long story."

"You rascal!" said his mother, and kissed him.

On the way to Mallaby House (it was up the old familiar path that he had raced down so recklessly the night of the great fire) he thought over the thing that his eyes had seen for an instant the night before in the jail.

Elsa loved him, he knew now, and she had always loved him. He cursed himself for a stupid fool that it had taken him so long to find out, but he was relieved to know at last upon what footing to meet her. She was no longer a baffling and alluring creature of a hundred chameleon moods, she was a lonely girl.

Martin, who had been his body servant while aboard the mystery schooner, opened the door, and bowed with decided pleasure at seeing his temporary master. He ventured congratulations that Schofield was free of the law's shadow.

"Mrs. Mallaby is upstairs, sir," he said, taking Code's hat. "Just step into the drawing room, sir, and I'll call her."

It was a sample of Elsa's taste that she illuminated all her rooms with the soft flame of candles — the mellow light of lamps. The mahogany furniture, much of it very old and historic among the island families, gleamed in the warm lights. There were built-in shelves of books against one wall, splendid engravings, etchings, and a few colored prints of the daughters of Louis XV.

Presently came down the broad staircase. Her hair was parted simply in the middle and done in two wheels, one over each pink ear. Her dress was a plain one of China silk with a square Dutch neck. It fitted her splendid figure beautifully.

Never had she appeared to Code so fresh and simple. The great lady was gone, the keen advocate had disappeared, the austere arbiter of Freskirk Head's destinies was no more. She seemed a girl. He arose and took her hand awkwardly.

"I am glad that you came so soon," she said "but aren't you neglecting other people? I'm sure there must be friends who would like to see you."

"Perhaps so, but this time they must wait until I have paid my respects to you. As far as actions go you are the only friend I have."

"You are getting quite adept at turning a phrase," she said, smiling.

"Not as adept as you in turning heaven and earth to liberate an innocent man."

"I have no answer to that," she replied. "But, seriously, Code, I hope you didn't come up to thank me again to-night. Please don't. It embarrasses me. We know each other well enough, I think, to do little things without the endless social prating that should accompany them."

"You've been a dear!" he cried, and and took one of her hands in his. She did not move. "Elsa, I want you for my wife!"

"What can I say?" she began in a low voice. 'You are noble and good, Code, and I know what has actuated you to say this to me. Some woman would be resentful at your offer, but I am not. A week ago, even yesterday, I should have accepted it gladly and humbly, but to-day—No."

"Since last night I have thought, and somehow things have come clearer to me. I have tried to do too much. I have always loved you, Code, but. I can see now that you were not meant for me. I tried to win you because of that love, not considering you or others—only myself. And I defeated my own end. I overshot the mark."

"I don't understand," said Code.

"Perhaps not, but I will tell you. In the first place I deliberately planned so that Nat Burns and Nellie could never be married. I know now that they have separated for good. I hated Burns for his part in my sister's life, and I resolved to wreck his happiness if his engagement to Nellie was happiness. So now she is free and you can have her, I think, for the asking."

"But," cried Schofield in protest, "I have never said——"

"You did not need to say that you loved some one," she told him with a faint smile. "That night at dinner on the schooner with me proved it. I have talked to your mother since I came home, and she told me what Nat's engagement meant to you, so that I know that Nellie is the girl you have always loved. Isn't it so?"

"Yes," he replied gently.

"Now is it plain to you how I have undone my own plans? Two things i desired more than anything else on earth, you, and Burns's ruin. I ruined Burns and paved the way for the loss of you, for, unscrupulous as I am in some things, I could never marry you when Nellie was free and you loved her. I have wanted happiness so hard, Code, that when I see others who have it within their grasp, I cannot stand in their way.

"But I don't mind now, I really don't. That was all in the past, and it's over now. If you want to make me happy, be happy yourself. I see that there are forces that guide our lives that must have their will whatever our own private plans may be, and having learned that lesson, I feel that perhaps now I shall be happier, somehow, than never would have been if my own selfishness had triumphed."

Code lifted her hand to his lips and kissed it.

"What a splendid woman you are! I know that happiness and joy will come to you. One who has done what you have done cannot fail to realize it. This hour will always be a very sweet one in my memory, and I shall never forget it."

"Nor I," she said softly, "for, through you I have begun to find myself."

HOMELESS GIRL ASKS FOR ARREST

NEW YORK, June 6.—Miss Bertha Bronn had walked the streets so many days and nights and gone without so many meals that last night her slumber in a clean bed at the Florence Crittenden Mission House was not to be disturbed by enquirers who wished to inquire about the good fortune that had come to her. It was explained that she had become so exhausted that she required all the rest she could get before beginning work to-day in a factory at wages which will be more than enough to support her.

The appearance of Miss Brown won for her immediate sympathy and aid at the home. In addition to being unusually attractive, her clothes, while of inexpensive material, were neat and clean and showed much care. Her father died when she was a little girl. She is eighteen now. Her mother died recently and it required all the money she had saved as a weaver in a ribbon factory to pay for the funeral and in the absence from the factory she was dismissed.

When Miss Bronn appealed to the police at the Morrisania station, in the Bronx, late Saturday night she had been walking the streets, homeless, for two days and two nights and had no food. As the station cares only for prisoners she asked to be locked up on a charge of vagrancy, as she was so tired she had to rest. That was done, and yesterday a Magistrate sent her to the Florence Crittenden Mission Home, and interested persons found work for her.

SUFFERED FROM BACKACHE RHEUMATISM, DROPSY.

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish to tell you of a recent experience I had when suffering from backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, and congestion of the kidneys. I tried a new medicine called "Anuric," which has recently been discovered by Dr. Pierce, of whose medicines and Surgical Institution in Buffalo, N. Y., you have no doubt heard for years. This medicine acted upon me in a wonderful manner. I never have taken any medicine so helpful in such quick time. I do wish anyone in need of such a remedy would give it a trial.

(Signed) G. H. HERR.

NOTE: Folks in town and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS' HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N. Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medical Discovery" which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

WOMAN ROBBED OF $4,000 GEMS

POLICE FAIL TO MAKE PUBLIC HOLD-UP IN HOME OF A. H. GILLESPIE ON THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

New York, June 5.—One of the many recent burglaries in Brooklyn, which the police have failed to make public was that in the apartment of A. H. Gillespie, the sales manager for the Chiett-Peabody Company, at No. 1096 Ocean avenue, Flatbush, when jewels valued at $4,000 were obtained.

Mrs. Gillespie, who was in the apartment alone on Thursday afternoon, was lying down in a darkened bedroom when she heard a noise, and through an open door she saw a man climb from the dumb waiter opening and step into the kitchen. He saw him search the dining room before he entered her room. When he saw her he presented a pistol and threatened to shoot her if she made a noise.

Despite his threat Mrs. Gillespie tried to get a police whistle but he stopped her with the pistol pressed against her body. Then he took from her fingers two diamond rings, valued at $500, and compelled her to reveal the place where her other jewelry was kept.

After he had taken all of it the burglar went back to the dumb waiter and disappeared down the shaft. Mrs. Gillespie was unable to communicate with police headquarters by telephone and ran to a neighbor's apartment, where she related what had happened and then fainted.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A STRANGE CASE OF RAISING THE DEAD.

[Copyright, 1 \ by American Press Association.]

There is a vacant lot 100 feet front by 200 feet deep in the upper part of New York about which nearly a century ago residences were springing up. One day in 18— it was announced that this lot had been bought by a man who intended to use it for a livery stable. The proximity of such property being undesirable, residents of the neighborhood clubbed together and bought the property. Two gentlemen invested $1,000 each, forming a trust, every investor having the right to nominate a person to inherit his interest. The property was to be kept intact till but one of these nominees remained alive. This person was to then become its owner. The nominees were all under one year of age and selected from families remarkable for longevity.

When ninety years had passed but two nominees were living, Gustavus Clough Wyatt and Lydia Ward Selby. Mr. Wyatt was ninety-one years of age, Mrs. Selby ninety-two and a half. Both were in fairly good health considering their advanced age. Mr. Wyatt had willed the property in case he should live to secure it to his son, Walter Lambert, aged sixty-five. Miss Selby's interest was to go to her great-grandniece, Florence Dudley, aged fourteen.

Six years later both Mr. Wyatt and Mrs. Selby had experienced a great change. In each there remained but the flicker of the last drops of life's burning oil. The property which one or the other would own was worth $1,000,000. Lambert, who would inherit if his father should be the survivor, was an old curmudgeon whom everybody hated. Florence Dudley was a lovely girl with no means whatever and engaged to Travers Trask, a young medical man who proposed to make surgery his specialty.

Since the inheritance of a million was dependent upon the lives of these two aged people they were kept like plants in a conservatory. The slightest draft of air coming near either one of them was considered of more importance than a cyclone elsewhere. Both lived on toast water, and neither was permitted to go out of doors. Mr. Wyatt was under the constant care of Dr. Myrtlewood, a young man whose whole time was engaged for the purpose by Lambert. Mrs. Selby was under the care of Dr. Trask, who visited her every day.

The autumn of 19— was balmy up to the 13th of November, when a blizzard came down that carried off most of those whose lives hung in the balance. Old Mr. Wyatt and old Mrs. Selby both lay dying. Mr. Lambert had spies in the Selby home, and Dr. Trask, who had his fiancee's interests in charge, managed to keep himself fairly posted as to the condition of old Wyatt. Each principal was approaching the end of the race, and it seemed probable that the winner might survive by only a few hours. Dr. Myrtlewood was keeping old Wyatt up by stimulants, and Dr. Trask was doing the same by Mrs. Selby. Sympathy was entirely with Miss Dudley, every one hoping that she would inherit.

At 9 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 14, while the storm was still raging, Dr. Trask saw that his patient was sinking. Word came that Mr. Wyatt could live but a few hours. An hour after this Mrs. Selby, despite the effect of the most powerful stimulants, passed away. Lambert was still alive. Within ten minutes after Mrs. Selby's death the fact was reported to Dr. Myrtlewood, who gave over attempting to longer keep his patient alive, and he died half an hour later.

Dr. Trask may be said to be on the ascending line of his profession. While a student he had witnessed an experiment which has startled the world. He resolved to repeat it. Turning every one out of the room where Mrs. Selby had died except his intimate friend, Dr. Semester, a graduate of a prominent German school of medicine, whom he retained for an assistant, he made an incision over the woman's heart. He then inserted his hand and clasped the organ, squeezing it gently and massaging it. This process he kept up for some fifteen minutes, when a faint tinge of color appeared in the patient's cheeks. Dr. Semester placed a mirror under the woman's nostrils and a slight moisture appeared on the glass. The massaging continued some ten minutes longer, when the patient opened her eyes.

Hastily covering the body to the chin Dr. Trask summoned every one in the house and said to them:

"I wish you to witness that on this 14th day of November at 8:45 p. m. Mrs. Selby lives."

At that moment the patient sighed and said in a feeble voice, "I feel so queer."

"Do you hear that?" said the doctor. "She not only lives, but speaks. Leave the room. Everything depends upon keeping her composed."

No one knew what was passing in the sickroom till 6 o'clock, when the two physicians emerged and announced that Mrs. Selby was dead.

There was a lawsuit over the inheritance of the property in question, but it was proved on the trial that Mrs. Selby survived Mr. Wyatt by several hours, so at his death she was the owner of the vacant lot. This made good her will leaving the property to her great-grandniece, to whom it was turned over by due process of law.

Dr. and Mrs. Trask are about to be married, but are putting off the wedding till after the 14th of November. As to the hour of the demise scientific men have not yet given a decision.

DRIVEN TO SUICIDE BY BUSINESS WORRY

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., June 6.—John Newland, president of the Hall-Borchert Dress Form Company of No. 30 West Thirty-second St., Manhattan, who lived at No. 15 North Broadway, this city, committed suicide Thursday or Friday. He shot himself in the right temple, and his body was found in Fox Meadow, a part of Miss Emily O. Butler's estate, in Scarsdale this afternoon. The report of his disappearance had caused a stir here.

That Mr. Newland's mind was giving way under business worries has been known for three months, and three weeks ago he returned from Florida, where his family and friends had induced him to go, hoping that a change would benefit him. His close friends now say that it was known he had a revolver when he left home Thursday, and when he did not return Thursday night it was feared that he had killed himself.

To-day Frederick C. McLaughlin of the law firm of McLaughlin, Russell Cox & Sprague, of No. 165 Broadway, attorneys for Mr. Newland, who had been going over his affairs for several weeks, learned that David L. Williams, a New York business man, living here had seen Mr. Newland leave a morning train at Grand Central Station Thursday. That was the last that was heard of him until R. C. Culver, of Scarsdale, walking through Fox Meadow this afternoon came upon the body. That he committed suicide was apparent, since the revolver was tightly clutched in his hand.

Mr. Newland leaves his wife and four children, the oldest eighteen years and the youngest three years.

TWO HELD ON DRUG CHARGE.

Chauffeur and Bellboy Accused of Having Made Distribution to Women.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Arrested late Saturday night when they stopped their automobile at Atlantic and Grand avenues, Brooklyn, and, according to detectives, distributed packages of drugs to women, Edward Crowe, twenty years old, a bellboy, of No. 375 Classon avenue, and Joseph Slyman, twenty-three years old, chauffeur, of No. 87 Bergen street, were locked up in the Grand avenue station. They are accused of having drugs in their possession.

Inspector Samuel McElroy, of the Eleventh inspection district, had received letters in which the writers complained that drugs were being sold to young women by men who used an automobile in travelling about the neighbourhood.

SHOOTS HIS WIFE AFTER A QUARREL; PLEADS INSANITY

NEW YORK, June 6.—Frank H. Hodges, adjuster for the Fidelity and Casualty company of America, with offices in New York, shot and probably fatally wounded his wife, Mrs. Emma Reeves Hodges, in their home, in Branch avenue, Red Bank, N.J., yesterday afternoon. She is his third wife and he is her second husband, having been named as correspondent in her first husband's divorce action.

With her daughter Dorothy, nine years old, they had been for an automobile ride yesterday morning and returned to the home at one in the afternoon. They had quarrelled in the automobile.

Dorothy was playing "jacks" on the front veranda while waiting for dinner to be served, when she heard three shots upstairs. A minute later Hodges hurried down stairs, and was leaving the house when Dorothy, noting his confusion asked him:—

"Have you shot my mother?"

"Yes, I have done it," she said he replied. Then he hurried across the avenue to the home of Fred Wagner where he related what he had done and asked that the police be notified.

FINDS MOTHER ON FLOOR.

Before Hodges was off the porch, however Dorothy was running upstairs and found her mother lying on the floor of her bedroom, a bullet hole in her left temple. The child's screams from windows soon had several neighbors in the house and Dr. H.W. Young was called. He had Mrs. Hodges who was unconscious sent to the Memorial Hospital at Long Branch, where it was said she could not live long.

In the Wagner home Hodges was not a welcome caller with his message that he had shot his wife, and he was told to go to the police himself. While neighbors were hurrying to his own home to administer to his wife, Hodges started from the Wagner house for the police station.

As soon as the police had confirmed what Hodges said when he surrendered, Assistant Prosecutor Elmer H. Geran and County Detectives Lawrence McCormick and John Smith hurried to the Hodges home. Later they arraigned Hodges before Justice of the Peace Harry C. Badeau in the latter's home, and he was committed to the county jail at Freehold on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

"I only meant to scare her," was the only statement Hodges would make. Before being sent to jail he consulted with Warren H. Smock, an attorney.

SAID TO HAVE BEEN JEALOUS.

It was said that Hodges had been jealous of his wife a long time. Recently, it is said, she had arranged to leave him and the county detectives found yesterday soon after the shooting, that her trunks were packed.

Hodges, who is forty-two years old, is known as a poultry fancier and exhibitor and for many years has been secretary of the Monmouth Poultry Club. He and his wife had taken many prizes at poultry shows.

His first wife died in an accident about ten years ago. His second wife, who was Miss Mattie Williams, obtained a divorce and married again. His present wife formerly was Miss Emily Reeves, of Asbury Park, N.J., She is about thirty-five years old. Her brother, Samuel Reeves is a prominent merchant of Asbury Park. Her first husband was Henry Hagerman, a resident of Red Bank, who obtained a divorce, mentioning Hodges in the action.

Soon afterward she and Hodges were married and went to live in his large home, where the shooting occurred yesterday. At that time he transfered all his real estate in Branch avenue, including other houses and a large poultry yard for breeding fancy stock, over to his wife. This property valued at more than $25,000 is now in his wife's name and recently he had consulted a lawyer in an effort to recover possession.

SOUGHT TO RECOVER PROPERTY

Hodges had told friends that his wife wanted to leave him, but refused to deed back to him the property he had given to her. It was said he had been advised that as he had turned the property over to her willingly there was no way for him to recover it if she was unwilling. This also was a source of trouble between the couple, their friends say.

A few hours after Hodges had reached the jail it was announced that his defence would be insanity. Chief of Police Harry Clayton, of Red Bank, said that Hodges had been smoking from forty to sixty cigarettes a day, that he was exceptionally nervous, and had worried about the loss of a large amount of money through speculation in war stocks.

POPE'S ONLY AIM TO END THE WAR

"HIS PEACE EFFORTS DIRECTED SOLELY TO STOP SUICIDE OF EUROPE," SAYS CARDINAL.

Rome, via Paris, June 5.—Cardinal Gasparrin, Papal Secretary of State in an interview to-day declared that the Pope was influenced in his peace efforts solely by a desire to stop the "suicide of Europe."

"The Holy Father," said the Cardinal, "in his most ardent desire for peace has no particular interest in view, despite what newspapers say that are enemies of the Papacy, state to the contrary. If peace is concluded through the friendly intervention of the President of the great American Republic or through His Catholic Majesty, the King of Spain, His Holiness will equally thank the Almighty that an end should at last have been put to the butchery which is the suicide of Europe."

Lightning Kills Numerous Cattle

Five Head of Cattle and Horse Killed at Forest

FOREST, June 6.—During a heavy electrical storm which passed over this section Friday morning, four fine young cattle belonging to Henry Hodgson, Lake Road, Bosanquet were killed in the field by lightning. They are valued at $80 per head, insured in the London Mutual.

Henry Krayne's barn, 11th concession, was struck by lightning, but did not burn. A valuable horse was killed. The rain fell heavily for a time, and lamps had to be resorted to for light near 8 o'clock.

DELAY TO FARMERS.

The heavy rain Saturday morning has given the farmers another set back. The ground has become so thoroughly soaked that good tilling in some places does not carry off the water. With untiled farms it is simply impossible to get on the land. Many farmers have no more than five or six acres sown. Thirty or forty acres yet unsown in the conditions existing on many farms. The ground is so soaked that only light showers retard seeding. If the weather becomes favourable, corn will yet be planted in large acreage, but oats will hardly mature, though some will be sown, to be used as feed. Hopes for good crops of potatoes and roots are yet ascertained, though on the whole the season has been most discouraging. A great deal of summer fallowing will likely be done. Fruit of all kinds promises an abundant crop. Fall wheat and grass are making rapid growth.

Back Was Lame and Ached; Could Do Very Little Work

Suffered Much From Kidney Disease for Years, But Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Doctors had tried to cure this man chards, Birchbank, B.C., writes: but failed to get at the cause of trouble probably because they relied on medicines which act on the kidneys only. The strong feature about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is their combined action on liver, kidneys and bowels. In many of these cases the disease is so complicated that ordinary kidney medicines fail to be of much benefit. Under such conditions Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills usually touch the spot and effect a cure.

Had they been only moderately successful Dr. Chase would never have selected them for world wide distribution. As it was the demand for these pills resulted naturally from their superior merit and there was nothing else to do but supply them in large quantities.

Mr. Simeon Shieloff, Birchbrook Or-

"For several years I suffered greatly from kidney disease. I was weak and could do very little work. My back was lame and ached and I suffered much from headaches. Tried doctors and obtained no relief. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended by a friend and after taking four boxes I think that I can say that I was cured for I feel as well as I ever did."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Harry Anderson, J.P., who writes;

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Simeon Shieloff and believe his statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MAP ILLUSTRATING BATTLE OF JUTLAND.—This greatest sea fight the world has ever seen took place about 80 miles west of the Denmark coast, between Horn's Reef and Little Fisher's Bank. Arrows show how the British fleet came, and how the German fleet came—and went. The German fleet was proceeding north when the British cruiser squadron coming from Scotland endeavoured to get behind it and cut it off. Despite heavy British losses the Germans turned tail and ran. They emerged from the North Sea end of the Kiel canal and returned whence they came. Map shows the Isle of Syit, a Zepp base, and the naval bases of Cuxhaven, Wilhelmshaven, and Heligoland.

MAY LOSE HOT WELLS.

EARTHQUAKES AFTER FLOW AND MIGHT SHIFT STREAM.

Citizens of Boise, Idaho, who for the past quarter of a century have taken special pride in their natural hot water for the heating of houses, public buildings and business blocks have just been made to realise that this unique treasure hangs on a slender thread.

Slight earthquakes tremors were felt in this vicinity recently, and investigation made since by experts in the interest of the water company lays bare the ever-present possibility of the total loss of the hot artesian flow or a tremendous increase as the result of the next tremor or shock.

Twenty years ago a well in Hull's Gulch, a few miles above Boise was spouting forth a lusty stream of water boiling hot. Later, when pumps were installed in the wells on the bench just outside the city limits to increase the supply of hot water for city consumption, this well in Hull's Gulch, a few miles away quit flowing altogether.

It remained thus dormant all these years until the earthquake shock was felt in the fall. Since then it has been spouting as of old.

Young Women Sold By Turks 50 Cents to $2

ARMENIAN CHRISTIAN GIRLS AUCTIONED FOR HAREMS AND REIGN OF TERROR PREVAILS.

AUBURN, N. Y. June 6.—The story of Christian girls of Armenia being sold at auction for a price ranging from fifty cents to $2 has been received here by Mr. Apkar N. Sagatelian, an Armenian student at Auburn Theological Seminary. Mr. Sagatelian's information comes direct from relatives in Armenia and is the first that has come to him for four months.

The letter says that young girls are being sold at auction by the Turks to any one who will pay the price, and states that the ultimate disposition of the girls usually is in a Turkish harem. It further says that a reign of terror is in vogue throughout all territory held by Turkish troops and that any Christian is liable to suffer immediate destruction. The letter in which the information was contained cost sixty cents for transportation from the war zone to this country.

Found Dead On Eve of Trial; Suicide Denied

26,000 PERSONS PUT MONEY IN THE EAST SIDE BANKS WHICH FAILED AFTER THE WAR BEGAN.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Max Kobre the failure of whose east side banks caused much rioting and who was to have been placed on trial to-day for wrecking them, was found dead in the basement of his home, at No. 115 West 122d Street, gas flowing from an open jet near him.

Despite the cumulative and circumstantial evidence indicating suicide Coroner Hellenstein and his physician, Dr. Edgar T. Ray, asserted that death was caused by arteric sclerosis and issued a death certificate ascribing that as the cause.

Assistant District Attorney Tompkins, who was to have prosecuted Kobre before a jury and Justice Shearn in the Supreme Court to-day issued a statement last night that "Kobre's death is the best thing that could have happened for the depositors in his banks," that through it they would be able to collect $565,000 in life insurance policies held among his assets.

"Kobre's three banks in crowded sections of the east side failed soon after the European war began, and for a time it seemed that the savings of twenty-six thousand depositors, amounting to nearly $5,000,000 had been swept away. In the subsequent hearings, investigations and meetings of depositors there was much rioting, in which the police had to interfere. On one occasion Kobre excitedly bared his breast and invited the depositors to shoot him crying that he had no money.

ESCAPED TRIAL LONG TIME.

Kobre and his partners were indicted in both New York and Brooklyn for accepting deposits when they knew the banks were insolvent. The New York indictments were found when Charles S. Whitman was District Attorney Kobre employed S. S. Koenig as his attorney. Trial on the indictments was delayed from time to time until Mr. Swann became District Attorney, and then he detailed Mr. Tompkins to prepare the indictments for trial. This required a large amount of work in finding witnesses and going over the mass of material in the case. A few days ago the District Attorney found that he was ready to proceed and the case was placed on the docket for trial this morning in the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Kobre said that about half-past three o'clock, yesterday morning, she missed her husband from his bed and went through the house seeking him. She found his body on the floor of a store room in the basement, the head near the open burner of a gas stove from which gas was escaping.

Members of his family assured the Coroner that Kobre had not slept well since his banks failed, that he suffered from heart disease and, frequently left his bed between half-past three and four o'clock in the morning to read newspapers.

Coroner Hellenstein was called and after obtaining statements of the family he and his physician viewed the body. No autopsy was performed but Dr. Ray after conferring with the Coroner said death was not caused by gas poisoning or asphyxiation but resulted from arteio-sclerosis.

COMPANIES MUST PAY

Mr. Tompkins is of the opinion that the life insurance companies cannot resist payment of the policies on Kobre's life, even if they are disposed to dispute the Coroner's finding that he did not commit suicide to avoid facing trial. These policies had been in force since 1913 and 1912 and those companies which issue policies with suicide clauses may only refuse to pay in such case when the suicide occurs within a year from the time the policy was issued. As all these policies had been in effect more than a year, Mr. Tompkins believes that the death of Kobre is worth $565,000 to the 26,000 depositors who lost money in his banks.

"Kobre's death is the best thing that could have happened for the depositors in his banks," reads the statement issued by Mr. Tompkins. "In 1912 and 1913 he took out about $600,000 worth of life insurance, upon which he subsequently borrowed about $35,000. The State Banking Department later gave permission to the Kobre Assets Corporation to continue payments of the premiums and now the remainder of the insurance will revert to the depositors."

Madman Mixes Poison in Salts

ONE PATIENT IS KILLED AND 11 OTHERS ARE MADE SERIOUSLY ILL IN PHILADELPHIA HOSPITAL.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 5.—A patient's act in breaking into the drug room of the city's building for the tuberoular insane here and mixing formalin, a virulent poison, with epsom salts, cost the life of one of the patients to-day and 11 others to whom the mixture had been given by the nurses were saved only by the use of every known preventative.

The man who died was a homeless, friendless lunatic, aged and decrepit who had been taken from a lodging house in the centre of the city several years ago. The others whose lives were saved were tubercular insane.

No one knew of the madman's act until the patients to whom the salts had been given became violently ill, and then as efforts were made to revive them an investigation was begun by Dr. J. Allen Jackson, chief resident physician.

It was found that David Friedman, escaped from the building in which he was being kept and crawled to the tuberculosis building. Procuring a ladder he gained access to the drug room and there prepared the mixture. He then returned to his own room.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S MIDDY DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

There is in a middy dress or middy blouse a touch of freedom that is seen and felt which no other type of dress can lay claim to, as every girl who has regretfully outgrown the middy will admit. In the illustration shown, No. 7,755, we have the ever welcome style that slips on over the head. In this design the blouse is all white, given a dash of color by the tie which is always a necessary style feature on this kind of garment; a handsome sailor collar may have braid trimming in harmony with the tie worn, although it is in good taste without the braid. You may have a collar of solid color contrasting goods if that is your choice, and if so finish the pocket that favors the left front with a piece across the top. A roll cuff on the short sleeve is appropriate; the pattern provides for long sleeves, gathered at the wrist to band cuffs if you like this style. The skirt is of separate material and attached to a waist that buttons down the back; there are seven plaits in each half to give sufficient wave to the fulness that is so popular.

The pattern of this middy dress may be had in sizes 4 to 14 years. To copy the 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Design in size 8 will require 1¾ yards 36 inch material for the blouse, for the underwaist ½ yard in the same width and for the skirt 2 yards.

You may obtain the pattern by sending

Many Women Suffer FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine, and a medicine for the kidneys only.

Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are manufactured solely for the purpose of relieving and curing the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WIDOWS

According to the census of 1910 there were 3,167,232 widows in the United States; 2,926,684 were between fifteen and sixty-four years of age; 702,000 were below age forty-five. Can you picture the struggle of the thousands thrown upon their own resources and fighting for an existance for themselves and their children? How many of the 2,465,3% above the age of forty-five are dependent upon relatives and the public for support? Among all these hundreds of thousands there is not one single inmate of a poor house, home for the aged, or friendless who was provided with a monthly income under a life insurance policy. What a splendid opportunity right now for husbands to protect widows of this land.

Any husband can do so by purchasing a Guaranteed Income policy from THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA. The Company guarantees payment to wife at your death of any sum you choose followed by a like amount on the same day of every month as long as she shall live.

Get the particulars of this valuable policy as it should be in every home.

HEAVY FIGHTING ON CANADIAN FRONT

Asquith Temporarily in Charge at War Office

POWERFUL GERMAN ATTACKS ON FORT VAUX WERE COMPLETELY STOPPED

Germans Retreated in Disorder Leaving Many Dead---Estimate of German Losses in Naval Battle is 6800 Killed, Wounded and Missing--Russian Offensive is Growing More Extensive---Nearly 30,000 Prisoners Taken.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Examiner Special:

PARIS, June 7.—The repulse of a powerful German attack on Fort Vaux on the Verdun line with heavy losses to the attackers is announced to-day. A violent bombardment of the Fort is still being carried on by the Germans.

The attack on Fort Vaux started at eight o'clock last night, and was promptly checked by the fire of the French machine guns.

The Germans retreated in disorder, abandoning many dead. At Hill 304 an artillery duel is in progress, and also at Caurette Wood. Two German patrols which tried to cross the River Aisne west of Soissons were dispersed.

LONDON, June 7.—The Copenhagen correspondent of the Daily Mail learns from Kiel that the first unofficial estimate of German losses in the naval battle of Jutland, gives the number killed at 800, of wounded at 1,400, and of missing at 4,400.

The Russians Have Taken Nearly 30,000 Prisoners

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 7.—The interest of the military critics of Europe is now centred on the armies of the Czar. The bear's offensive has now been in operation for a week, each day growing in length of line and in frequency of infantry rushes. According to an official announcement from Petrograd to-day the drive has already resulted in the capture of nearly 30,000 prisoners, together with cannon and small arms. The Czar has more than one million men massed along the line from the Pripet marshes to Pruth in the Bessarabian region. Critics believe the Austrian defenders are of but half that number.

Hard Fighting on the Canadian Front

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Wednesday, June 7.—Desperate fighting is in progress along the Canadian front, the Germans having attacked positions to the north and south of Hooge. The British official communication issued Tuesday says:

"There was very heavy fighting during the afternoon (Tuesday) east of Ypres. Shortly after mid-day the enemy commenced a heavy bombardment of our position about Hooge, and also some distance north, and at the same time bombarded to the south of Hooge and in the neighbourhood of the Ypres-Comines railway and the Ypres-Comines Canal. Late in the afternoon the enemy exploded a series of mines at various points on a 2,000-yard front north of Hooge. This was followed by unsuccessful infantry attacks between Hooge and the Ypres-Comines Canal.

"At Hooge and immediately north of Hooge the enemy penetrated our front trenches after the explosion of mines. Fighting continues in this area, but our general line is still intact.

"Attacks were also made further north, but did not succeed. On the remainder of the front the situation is comparatively quiet.

"North of Roclincourt we exploded a defensive mine, doing material damage to the enemy's galleries. Last night small bodies of our troops entered German trenches at three points near La Boisselle, Authuile and Hamel, respectively. At each place casualties were inflicted on the German garrison and their shelters were bombed and the trenches damaged. In the Authuile raid a border regiment captured 14 prisoners, in addition to inflicting other damage.

"Yesterday (Monday) owing mainly to the inclement weather there were no air operations."

59 More Officers On Casualty List

OTTAWA, June 7.—Eleven officers killed, two died of wounds, thirty wounded, sixteen missing, nearly all from Western Canada, appear in the casualty lists of the battle of Sanctuary Woods to-day.

LONDON, June 7.—Premier Asquith has taken charge of the War Office temporarily.

LABOUR COUNCIL MAY DISCUSS THE DAYLIGHT MEASURE

The Trades and Labour Council will probably discuss at to-night's meeting the Daylight Saving Bill for the purpose of obtaining an expression of the opinion the members hold toward this idea. Members of the Council who stalled the local movement on Monday night were acting on the assumption that labour was opposed to this measure, especially to the hour's earlier rising in the morning. There is also to be considered the earlier hour at which work would be ceased, the extra time thus afforded for garden work or leisure, and the hour earlier to bed. Some of those who claim to know, state that one hour's sleep before midnight is more valuable than two after that hour.

A fresh egg, take the inner skin of the same and apply it in place for a few minutes. It will adhere to the flesh and relieve the pain.

COLLECTION OF RAGS TO-NIGHT

The rags will be collected to-night between 6:30 and 8:30 from Ashburnham. To-morrow night all the streets from Ring street to Braidwood avenue, and from Park street to the river; also from Sherbrooke to Lansdowne, from Monaghan Road to Park street, and the section known as Byersville will also be canvassed.

Will any housekeepers whose rags and papers have been overlooked kindly 'phone 1888, and arrangements will be made for their collection?

The secret of delicious crisp Saratoga chips is first to slice them as thin as paper, letting them drop into a pan of cold water. Take them from the water and lay them on a cloth to drain; then drop them into boiling fat. When they are a golden brown, skim them from the fat and drain them on a piece of brown paper. Do not salt until finished.

WILSON FLAYED AT OPENING OF BIG CONVENTION

Republican Gathering in Chicago Opened To-day—Opening Speech Extended the Olive Branch to the Progressives

KEYNOTE WAS AMERICANISM

Examiner Special:

CHICAGO, Ill., June 7. —"Americanism" was the keynote and party unity the appeal of Senator Warren G. Harding's speech formally opening the Republican national convention to-day. The vast majority of the people Harding said, expected the party sponsors to write anew the sacred covenant of Republicanism and reconsecrate the party to the nation's service."

After extending the olive branch to the Progressives in convention at the auditorium, Harding outlined the fundamentals upon which the party planned to reconstruct its power. At the same time he flayed the Wilson administration, concluding that, "everything is abnormal except the depleted condition of the Federal treasury which is characteristic of democratic control. "Bleeding Europe," he said, "is a warning for prudent and patriotic and ample national defence."

When Chairman Hill's gavel fell, contrary to the usual situation he had little trouble in obtaining quiet.

Prayer was then offered by Rev. Jno. Timothy Stone of Chicago. The divine prayed for peace, asking blessings for deliberations of meeting, and pleading for, "No hasty or ill spoken words." "May men of our choice be those of my service," he said.

LONDON, June 7.—The Canadian Corps Commander, Sir Julian Byng, sends the following message: "I am proud of the Canadians under my command. Their behaviour has been magnificent. I have never known a fiercer or more deadly barrage. Nor have I seen any troops fight with more earnestness, courage, and cheerfulness. The slight penetration of our line cost the Germans dear.

MORE PETERBOROUGH BOYS ON THE LIST OF CANADIAN CASUALTIES

Ptes. A. E. Skilleter and John Dunn Wounded---Lt.-Col. Alf. Shaw, Formerly of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons Killed---Three New Battalions to Be Organized in One Division---News From Barriefield Camp---To-day's Military News.

The list of Peterborough boys who have been killed or wounded in the fight for liberty continues to grow day by day. There was a heavy list yesterday and to-day two more names are added—Pte. A. E. Skilleter of the Mounted Rifles and Pte. John Dunn Canadian Infantry, both of whom are wounded.

Official word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Skilleter, 208 Mark Street, that their son, Pte. A. E. Skilleter, Mounted Rifles, is reported admitted to No. 3 Divisional Rest Station, on May 21st, suffering from shell shock. Pte. "Teddy" Skilleter left Peterborough early last year as a trumpeter with 'B' Squadron, 8th C.M.R., and went overseas with that unit. He is a well-known local boy, who was prominent in Y. M. C. A. and other circles. The date given, May 21st, indicates that Pte. Skilleter was out of the big fight of Friday and Saturday.

Word was also received this morning that Pte. John Dunn, who left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion, and was afterwards transferred to the 58th, going over with the first draft from that Battalion, has been wounded. Pte. Dunn was admitted to No 1 Canadian General Hospital at Etaples, on May 30th, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the ankle.

Kingston Whig: "Please, sir, am I too small to enlist?" was the question put by Clifford Lapointe on Saturday morning to an officer of the 93rd Battalion, who was walking along King street. The little fellow is only five feet, one inch in height, but says he is eighteen years old. He has been working on the steamer John Randall on the Rideau Canal, but the sight of so much khaki on the streets appealed to his imagination so much that he wants to enlist. He was advised to go over to the camp and apply to be taken on as a bugler.

The following is from the Kingston Standard:

There is much indignation and dissatisfaction among the units in Barriefield camp over the stealing of their men by the new pioneer battalion. On Saturday, Major Wyatt came to the camp from Ottawa and proceeded to each battalion, causing the O. C. in each case to parade his men. From the men on parade, 20 were selected, and these among the best in each battalion, and 'by the time Major Wyatt got through with his work, he had taken 160 men from the camp units, only one of which is up to the recruited strength. Commanding officers were not allowed to talk to their men, or to have any say whatever as to the manner in which the men were to be selected, as Major Wyatt came armed with authority for the steal of 160 men. The commanding officers who suffered, without a single exception, feel that such treatment is far from fair, and are loud in their protests against the act of Saturday. The commanding officers base their objections on the following grounds:

First.—They feel that every battalion should recruit its own men, and not steal them from another battalion.

Second—It has cost each commanding officer from five to ten dollars to recruit each man taken, and it will cost a similar amount to recruit men to take their places, and yet not one dollar is allowed to cover the cost. Commanding officers in every case have been compelled to beg the money used for recruiting, in the locality in which the battalion was recruited, and they claim it is neither fair to them nor to the people who contributed the money, to have a battalion from some other section profit by their contributions.

Third—Commanding officers have promised in all cases that the men recruited in localities should be kept together as much as possible, and to steal them now for another unit and place them among strangers, is a breach of faith, and one for which they are liable to be severely censured.

Fourth—All officers are of the opinion, that it will be impossible to recruit battalions to strength, if this stealing is to be continued by special corps, such as Pioneers, Foresters, Engineers, Telegraphers, etc.

The following letter has been received from Corp. Fred Stanley of the Canadian Mounted Rifles:

Somewhere in Belgium,
May 9, 1916.

My Dear Wife and Boy: Just a few lines to let you know that I am still keeping fine and in the pink of condition. Now, wasn't it a funny thing that I received the bundle of socks on Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock, and we were leaving for the trenches at 9 o'clock, so I had to hustle and get them distributed before we started or I should have been under the painful necessity of carrying them to the trenches and back again. I just jumped to it and gave them away before supper. I gave the ones with the names on to the boys they were addressed to except Isaac Brady, and he is in the 5th C.M.R., so as their regiment was close to ours I took a walk over and tried to find him, but he works on the 5th's transport and the transport is always away from the regiment, so I gave them to a sergt., who said that he would see that Brady got them; that was the best I could do in such a case. I hope that the gets them and if he doesn't that the lady who gave you his name will be satisfied I did my best for her. If I had had them sooner I should have seen him and been able to have given them to him, because I saw him just the night before driving a transport waggon.

Now let me thank all the ladies who by work or money made it possible to send such a fine bunch of socks to us, and if you had heard the shouts of joy and the way the boys spoke about it when they got them you would have been fully repaid for all your labors. They all said they would write and thank you for them; that is the ones who had put their names in the socks. They came in very handy just then because as it happened the trench we took over is very muddy in places and now when we get time we can put on a pair of dry socks. There was only one fault about them—there were not enough to go all around the boys from Peterboro, and when they heard they were socks from the old home town they came running around to me, but I had given them away. Now I will give you a list of the names of fellows I gave them to as near as possible, as I have only my memory to draw upon. Myself, H. Lawrence, F. H. Evans, Isaac Brady (I did my best in his case), R. H. Perry, Shannon, R. B. Smith, Parrington, J. Nelson, W. Larkman, Tenbo, George Dixon, and another fellow I do not or cannot remember his name. I think that is the lot but if there were more pairs of socks than names I gave them all away. Now once again thanking the ladies of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club for their kindness and hoping that the war may be over so quickly that we shall not need any more socks, but that we shall be able to jauntily march into Berlin on this pair for the boys of Peterboro in the 4th C.M.R.

CASUALTIES OF THE CANADIANS MAY REACH 6000 TOTAL

Already 230 Officers Have Been Reported Killed, Wounded or Missing—Edmonton and Brandon Regiments Have Suffered Severely

THE PATS BADLY HIT

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, June 7.—The morning's list brings the Canadian officers' casualties up to about 230, while the rank and file are coming in rapidly. Over forty officers are already numbered among the dead, while about forty-five are recorded as missing to date.

To-day's list indicates that the Brandon and Edmonton regiments have suffered most heavily indeed. In to-day's list Edmonton has lost six officers killed and nine wounded and Brandon, ten missing, while the Princess Pats have four more killed and five wounded and one missing.

The family of Major Gault, the millionaire founder of the Princess Pats, to-day deny that he died from wounds, and say he is not dangerously wounded.

Private cables received here declare the Canadian casualties in the Battle of Sanctuary Wood will reach a total of six thousand.

Sir George Perley cables there's absolutely no trace of Major Gen. Mercer.

Will Not Agree To Reduction

Dr. Amys, M.O.H., Declines to Be a Party to a Reduction in His Salary of Ten Per Cent.

An account for thirty-six dollars and sixty-six cents was the subject of a brief discussion at last night's meeting of the Property committee of the City Council. Six dollars and sixty-six cents of this amount represents the ten per cent. reduction that was made in the salary of Dr. R. C. Amys, Medical Officer of Health. Dr. Amys has asked the legal firm of Moore and Wearing to collect this account. The remainder of the amount represents fees for examining insane patients. The entire account was turned over to City Solicitor Gordon.

Results of the Fighting at Ypres Are Beginning to Become Known —Government Still Without Detailed Account of the Fighting

OTHER UNITS MENTIONED

OTTAWA, June 6.—Long casualty lists, as a result of the fighting on the Canadian front, at Zillebeke, are beginning to reach the Militia Department. The next of kin of those killed, wounded and missing are being notified as rapidly as possible and the names will thereafter be made public. The Government is still without any detailed story of the action, or series of actions, in which the Third Canadian Division in particular, and other Canadian battalions have maintained the traditions of the race. To-day's list of casualties among officers includes the names of a number who were with the Field Artillery, the Tunnelling Company, the Heavy Battery, the Eaton Machine Gun Battery and other units not previously mentioned in the despatches.

The British official report' ... shows that German attacks in the Ypres region have been resumed with intensity, and it is presumed that Canadians are again in the fighting.

AWAITING DETAILS.

There is no disposition to minimize the Canadian losses, which are undoubtedly heavy, but it is felt that, pending more detailed information, attempts at estimates will be out of place.

Physical Instructor To Secure Certificate

Owing to the fact that Mr. C. Jamieson, physical instructor at the Collegiate Institute, does not hold the certificate for this work for which the Government grants the Board of Education $80 a year, Mr. John Crane last night suggested to the Board of Education that Mr. Jamieson be requested to secure the necessary qualification at the training school in Toronto this summer. Mr. Crane thought that the Board should obtain the grant. A motion was passed endorsing Mr. Crane's idea. Mr. Hall seconded it.

Mr. Chas. Coleman To Make Munitions At Woolwich Arsenal

Mr. Chas. E. Coleman, of Coleman Bros., leaves on Saturday, June 10th for England to work on munitions at Woolwich Arsenal. Those who have known Mr. Coleman have been aware of his desire to assist the Mother Country at whatever he would be of most assistance. He has had extensive experience as a tool-maker, and wrote to the authorities in England of his willingness to return where needed. He felt that he could be of most use in the Old Country, although he might have served in munition work in this country, and for a higher remuneration. The large confectionery business established by Mr. Coleman in Peterborough will be carried on by his brother.

But to how many would come a personal all-pervading, overwhelming and absorbing recognition of God as the controlling factor in human affairs, the arbiter and director of the human concerns of the world? We are a Christian country, but is our Christianity more than mind deep, is it soul deep, heart deep, the rule of our life, the motor of our actions? Do we not too much outwardly conform to the ... ...wledgment of divine overrule... ...out there it in our hearts; in our daily lives, in our actual attitude of mind and purpose and action? Do we not, in the activities of peace, and even in the strenuosities of war, depend, at heart, upon the arm of flesh without due recognition of the divine overlordship? Some carpers say that the smoke of the burning in war-swept Europe rises to heaven as a proof that Christianity is a failure. Is Christianity a failure except in so far as we make it a failure by failing to allow it to operate in our lives, seize our hearts with a stronger grip of controlling force than can come from perfunctory, theoretical acceptance and recognition of, and depend... once upon, the force behind the Christianity that counts—God, Himself? What the Conference meant was that God was behind all its ... ...ceptable work, as He is behind every human enterprise, every great human undertaking that deserves to succeed, and will succeed; in the highest sense. If we, as individuals and as a nation, really believe in a divine Ruler, in whose hands are the issues of life, and success, we should put ourselves in right relation with Him, and ask His cooperation, in heart-deep prayer, which is as logical an evidence and condition of belief in God as breathing is an evidence and condition of life.

THE ONLY WAY, AND THE BEST.

When we feel more than we reason, we are depressed and perhaps a little discouraged over the losses at sea. It is certainly saddening and serious, to experience the shock of four or five thousand gallant British sailors going down in the waters off Jutland, and to think of the many millions of dollars' worth of incomparable war shipping settling to the bottom of the sea. It is supremely sad to know almost to a certainty, that the greatest warrior of modern times, the military man-machine, General Lord Kitchener and his auxiliary brains have gone down to death. These are great blows, and when added to the many sea disasters, great and small, of the past twenty-two months, give us cause for deep sorrow.

But when we think that all these losses in ships and sailors do not in any way impair the integrity of the impassable blockade, with which the British navy girdles Germany, we should to that degree be comforted. The British Navy is stronger now, and is very much more efficient, than it was when the war began. It was then in a state of magnificent preparedness, and has since done more than any other agency of the Allied nations to defeat the ambitions and aims of Germany.

We are not depressed overmuch by losses, insignificant as far as affecting naval efficiency, when we recall what the British navy has achieved since the war began, and what its silent, resistless, unceasing pressure is doing now to weaken the enemy and hasten victory. Elsewhere on this page is found an article showing how the scarcity of food, brought about by the blockade, is demoralizing and weakening Germany—as effectively working to shorten the war as the armies of the Allies, that are ringing about the empire with walls of steel. It seems cruel, it is cruel, to punish innocent women and children by bringing about food shortage. But it is not Britain that is doing this; it is Germany—that is, the demented and brutalized rulers of Germany. In all ages of warfare reducing a besieged town by starvation has been a recognized legitimate form of fighting. The besieged have the extent of suffering from hunger in their own hands; surrender is the only relief. If the mad monarch of Germany and his fellow conspirators against humanity want the blockade to end, and the sufferings of the people to cease, they must sooner or do what they must ultimately do, own themselves "outfought and ...feated." The Kaiser is directly responsible for all the suffering, loss and woe of this war, as he is responsible for their prolongation. If his people suffer from lack of food; if the ...ower of the multitude of every kind is perishing by thousands every ... if millions of mothers's hearts are broken and millions of homes darkened; if tens of millions of people outside of Germany are starving and destitute and naked; is it not justifiable that to end all this the Kaiser, through his own people, should be made to feel a little of what he has inflicted. If the blockade will, as it is doing, and will continue to do, weaken the power of the German war lords to ravage Europe, and sow broadcast, death, destruction and desolation, the British blockade is justifiable and righteous as one of the most potent of means, to end this war, and defeat the mad ambition of Germany to impose its military tyranny upon the world, which it would have been well on the way to do today if the British navy had not barred the way.

It is humiliating to think that one wicked despot, one crowned lunatic, claiming down right of devilish and oppressive rule, should have had the power to bring upon the world all the suffering and lost this war has caused. Britons recognize no divine right of kings to oppress the people at their will; that died in Great Britain with the Jacobean dynasty and since that time kings have ruled at the will, and in the interests of the people governed. The divine right idea, as it is asserted and recognized in Germany by an oppressed and degraded people, must be destroyed in the interests of the people themselves, and the peace and well-being of the peoples of the world. There seems to be no better way to show the people of Germany that their idol has feet of clay, that they are oppressed and war ridden, except through the appeal to their stomachs. The British blockade is enforcing that appeal, and the German people are beginning to recognize that they owe to the Kaiser the suffering from food shortage and the disturbance of all social conditions, that his infernal ambition for tyrannous rule has inflicted upon other nations. An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, is the only doctrine that will appeal to the ruling caste of Germany, that employs the barbarity and ruthlessness, the unrelenting cruelty that marked the age of the Reformation that was replaced by the rule of Christianity.

British Fleet Does More Than Sink German Ships In the Skagerack Waters

It Weakens the Enemy at Home and Breeds Riots and the Revolutionary Spirit in Germany

The capital fact, which emerges from the confusing statements regarding the battle of the Skagerrack is that the British Grand Fleet controls the North Sea even more completely than before the great struggle, and that there is no possibility of the battered German High Seas fleet raising the blockade, the stronghold of sea power, which the Germans recognize as the effective element in the war, is still exercised by Sir John Jellicoe.

From the German Press glimpses are obtained of conditions that must breed hatred of war—deep and enduring hatred—in the minds of the mass of the German people. At one end of the social scale there are waste, luxury, and fastuousness, at the other hunger and privation of a degree almost unendurable. The miscalculations of the bureaucracy have been so great that the food supplies which were believed a few months ago to be sufficient to carry the people over till harvest are now so dangerously low that the ill-nourished begin to throw themselves upon the State for the means of life, while in the streets the more robust raid the stores of food purveyors under suspicion of withholding their goods until famine prices can be obtained.

The first witness as to conditions in the cities of Germany, called by a correspondent of the Boston Transcript who has made a search of recent issues of German journals for material showing the actual condition of affairs, is Baron von Gundherr, Police President of Munich. In a public address this high Bavarian official said:

"Soldiers at the front die willingly for German simplicity and temperance, for German modesty and idealism, but they do not die willingly for gourmet and pleasure-seekers, for selfish, superficial men and vain, coquettish women. There are musical cafes in Munich where during the afternoons dressed-up women, girls, and young children sit in pairs with immoral men, drinking and eating the best. At the other end of the city from 4,000 to 5,000 soldiers' wives daily and nightly, sometimes all through the night, assemble and wait weary hours for a bit of meat or butter at prices which are intolerable. Patient, never grumbling, waiting six and eight hours, in all weathers, insufficiently clothed, waiting until their turn comes. There is always a remnant of from 400 to 500 who get nothing, but they go home unmurmuring.

"It has come to my knowledge that a Munich woman used every effort and employed every artifice to procure a milk card for her cat. Another had actually the effrontery to ask in a shop for nine pounds of oatmeal to make porridge for her dog. What do those starving soldiers' wives think of that?

"These women whom one sees every afternoon haunting their finery in our streets are not worthy to be called German women. The name is too good, too honourable for them. They are female Apaches who are permitted to parade in German citizen to the burning indignation of all decent folk. Observe their flowing, extravagant puffed-out dresses, their high, stilt-like heels, the suggestive cut of their jackets, the display of neck and chest, the shameless paint on their faces, the straw-yellow dyed hair under a hat which fools used to wear at carnivals. This is the German fashion in the second year of war! And our theatres are filled with frivolous and slippery plays intended to tickle the jaded palates of degenerate men and women!

"There are rich families in Munich for whom the war does not seem to exist; rich dissolutes, thinking of nothing of their sport and pleasure! Why cannot they be taken to the trenches? There are bars and wineshops in Munich with waitresses, where the wildest orgies are carried on. This extravagance cries to heaven! And everywhere are the food usurers, that shameless crowd of vampires!"

That testimony from a Bavarian official is emphasised by a report Wolff's from the Vossische, the Socialist organ of Berlin, as to conditions in the capital of the Empire. Of the meat market it said: "Last Saturday the Berlin meat markets were an inconsolable sight. The market halls were empty. We had heard about numbers of cattle, sheep and calves having been driven to the abattoirs. But the butchers' stalls were empty. We visited two other market halls and found every stall empty. In the Wedding Hall was one butcher who had some very small calves, and they were sold in the twinkling of an eye. Another butcher elsewhere was offering dry mutton bones at the appaling price of 17 cents a pound. When the housewives protested at this shameless attempt to sell stinking mutton bones at this price he threw his wares into the bone tub and packed up his stall. All this, remember, on a day when, according to a Wolff message circulated to the outside world, supplies in Berlin meat market were larger than in the previous weeks. Presumably there were no stinking mutton bones on sale in the previous weeks. It was officially boasted, too, that last week Berlin received a large number of pigs than in the previous weeks. So it did—931, as against 681. But it was forgotten to mention that Berlin's normal supply of pigs is 10,000 a week."

The riot in front of Frau Biesold's store after a police inspection revealed large stocks of meat at a time when the windows were plastered with the words "Meat sold out, already been described in cable despatches, but Vorwaerts adds details that show how completely the starving people are getting out of hand, and how close to revolution their rioting comes:

"In the midst of the turmoil there came a great shout: 'Down with the shameless ones!' and in an instant the cry was taken up by thousands. Wave upon wave of agitated, mostly feminine, and all struggling, humanity flung itself against the front of the Biesold establishment.

"The police were knocked down, and the entrance hall became gorged with the wriggling, panting, shouting human torrent. The storm raged throughout every part of the building. From the vaults below great joints of beef and veal, carcasses of pigs, etc., were dragged up the narrow stairs by the pulling women with a masterful agility, while from the upper windows strings of sausages, hams, and sides of bacon were flung into the streets on the heads of the agitated throngs.

"When the premises had been emptied and several of the attacking party lay in a dead swoon in the streets, and when five of them had received serious injury in the fearful crush in the hallway and passages, a force of mounted gendarmes arrived on the meat-and-sausage-strewn battlefield, and the mob was forcibly dispersed, many bearing the spoils of battle in triumph to their homes.

"Thus, at length, did Berliners effectually take into their own hands the punishment which the established authorities should long ago have meted out to all those who perpetrate usury with the people's food."

The British fleet with its patrols on the North Sea shutting off supplies from America and its submarines in the Baltic making shipments from Norway and Sweden hazardous, is doing as much to win the war as all the armies of the Allies. If its operations bring about a revolution in Germany it will have proved itself the most potent instrument in the saving of civilization and the destruction of the Prussian overlordships of Europe.—The Globe.

The second member of the stage to become a member of the 204th Beaver Battalion is Mr. Francis Herbert Townsend, known in stageland as Cyril Courtney, who after taking part in the big Shakespeare display in New York City travelled to Toronto to join the battalion. When he reached the Beaver headquarters, Mr. Townsend declared that it was while he was in the city six weeks ago appearing at the Grand Opera House, that he listened to one of Capt. Lawson's street-corner addresses, and was so impressed that he decided to give up $150 a week to earn the army's $1.10 a day. Mr. Townsend was born in London, England, and he has one son, now with the 19th Battery, R.F.A., which has been at the front ever since war broke out. Mr. Townsed has appeared in plays with George Arliss, Julia Marlowe and many other well-known people of the American stage.—Toronto News.

The news that men who have been rejected as unfit for active service will be accepted by the Canadian Army Service Corps was joyfully received by those loyal Peterborough men who have tried in vain to get accepted. There were many applicants in sight last night, men with "A R" buttons coming from all sections of the city to inquire as to their chances One worthy citizen was engaged cutting his lawn when his wife came out of the house with an Examiner in her hand and showed him the paragraph about the Army Service Corps. Leaving the lawn mower where it was he immediately headed for the recruiting office to leave his name. 100 men are wanted for this service and Peterborough will have a good representation judging by the interest the announcement has created.

Pte. Fred Hatcher of the Army Service Corps, Barriefield Camp, is home on leave from Kingston. He expects to go overseas with a draft shortly

The heavy casualties sustained by the third Canadian Division will likely cause another rush of Canadian troops from England to France, and consequently the movement of more troops from Canada to England. This will likely hasten the departure of the 93rd Battalion, as the Peterborough unit is the senior battalion a Barriefield camp.

Lt.-Col. E. A. Shaw of the Canadian Infantry, killed in the fighting at Zillibeke, is another Peterborough county boy on the long honour roll of the Canadian forces. Col. Shaw was the son of Mr. Wm. Shaw of Otonabee, and was formerly an officer in the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. For a number of years he had lived in the west, where he was connected with the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. He was in command of one of the Mounted Rifles battalions at the front.

It is evident from the news from the front that the Mounted Rifles Brigade were in the hottest part of the big battle at Zillibeke. There will be anxiety in many Peterborough home as practically all the men who left Peterborough with the 18th C.M.R., over 200 in all, with the exception of a few sergeants who were kept in England on instructional duty, are with different units of the Mounted Brigade, which was commanded by General Williams, now a prisoner.

Lieut. A. R. Stevenson of the 93rd Battalion, who has been ill since the arrival of the battalion at Barriefield is home on leave from Kingston. Pte. Jack Curtis, about whom there was a report last week that he had died of pneumonia, is also home from Barriefield to recuperate after a number of days in hospital.

A large number of Peterborough people will take in the excursion to Barriefield Camp on June 24th. The 93rd are making preparations to royally entertain their visitors.. Many local people who are going down would like to take a trip through the 1000 Islands on Sunday afternoon, and it is possible that this may be arranged. Several units at Barriefield last year arranged a similar trip for the benefit of the battalion and their visitors. At all events there will be a happy re-union at Barriefield, and both the 93rd and their friends are looking forward to June 24th.

The announcement that Major Williams, chaplain of the 109th Battalion, has been promoted lieutenant-colonel, and made chief recruiting officer for Canada will be gladly read in Peterborough. Lt.-Col. Williams who was a visitor at the Bay of Quinte Conference, has visited Peterborough on several occasions and his lectures on the navy and his recruiting speeches have been greatly enjoyed.

Lieut. F. F. Elliott of Vancouver who was mentioned in the casualty list, yesterday, as having been killed was a cousin of Messrs. George E and E. M. Elliott of this city. His parents were formerly of this district. He had a brother killed in the battle of Langemarck a year ago. Mr. George E. Elliott corresponded with him at the front regularly, and his letters were always optimistic and very interesting.

TWO MORE PROMINENT RUGY PLAYERS DOWN

Two more Canadian Rugby stalwarts have acquitted themselves with honour on the field of battle. In the fearful fighting around Ypres it is reported that Captain Alex. Sinclair was wounded and Captain Frank Prak "missing." Sinclair, for many years, played scrimmage for the Argonauts. He was a member of the team when Captain 'Billy' Grant was in his prime. Grant is home from the front recuperating from wounds received earlier in the war. Sinclair was the mainstay of the Argo wing line, and few better scrimmagers ever stepped upon a gridiron. It is to be hoped that his injuries are not serious. Park was one of the fastest outside wings ever produced in Varsity. He also played on several championship teams. Park was a member of the Medical Corps, and it may be that he was taken prisoner while attending to the wounded. His best friends say that he could not be far from the firing line, although his duties did not require him to go into the danger zone.—Toronto News.

OTTAWA, June 6.—Brigadier-General Lipsett, now commanding one of the brigades of the 1st Division will succeed Major-General Mercer as Commanding Officer of the 3rd Division. For General Lipsett's place in the 1st Division, Brigadier-General W. St. Pierre Hughes, a brother of Sir Sam Hughes, has been recommended by General Byng. General Hughes is now commanding one of the brigades of the 4th Division which is still in process of final organization and has not yet reached the front. Brigadier-General Hughes who has already seen considerable service at the front in command of the 21st Battalion will thus again get into the firing line promptly. To take his place in the 4th Division Col. Embury of Regina who has been commanding the 28th Battalion will be promoted Brigadier-General in command of a brigade of the 4th Division.

No word has yet been received by Sir Sam Hughes, as to the fate of either Major-General Mercer or Brigadier-General Victor Williams. Both were officially reported wounded and missing, and that is the only word so far heard about them at headquarters.

The Kingston Standard Says:

On Sunday morning the camp was divided into four parts for Divine services. The 93rd, 109th, 130th battalions, assembled at the west end of the picture show building; the 136th, 139th, 146th battalions met near the rifle range bungalow; the 154th, 155th, 156th battalions assembled directly facing the lines of the 156th for Protestant service. The Catholic party formed up near the Y. M. C. A. tent. The services were arranged by Major J. C. Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd battalion, who for 15 years was chaplain of 57th regiment of Peterboro. Major Davidson preached to the men of the 93rd 109th and 130th. Captain Elliott conducted the services for the 136th, 139th and 146th and Captain Campbell, chaplain of the 146th took charge of the services for the 154th, 155th and 156th. Bands were present at all the services, and the chaplains delivered helpful and inspiring sermons to the men.

KINGSTON, June 7.—Two, if not three new battalions will be organized in the 3rd Military District, almost immediately. The one will have its headquarters at Renfrew, and the name of Major Watts is connected with the command of this new battalion. The other will have its headquarters at Lindsay, and the name of Major Carew of the 109th Battalion is mentioned as the probable commanding officer of this battalion. The third battalion will probably have Kingston for its headquarters, and the name of Lt.-Col. Ferguson, officer commanding the 47th Regiment, and senior Major of the 146th Battalion is mentioned in connection with this battalion as the probable commanding officer. One, if not two of the new battalions will be "Kilties" and it is felt that such battalions will strongly appeal to sentiment in recruiting.

Private Cole of the 93rd battalion is a good ventriloquist and his work has all the finish of the best professional.—Kingston Standard.

Soldiers are warned in camp orders not to remove the wire from their caps. Some have done this and given their headgear the appearance of that worn by the London costermonger.—Kingston Standard.

In the list of casualties amongst Canadians, issued at Ottawa, is the name of Pte. J. G. Hadden, who is reported wounded, at some time between May 20th and 24th.

Pte. Hadden enlisted here with "B" Squadron, 8th C.M.R. and was later sent to the firing line with a draft from that unit. He was recently in hospital suffering from shell shock, and was only back with his unit a short time when he was wounded. No further particulars have as yet been received as to the seriousness of his condition.

Pte. Hadden has many warm friends in this city who will regret to learn that he has been wounded. He was employed at the Canadian General Electric Company plant for a time and is a nephew of Mr. Joseph Hadden, the postmaster at Bethany

Capt. Kennedy of the Army Medical Corps, left for Kingston this morning, taking with him seven Peterborough boys who have enlisted in the Queen's Field Ambulance. Another draft of local boys for the same unit will leave later. Capt. Kennedy was highly satisfied with the result of his visit to Peterborough as he succeeded in getting fifteen fine recruits.

A party of 93rd men who have been in hospital here, will leave for Barriefield camp to-morrow morning. The squad that was left here to clean up the armouries will also rejoin the battalion to-morrow.

The truth cannot be burned, beheaded or crucified. A lie on the throne is a lie still, and a lie on the throne is on the way to defeat, and a truth in the dungeon is on the way to victory.

FOSSILS AID GEOLOGISTS.

Are "Clocks" by Which the Scientist Tells Time of Formation of Any Rock Bed.

The fossil shells of the early invertebrates are of great importance to geologists, for they indicate the geologic period in which the rock beds containing them were formed ,in other words, the age of the rock. Each fossiliferous rock bed, says a bulletin of the United States Geological Survey, contains characteristic forms of groups of forms that determine the period in which it was mud or sand. One time Director Powell of the Survey once tersely explained to a Congressional committee the value of paleontology by saying that it is "the geologist's clock," by which he tells the time in the world's history when any rock bed was formed.

The economic importance of paleontology has been repeatedly shown in this country. In the earlier exploitation of anthracite coal thousands of dollars were fruitlessly expended in New York in search of coal beds until the New York geologists showed that the beds in that State could contain no coal. The fossils in the New York rocks exploited are of Devonian age, whereas the fossils of the Pennsylvania anthracite coal beds belong to the Carboniferous, a much later period. This discovery at once stopped a useless expenditure of money.

In times of doubt and perplexity the geologist therefore turns to the paleontologist for light on the age and original order of the rock beds he is studying. The study of the animal and plant remains that are embedded in the rocks has thus became an important part of geologic work, and although the specialists who are engaged in this study are few, their work is of high importance.

President Signs Bill For Army of 206,000 Men

POSTMASTERS WILL AID IN RECRUITING.

Peace Strength Will Be Brought to 175,000—Militia to to Reach 457,000.

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 6 — President Wilson has affixed his signature to the Hay-Chamberlain Army Reorganization Bill, making it law on Saturday.

The War Department, it was announced, immediately will set in motion the machinery to provide for the increases in personnel and material therein provided, effective July 1. The task, it is admitted, is a more difficult one than the army ever faced before. Lieut.-Brigadier General, expressed confidence that the would be able to recruit the eighty thousand additional men which the bill allows the army.

A committee of the General Staff is now considering the problem of recruiting the men. The new law creates a branch of recruiting rendezvous some fifty thousand postmasters throughout the country being made recruiting agents by an offer of $3 for each man they get to enlist in the army. The General Staff is determined to get the additional men allowed by Congress and suggestions were made that if necessary the office of the Adjutant General would be reorganized to carry this work out successfully.

Under the new law, the army will be brought to a peace strength of 175,000 men and a war strength of 206,000 men. An effort is now being made to recruit the army up to 102,000 men, under a special resolution passed about ten weeks ago, which authorized an increase of 20,000 men to meet the Mexican border situation. Thus far the effort to enlist the 20,000 men had not succeedd. Only 8,000 of the 20,000 authorised have been recruited in ten weeks. The facts suggest, therefore, that it will be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to recruit the army up to 175,000 in the next year.

The law also provides for an increase in the militia from about 125,000 men to 440,000 enlisted men and 17,600 officers, Federal pay will be given to the militia to simulate recruiting, but whether even under those conditions the militia will come up to the authorized strength is regarded as problematical.

Upon the success of the army in recruiting these numbers, however, is generally believed to depend the question of whether the United States can continue the volunteer system or must resort to compulsory military service.

One feature of the new law is an appropriation of $20,000,000 for a government nitrate manufacturing plant, establishment of military training camps for volunteer citizens and creation of several boards to investigate questions of preparedness.

Authority is given to the government to seize and operate privately owned munition plants in war time. Regular army enlistment is set at seven years, four of which may be spent in reserve, and at no time after five years, when the minimum is to be obtained, is the peace strength to go under 180,000.

A RIVER OF HORROR.

No White Man, Exploring Its Riches, Ever Has Returned.

There is a river of mystery and horror in Peru, and the legends of rich rubber regions and untold wealth in gold are accompanied by tales of those who went up it never to return. Casmer Watkins, a naturalist, recently returned from South America, tells of the stream.

"This river," he said, "is the Colorado River, the richest river in Peru. Great groves of rubber trees lie along its course, and gold has been found in it. But the Mascos, a tribe of cannibals, infest it. They still practise cannibalism, and will kill a man on sight. Expeditions have been fitted out and been heavily armed to go exploring for rubber and gold, but none of them ever has returned. The savages have killed the men and sailed them and turned the canoes adrift. They have come down the river empty, bottoms up, or filled with supplies which the savages did not care to remove."

FRUIT BLOOM SPELLS A BOUNTIFUL CROP

All Sorts of Fruit Figure in One of the Most Promising Spring Seasons on Record

Official fruit reports give a glowing forecast of probabilities for this year's fruit crop. It is several years since all prospects were as glowing as they are to-day. Almost every kind of fruit grown in Ontario promises a bountiful crop so far.

Though the season is late (and in some cases as much as four weeks later than usual) the bloom is excellent and has every indication of producing a heavy crop. It is feared, however, that this lateness and the wet may affect pollenation and thin out the crop badly. Barring this, however, we seem to be in for a bumper crop this year—all lines of fruit contributing to the whole.

Frost has been singularly absent, only several instances being reported, and the damage is slight.

Lambton county is stepping to the front this year with a good show for peaches, a lot of young trees coming into bearing for the first time.

A Glasgow report says that all home fruit crops promise to be excellent, as the dangerous period is practically over.

In the United States, however, considerable damage was done by frosts which were general throughout the North-Western States. This ranged from "slight" to 20 and 30 per cent. of the apple crop; peaches up to 30 per cent., and in some cases 100; and cherries up to 85 and 100 per cent., according to locality.

New York State is backward, but all fruits are looking well. Apple bloom is very heavy, and it is anticipated that this year will be a "Baldwin" year.

Apples in Ontario.

If it is possible, with any degree of accuracy, to base a report upon the amount of blossoms, we can safely say that the prospects for the Canadian apple crop are particularly favourable, says the official report.

The Province of Nova Scotia is the only commercial district in which the bloom is not uniformly heavy, and even there an average crop is expected. The Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia has for some years past been greatly handicapped by the prevalence of apple scab, which this year has doubtless been checked to some extent by continued cold, dry weather. That fact will give the growers reason to expect a crop of high quality fruit, if spraying is not overlooked. There is apparently, however, a tendency on the part of some growers to spray less than usual this year. The opinion seems to exist that the demand for fruit will be limited.

All varieties are showing a very heavy blossom in Lambton, Norfolk, Essex and Niagara. The fact that weather conditions are favourable for the development of scab may indicate a heavy "June drop." In all sections north of Lake Erie blossoms opened late and thereby escaped injury by frost. There is more pruning being done in Lambton than for several years past. Unfavourable weather and scarcity of labour have interfered with spraying. In the Burlington section all trees show a very heavy bloom, except some Baldwins and Starks which bore heavily last year.

Counties north of Lambton on Lake Huron and inland to York county indicate a satisfactory bloom on all varieties. Baldwins are reported short in Brant county.

Very favourable reports have come from the commercial apple district north of Lake Ontario. Trees were not in full bloom until about June 1st. Several of the large orchards have not received a first and second spraying, because of the unfavourable weather conditions and lack of help. Little planting is being done.

The Province of Quebec and the eastern parts of Ontario also report a full bloom. Trees have wintered well in the Georgian Bay district, with promise of a heavy bloom on all varieties. It is unfortunate that more care is not being taken of orchards in that section.

Other Canadian Points.

St. John Valley apples promise well, but Annapolis Valley prospects are not so good as Ontario. Trees are not in bloom, and orchards that were not sprayed last year indicate a light crop, and well-cared-for orchards only a moderate crop. Other Nova Scotia parts are better, but the season is three or four weeks late.

In British Columbia there are indications of a heavy crop of most varieties, though the lower mainland and Vancouver Island are two weeks late. Cold rains interfered with pollenation and spraying.

WAR CREATOR OF MANY PROBLEMS

LONDON, June 6.—The servant problem is making the prospective effects of the military service bill a further burden to the married women in England whose husbands are likely to be called to the colours.

Higher wages are in every case being asked, and in some districts it is impossible to get servants at all, for reasons not unconnected with the position of the army camps. Married women who anticipate a return to work will find that the girls who were formerly their own domestics are in some cases able to get higher pay than they can. In spite of appeals for more women to work, there would appear from the Labour Exchange figures to be actually a superfluity of them—except among the specially qualified and trained.

Strong young women are preferred in munition factories, and for married women of the middle class with young families the long hours and the difficulties of transit make such occupation an impossibility. Only a meagre salary can be expected by the untrained clerical worker, and the untrained married woman has the further disadvantage that where she has young children she cannot follow up a job as a young girl without ties is able to do, nor, for domestic reasons, will she be willing to work overtime.

Another problem that faces the woman of the middle class who has to make a good deal of retrenchment is the drastic economics in which the education authorities are engaged. Large classes send the children home unruly and irritable, and the closing of elementary schools in some parts of the country puts a further burden on the mother. Many middle class families faced with the problem of school fees might be tempted to try the local council secondary schools, but it is doubtful if with the depleted staffs and equipment, the curtailment of scholarships and other economics, such a change would be wise.

This economy in education is being felt by the girls at the newer universities, where the pupils are now largely feminine since the outbreak of the war. Parents who are straining their resources to keep their girls at college hear of smaller grants, general shortage of instructors, and the cessation of expenditure on up-to-date equipment for library and laboratory. With less to spend, the middle class family now gets in education, as in food, less value for its money.

DEAF GIRL IS TAUGHT TO SING

MISS HELEN KELLER AND MR. EDISON INTERESTED IN COLUMBUS (OHIO) EXPERIMENT.

Columbus, Ohio, June 5.—Teaching a deaf person to sing, a feat which had been considered impossible, has been accomplished by Mrs. Christian Born, the wife of a Columbus brewer, after weeks of experimenting with Miss Magdalene Sattler, an 18 year old Cleveland student at the State School for the Deaf here, according to an announcement to-day.

Miss Helen Keller, of New York, has arrived in Columbus to test Mrs. Born's new process. Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, also is said to be interested in Mrs. Born's experiments.

Mrs. Born's experiments to prove her theory that the sense of hearing is not altogether essential in singing, have been conducted in secret for several months. The new teaching method consists of facial expressions accompanied by piano tones, which the student cannot hear. To date the girl has mastered more than octave of notes enough, the scientists say, to prove the new method is a success.

COTTING DOWN THE KING'S TREES

Canadian Lumberman's Battalion is Busy at Logging Camp in the Royal Forest at Windsor

NO WOOD WASTED

Windsor Forest, England, May 25.—A lumberjack's paradise! Here under the greenwood no nagging swarms of mosquitoes molest nor do carnivorous battalions of black flies buzz. Save for an occasional gnat or midge depredator, of insect life sounds only the drowsy hum of bumble bees fresh from a feast on snow-white hawthorn blossoms. The air resounds with bird voices, sweet flute of blackbird, musical trill of thrush and linnet, and mellow note of cuckoo calling from shady nook in the ancient forest. Deer feed in grassy glades under the beeches and big, brown bunnies scamper across the pale purple carpet of pine needles beneath the conifers, where young fronds of the bracken are stretching upwards towards the hot May sunshine.

An Ideal Life.

Every man in Canada's lumbermen's battalion votes this an ideal life—this logging in the King's forest of Royal Windsor, mid the most charming surroundings in England.

Walking along a perfect motor road, which winds through cool woods, past meadows powdered with buttercups, past cottages half-hidden among flowering shrubs, past tall hedges of thorn and holly, your correspondent came to a spot where clustered a swarm of dark green tents, headquarters of one of the companies of Canada's military lumbermen. Stepping out from his billet, Captain W. B. Wilson of Pembroke, officer in command, presently emerged to conduct the visitor to the scene of operations.

Sawmill in Operation.

All about stretched the woods of the Royal demesne, evergreen and hardwood, miles in extent, the storied forest in whose depths kings of England had hunted for centuries the stag and the boar. At one spot on the roadside a splashing proclaimed the presence of Virginia Water whose sparkling overflow here tumbled among rocks into a leafy dell ablaze with rhododendron blossoms. From the shadowy pools in the stream below, trout darted. Presently, farther down the road where a lichen-y milestone bore the legend, "[illegible] miles to Hyde Park Corner," a shrill buzz "screech" proclaimed the sawmill. Just over the highway, mid a gap in the trees Canada's lumbermen were at work felling the forest. Falling trunks to the whirling sand. Flash of the axe rang out and lusty Canadian shouts.

Like New Ontario.

Medieval England had [illegible] for the nonce. From the [illegible] of Bluff King Hal and the [illegible] scene of George IV.'s joyous [illegible] was straightway wafted [illegible] to the piney woods of across the sea, to the skid road and shanty. How it smacked of Northern Ontario, that bit of bush with its fallen trunks, its resin-scented slabs, its mounds of sawdust, its piles of newcut planks and square timber.

Carriage folk and smart-motorists halt their equipages to gaze on the unwonted scene where fifty stalwart Canadians in khaki, sans tunics, ply their skilful calling almost within sight of Windsor's stately towers.

HAVEN'T PROPER TACKLE.

As yet the Canadians are doing their work with a small English portable mill. No moving rollers carry the log to the saws. Each must be peavied into place by the "strong" method. But expert hands guide every log on its journey and the neatly-sawn output shows the skill of our mill-men, able to adapt themselves to conditions. As yet they are without their own accustomed rigging and must hew axe-handles, stone-boats and log-sleighs from the bush. But the longed-for tackle will soon be here and a real, sure-enough Canadian mill is in process of erection. Soon a building one hundred and twenty feet by twenty-five will top the frame of big timbers prepared for it. In a ten-hour day there will be an output of 20,000 feet.

EXCELLENT TIMBER.

So far at this camp, the Royal Forester has had marked off with blazes of white paint, a one hundred-acre limit to be lumbered over. Though much larger trees of white pine and hardwoods there are in other spots, this particular acreage is mostly covered with Scotch fir, the wood which will be principally used for the manufacture of railway ties for the front, pit-props for the trenches, and general lumber. And how like our own Norway pine of Muskoka or bull pine of the West it looks, and slightly harder in fibre it cuts well. All the men declare it excellent timber, and though knots are fairly numerous, it is uniformly straight, and there is hardly even a rotten spot from root to top. It is cut close to the ground and averages about 22 inches at the butt, tapering very gradually. The trees run about forty feet of saw lo, though many yield as many as three good logs of 16 feet.

NO WASTE.

The last log is only two and a half inches at the top, so practically everything goes to the saws. Nothing is wasted and the economy of logging here is a revelation to Canadians after the prodigal methods of their native land — especially on the Pacific Coast. Not a whit is wasted, even the branches and twigs will henceforth be utilized, and the sawdust bagged up by a careful Government. For wood is wood in England, for all they have two million five hundred thousand acres of forest in the British Isles. Trees grow fast here with the mild winters and the lumbermen remark on the width of the yearly rings compared to ours at home. Eighty years have these trees been ripening for the axe, and experts think they would only deteriorate if left now. When this acreage is shorn the Royal Forester intends to plant it with Douglas firs from British Columbia.

CHICAGO GETS THE GOLD.

$3,300,000 FOR FOOD AND DRINK OF CONVENTION VISITORS.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 5.—Chicago is preparing to entertain 100,000 visitors to the two political conventions. It is estimated that 25,000 are already here. Reservations have already reached the limit, and the overflow is being sent to family hotels miles beyond the downtown district. The average price it will cost per day for hotel accommodations for each visitor is $5 for room and $4 for food.

It is estimated that some 20,000 are stopping with friends. Eliminating them, 80,000 will pay to Chicago hotels, restaurants, cabarets and saloons about $825,000 a day, when incidental expenses are estimated at a low figure.

With the convention scheduled for four days, and it may last longer, the Chicago receipts foot up the comfortable sum of $3,300,000.

Ottawa's White Elephant

Sewage Tank, is Asked $21,000 For Site and Had to Abandon It

TORONTO, June 6.—After the city of Ottawa had spent $80,000 in concrete work and excavation for the site of a septic tank, the Board of Health vetoed the scheme and forbid the municipality to empty the effluent into the Ottawa River. The city is now appealing from the arbitrator's award which requires it to pay $21,000 for the property expropriated from the Slater estate. After hearing arguments this morning the Appellate Division reserved judgment to allow the city to determine whether it is willing to give the property back to the former owners, in which case the question of damages will be very much narrowed.

"Can't you abandon the property?" Chief Justice B. M. Meredith asked City Solicitor Proctor. "What have you done to injure it?"

Mr. Proctor explained that there had been excavation done, and that concrete had been put on it. He said it would cost $30,000 to put the property into such condition that it could have drainage, and so that it could be used for building purposes. It was worth little for anything but piling lumber on.

EXCESSIVE.

Mr. Proctor went into the assessment of adjoining properties, and showed that the last sale in the neighbourhood had been in 1905 at $400 an acre. The sum of $21,000 for eight and a half acres was excessive.

Mr. Justice Lennox—"The assessments show that the city valued the property pretty high, and the other people valued it pretty low."

Mr. Justice Riddell — "What are you willing to pay for it?"

Mr. Proctor—"Fifteen hundred dollars an acre. Three times what the adjoining properties are assessed for."

Counsel for the estate upheld the award on the ground that that end of the city was growing.

"Then it will be money in your pocket to get it back again," commented Mr. Justice Riddell.

"If there's money in it, you ought to have it, if the city will give it back," added the Chief Justice.

ENGLAND BUYS LINERS

Nearly $1,000,000 Paid for Former Hamburg-American Vessels.

BALTIMORE, June 5.—The Atlantic Fruit Company, of which Baltimore is a principal port of call, has sold its steamers Sarnia and Siberia for $1,000,000 to interests identified with the British Government.

The Siberia is now at New York and the Sarnia is on its way to that port. A certified cheque for $857,000 was paid over to the company for the Siberia, and the agreement calls for a sum almost as great for the Sarnia.

The two steamers formerly were owned by the Hamburg-American Line, and were sold to the Atlantic Fruit Company since the war began for $27,000. They are about 2,400 tons each.

SHOCK TO HIS SISTER.

LONDON, June 8.—No one in the city received a greater shock than did Earl Kitchener's sister, Mrs. Parker. She was engaged this morning in a stall in Caledonian Market, where a bazaar was being held for war charities, and had for sale autographed photographs of her famous brother. One of these photographs which had been in the possession of Queen Mary was offered at auction and brought £5.

CHICAGO, June 7.—A hundred persons were killed, and three hundred hurt as a result of a tornado in Northern Arkansas last night.

The damage will run into millions.

DANGEROUS PRACTICE BY SMALL BOYS

Some of Them Will Be Injured or Killed Unless Discontinued

An automobile owner has called attention to the practice of boys standing at the side of the road, and as soon as a car comes along they rush across in front of the automobile and it is more good luck than good management that they have escaped serious injury. There are getting to be so many automobiles in the city that the boys should at least not place themselves in a position where the chances of getting injured are greatly increased.

Must Vacate Present Quarters

Property Committee Serves Notice on the Utilities Commission

The Property Committee of the City Council will ask the Utilities Commission to vacate the quarters at the City Hall now occupied as a laboratory, in order that the room might be converted into a proper office for the Relief Officer and the Sanitary Inspector. The room will be properly renovated and the telephone now located in the Assessor's office will be installed in the room, which up until a couple of days ago was occupied by Sanitary Inspector Spence and Relief Officer Miller. For some unaccountable reason they were asked to vacate the office.

The Property Committee met last evening and decided to ask the Utilities Commission to vacate the quarters. The room contains nothing but a few testing instruments, a sterilizing tank, and an abundance of rubbish. The Committee will also authorize the City Auditor to audit the books of the Sanitary Inspector in connection with the scavenging up to May 31st.

Normal School Closes To-morrow

The Normal School closes another year at noon to-morrow, when the present grade B Class of 180 candidates complete their examinations. On Friday the annual excursion will be held to Stoney Lake, leaving the George Street wharf at 8.45. An invitation from the Normal students was received by the Board of Education last night, and it was decided that as many of the members who could join the students in their last pleasant assembly before facing a cold world, should do so, and make the occasion as pleasant and memorable as possible.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The Property Committee of the City Council held a short but business-like session last evening. The City Solicitor will be asked to give an opinion regarding the legality of an account in which Dr. Amyot, M.O.H., is interested.

Board of Works.

The Board of Works of the City Council will meet this evening, when it is expected that Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Board, will make some enquiries respecting the authority represented by City Engineer Parsons.

Will Remove Telephone.

It is the intention of the Property Committee to remove the telephone at present located in the office of the City Assessor and have it placed in the office of Relief Officer Miller and Sanitary Inspector Cooper.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—In the Barriefield news of the Saturday Examiner I read: "I would also like to mention that all parties who have board bills against any men of the 93rd Battalion would kindly forward them to Capt. J. H. Burnham, etc."

I understand that the bills were issued by Capt. Burnham, signed by the soldiers and the parties with whom they boarded, and returned to Capt. Burnham some time before the departure of the 93rd Battalion. I also understand that cheques have been received by some of the people who boarded soldiers, but others have received no payment. I would like to ask "Why this state of affairs?" How can the parties to whom board bills are owing send in the bills to Barriefield when the bills are issued by Capt. Burnham, and have to be signed by the soldiers who are now at Barriefield?" I think, Mr. Editor, this matter should be looked into.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE TO CLOSE ON JUNE 9 FOR THE EXAMINATIONS

The Collegiate Institute will close on Friday, June 9, as a result of the Board of Education's adoption of Mr. Kenner's suggestion in the following:

This year the annual departmental examinations begin on Thursday, June 8th. As only fifth form pupils write on the 8th and 9th, it will be possible to dismiss that form on Wednesday, June 7th, and hold the rest of the classes until Friday afternoon, June 9th. As on the following Monday, June 12th, the pass junior matriculation and the honour matriculation examinations also begin, it will be necessary to declare a period of enforced idleness for the rest of the Institute on Friday, June 9th. Last year the fifth form closed on June 8th, and the rest of the school on June 11th.

To Found Library For Manual Training and Domestic Science

A library in connection with the manual training and domestic science classes of the public schools of this city was provided for in a recommendation introduced by Mr. John Crane at the Board of Education meeting last night. He stated that there were no text books on domestic science, and that if the Board established a library a small grant not to exceed $100 was allowed by the department. Mr. Crane suggested $15 be spent this year for the beginning of a library as an adjunct to this department. Inspector Mowat suggested that a similar sum be set aside for a manual training library. A motion covering this expenditure of $30 was presented by Mr. Crane, seconded by Dr. Burnham.

RUNYON PENS A SAD TALE OF CHICAGO NOISE

By Damon Runyon

CHICAGO, June 7.—They began paging people through megaphones around the Chicago hotel lobbies today. The noise exuded by the incoming delegates, candidates, statesmen, Senators, Congressmen, Justices of the Peace, authors, actors, coroners, County chairmen, taxpayers and peasants connected with the impending Republican National Convention have gradually grown to such volume that no ordinary two-cylinder bellhop could make his voice audible above the roar.

The lads have been going great guns in the face of strong opposition to as late as noon to-day. They were able to make their naked tones heard in their calls for 'Mist' Um-glum" at a distance of ten feet. Several of the hardier youths employed at the Congress and Blackstone Hotels claim a record of twelve feet off-hand paging up to 12.30 o'clock but about that time another New York train got in and all the hops succumbed and took to the megaphone.

It is alleged one boy lasted until 12.35 and that he might have kept going indefinitely had not the clerk handed him the name of Delegate Eufrazio Gallegos, of New Mexico, and Johannes C. Bernedsen, of California, for point paging. Then he had to quit, which was a great pity, as any boy who was able to go around with his mouth open for a couple of hours and survive the gaseous tobacco and conversational fumes which prevailed in the hotel lobbies and entitled to high honour.

Were this not a political essay it probably would be devoted to conjecture as to the places where they make all those bad cigars being smoked by the various factions here present; to the terrian of the country where the places are situate; to the climate, and to the habits and customs of the people; with some speculation as to how they make those cigars so bad.

Next to the cigars, the chief characteristic of the assemblage is the noise.

Although this was Sunday and a day on which sensible people go home to be annoyed by callers, the stir and bustle around the hotels grew stirrer and bustlier as each hour waxed and waned. The only real quiet places in the neighborhood were the community graveyards.

Mr. Ford's Presidential boom has never been especially virulent since this gathering set in, and just at present it lies so cold and still, yet withal so lifelike that many people fear the worst. It has been suggested in several quarters that an inquest be held to determine whether Mr. Ford's boom is suffering from rigor mortis, tire trouble or a dirty spark plug.

The Roosevelt boom which has been one of the really agile booms of the period, ceased straining at the leash to some extent to-day. This is not to suggest that it is wholly quiescent, but it is less uproarious.

Doctor (to wealthy lady, recovering after a severe illness)—"Have you no cheery friends who could come and stay with you?" Lady—"Oh, yes, but they wouldn't be a bit cheerful if they knew I was recovering."

WOMAN POLICE A SUCCESS.

Tried in Many Cities and Not Found Wanting.

It is only six years ago that Los Angeles first tried the experiment of making women regular members of its police force. The experiment, says the Anaconda Standard, resulted satisfactorily and the practice has spread to many of the larger cities of the country, including San Francisco, Chicago, Philadelphia and Cleveland. In fact, there are now twenty States in which women are on the police force in some of the cities.

Butte seems to be disposed to go into this matter. If the innovation is given a fair trial, it should prove successful, for there is much work of a police character which can be done by women and which cannot or will not be done by men. In cities where the experiment has been thoroughly tested the results have been satisfactory.

There are so many uses for mussed tissue paper that none should be cast away. It is good for drying mirrors and lamp chimneys; and if it is not too much mussed fold it carefully, roll it into a small roll and it will be useful when packing a trunk or grip.

Tries To Escape From Prison Via Coal Bin, But Lid Holds

NIAGARA FALLS, June 6.—Very much blackened by his excursion through the coal bunkers of the police headquarters, a prisoner, rejoicing in the unusual name of John Smith, was found crouching in a corner, and, hoping against hope, that a copper, who had entered the cellar on some errand, would not see him. But that was just what the policeman went and did. He not only saw him but seized him by the collar and yanked him out of the coal bunker and up the stairs and into the cell room, where he threw him into "a private room" with a grated iron door.

Smith and Louis Hoffman, the former 19 and the latter 26 years old, were arrested Friday afternoon on suspicion of having robbed the Frontier Brass company's office. Cell room was found for Hoffman in the regular part of the prison, but the only place for Smith was in a cell in the "ladies' department."

Wrenches Off Bar.

In the night he managed to wrench off a bar of his cell and then he pried loose the lock on the door. He sought to get out of the building via the cellar and a coal hole in the sidewalk, but the coal hole's lid was on. It was on tight. It was rusted on. Smith could not budge it. Search was made for him when he was missed toward morning, and though the cellar was visited, he was overlooked and remained in the coal bin until discovered later in the morning.

And such a scrubbing as they had to give him!

Miss Doty Asks $1,000,000 For Her Blighted Love

New York, June 6.—Miss Cassie Mansfield Doty, who prefers to have her antecedents remain a mystery, and who values her affections at $1,000,000, began action to recover that amount yesterday from William E. Smith for an alleged breach of promise to marry. Mr. Smith has about $5,000,000 left to him by his father, William Van Rensselaer Smith. He lives at the Waldorf-Astoria. When he learned that a young woman thought that he had injured her feelings to the extent of one-fifth of his fortune he was shocked into speechlessness.

David B. Simpson of No. 165 Broadway, filed the complaint for Miss Doty. Pressed for information concerning his client, he said that the facts essential to the proceeding appeared in the complaint. Further information will be made public at the trial if necessary. The complaint says definitely that Mr. Smith promised to marry Miss Doty when they were at the Fort Griswold Hotel, New London, Conn., July 16, 1911, just two days after Mrs. William Edgar Smith, formerly Miss M. Louise Curtis, obtained a divorce from Mr. Smith, in Reno, Nev.

Miss Doty says that Mr. Smith gave her an engagement ring and fixed Feb. 6, 1912, as the date of their wedding. The date meant a good deal to her, she says, and she began preparing elaborately for it. Details are lacking concerning the cause of Mr. Smith's alleged reversal of decision, but Miss Doty says that he not only failed to appear for his wedding but refused flatly to marry he at any time or place.

Mr. Smith referred all inquirers to his attorney, Winston H. Hagen, of No. 49, Wall Street, who in turn referred them back again, saying that he had instructions to say nothing.

William Van Rensselaer Smith, the father of the defendant, was an associate of the Arbuckle brothers, and made his fortune in sugar and coffee. He left $5,000,000 in trust for his son and a large estate to his wife. The son married Miss M. Louise Curtis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow H. Curtis, in 1906. Five years later she divorced him. And it was only a little later than that, Miss Doty says, that her affections began to be "disregarded and blighted, her feelings lacerated and her spirit wounded."

"She has been humiliated in the presence of her friends and of the world," her complaint says, and more particularly, "has lost an advantageous marriage, the defendant being wealthy and of good social position."

MISS DOTY AND MR. SMITH'S MOTHER WERE TOGETHER AT HOTEL.

New London, Conn., June 6.—Miss Cassie Mansfield Doty spent three weeks at the Fort Griswold Hotel here in 1911 with Mrs. William Van Rensselaer Smith, mother of William E. Smith. Mr. Saxton, manager of the hotel, says that he recalls her stay. No facts of the alleged engagement, on which Miss Doty now sues for an alleged breach of promise to marry, were known at the hotel.

Horsewhipped, Husband Relents And Aids Wife

NEW YORK, June 6.—Persons sitting in the lobby of the Ansonia Hotel, Seventy-fourth street and Broadway, were thrown into excitement early last night when they saw a handsomely gowned young man snatch from beneath her coat a riding crop and begin to belabor a man whom she had just requested to be paged.

Hotel attendants ran to the rescue of the man, but not before he had been struck sharply across the face and body. While women screamed the attendants took the whip away from the woman.

With his face livid where the blows of the whip had fallen, the man shouted:—

"Get a policeman. That woman is my wife, but she has publicly horsewhipped me and I want her arrested."

Several persons ran into Broadway and began to blow police whistles. The excitment spread, and when Policeman William Porter appeared several hundred persons were jammed in the lobby. To the policeman the woman said she was Mrs. Helen G. Hart, of the Berkeley Hotel, Seventy-fourth street and Amsterdam avenue, and that the man she had horsewhipped was hr husband, Albert J. Hart. She accused her husband of having hired detectives to follow her.

Taken to the West Sixty-fourth St. police station, both seemed to become cooler.

While awaiting their turn to tell their stories to Lieutenant Leary, who was at the desk, both listened attentively to a woman with a two-year-old child, who was telling ho her husband, a chauffeur, allowed her only twenty-five cents a day for expenses and beat her when she failed to explain to his satisfaction how this money was spent.

Evidently the story touched the couple for Mrs. Hart slided to the woman as she sobbed out her story and slipped into her hand a ten dollar bill. Not to be outdone, Mr. Hart followed with a five dollar bill, and the woman wept her thanks. As the woman turned to leave the station house, Mrs. Hart pointed to the baby and whispered to her husband:—

"Maybe if we had one like that we wouldn't be in so much trouble."

Evidently the remark softened Mr. Hart's determination to force his wife's arrest, for when he found that it would be necessary to hold her for trial this morning he asked the amount of bail necessary to secure her release over night.

"Five hundred dollars," replied Lieutenant Leary.

Unable to raise the amount at the time Mr. Hart hurried away in a taxicab and returned with Harrison K. McCann, of the Berkeley Hotel. After a whispered conference with the Lieutenant Mr. Hart placed a watch valued at $250 upon the desk and added to it Mr. McCann's automobile as bail for his wife's release. A moment later wife and husband hurried away.

CARPENTIER A SOLDIER FIRST.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight champion, now serving with the aero detachment of the French army around Verdun, declined an offer of $100,000 to box one twenty-round bout, and two exhibition contests in Buenos Ayres, according to Promoter Marcel Peacan Del Sar, who sailed for South America, accompanied by several American boxers, who will take part in a ring carnival in Argentina during July and August. Peacan Del Sar several weeks ago visited Carpentier in Paris, the young heavyweight receiving permission to leave the front for the conference, but he could not sway him from his desire to remain with the army.

"You could not tempt me with a million dollars," Carpentier said.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE NUMBER OF PRISONERS

GERMAN ATTACKS ARE REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSSES

MONTREAL USING WHOLE ARMY CORPS OF GOOD 'IRON MEN"

Approximately $120,000 was wagered by some seven thousand Montreal racing fans who braved the elements on Saturday to patronize the iron-men at the Dorval meeting, says the Montreal Herald. The crowd was one of the largest that has turned out in two years at a local track, and hundreds of bettors were shut out, unable to battle their way through the crowds which surged in solid formation around the machines.

The above conclusion that the sum stated, $120,000, was wagered is arrived at on the basis of the betting in one race, the fourth, which is taken as being representative of the day's business. The wagering on this race was as follows:

21 tickets at $25	$ 525
537 tickets at $10 ...	5,370
914 tickets at $5	4,570
3,396 tickets at $2	6,792
Total	$17,257

There were seven races on the afternoon's card. In some the wagering fell slightly below the total of the fourth event. In others it probably went a trifle higher. Therefore, it is fair to assume that during the afternoon, in the vicinity of $120,000 was passed into the mutuels, and returned minus the percentage.

There is serious danger of a shortage of rennet supply for cheese-making.

Before the war calves' stomachs, which are used in the preparation of rennet, were largely obtained from European countries with which communication is now cut off.

In order to make good the deficiency the Ontario Department of Agriculture advises that the stomachs of all calves slaughtered in this Province be saved and that those doing the slaughtering get into communication with managers of cheese factories or District Representatives of the Department of Agriculture as to how they should be disposed of.

The stomach oof any calf that has been fed wholly on milk is useful for the purpose required. It is well, in other cases, that the calves should have one or two feedings of milk before being killed.

Iron with Phosphorus is the Greatest Nerve Tonic Known to Medical Science

Ironized Iron and Phosphorous is a new discovery in nerve tonics.

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find time the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood corpuscles. The moment that phosphorus is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your nerves once again. Without phosphorus the system becomes weakened, your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your hands, head and legs begin to shake through loss of control of your nerves. One is taking medicine for kidney trouble another is taking laxative every night, others taking patentmen spring tonics, some can't sleep for twitching nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never ailed you and you have no person to blame now but yourself if you do not come at once by going to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Ironized Phosphorus with iron and take one or two tablets after each good meal. Give yourself a good ice cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well; eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables, fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Here is good advice which millionaires are paying specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, eat well, sleep well, work well, digest well look well. As we are here only for a short stay so why not be healthy, strong, vigor and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk as they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with just ordinary Ironized Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like a giant. Ironized Phosphorus with iron does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is taken up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city at either of F. C. Webber's stores at 50c a box.

Ans.: "You do? Well! What is it?"

Ques.: "Working Time, my boy, working time—the time every workman sells you every day. How do you check it?"

Ques.: "They're human beings? Of course, Yes—well, now, who checks the timekeeper? And who checks the man who checks the timekeeper? Why not cut out all the guess-work and let a cold-blooded machine do the work? Print unchangeable figures under lock and key in and out shifts, four or six times a day, if necessary, giving Records that form an original PRINTED wage sheet."

Ans.: "Sounds good—what's the answer?"

Ques.: "Well the answer is an International Time Recorder. Your competitors are using it. Thousands of the World's greatest manufacturers are doing likewise. Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

CHAPTER XXXI.

PEACE AND PROSPERITY.

The village of Freekirk Head prospered once Code Schofield, Bijonah Tanner and Jed Martin had started the ball rolling. Inside a week another large consignment of fish arrived. Boughton was ready for it and for all that could came, he said, in the next two months.

This was news to the ears of Code Schofield and the crack crew of the Charming Lass, and nine days after they had picked up their moorings in the little crescent harbor they were off again, salt and bait laden, for the Banks, expecting to do a little haddocking if they failed to load down with cod before they disappeared in October.

Seven schooners sailed with him that day, and at the end of nine weeks, the Lass weighed anchor and charged home with the first halibut that had come into Freekirk Head for years. On this trip, when he was left in peace, Code displayed all the remarkable "nose" for fish that his father had before him.

And when he had weighed out the last of his halibut Bill Boughton led him into the little office of the fish-stand and offered him a quarter interest in the business.

Thereafter Code was to make only such trips as he could spare time for, and Pete was to have charge of the Lass on other occasions.

He had proved himself worth his salt in the eyes of the whole village, and Boughton needed someone to do the heavy work, while he collected most of the profits. This business future and three thousand dollars in the bank, led Code one day to send to St. John's for an architect, and to haggle with Al Green concerning the cost of a piece of ground overlooking the blue bay.

The very night that Code and Elsa had their last talk Nat Burns was smuggled aboard a motor sloop lying in Whale Cove and taken over to Eastport, where he was turned loose in the United States.

Half of the value of the Nettie was eaten up by his debts and damage settlements, and so, the better to clear the whole matter up, he sold her at auction inside of a week and departed with the remnants of his cash to parts unknown.

Since that time not a word or trace of him had been heard in Freekirk Head except once. That was when the St. John's paper printed a photograph of an automobile that made a trip across the Hudson Bay country. Beside the machine stood a man in furs who was claimed by all who saw the picture to be Nat Burns. Was he running a trap line in the wilds with the Indians, or was he a passenger in the car under an assumed name?

Elsa Mallaby did not even wait for the departure of the Charming Lass on her second voyage before she acted on a determination that had come to her. She shut up Mallaby House entirely and with Caroline as her companion started on a trip around the world, promising to be back in three years.

But she did not go on the mystery schooner nor did anybody ever see or hear of her again.

It soon developed that the government officials were hard after the boat that had impersonated a gunboat and would make it very hot both for the owners and crew. Elsa knew this the day she made her final triumphant dash into Freekirk Head, and that was the reason the ship only stayed ten minutes.

So quietly and skilfully was the whole thing managed that in the excitement of Code's arrest, everyone thought Elsa and her sister had come on the evening boat from St. John's.

Not three men in the island would have connected her with the strange craft and two of those weren't sure enough of anything to speak above a whisper. The third was Code Schofield.

Captain Foraker took the mystery schooner outside the harbor, pointed her nose straight south by the compass and held her there for a matter of ten days. At the end of that time he was in danger of pushing Haiti off the map, so he went to Port-au-Prince and sold the schooner at a bargain to the government, which at that time happened to need a first class battleship. Then Captain Foraker and the crew divided the money (by Elsa's orders) and returned to the States.

It was only after the return from his second cruise that Code paid attention to Nellie Tanner. Something in him that respected her trouble and Elsa's confession at the same time had kept his lips sealed during that short stay at home. But one Sunday after the second trip they climbed to the crest of the moutain back of the closed Mallaby House, and Code told her what had been in his heart all these years.

For a while she said nothing. The sun was setting over the distant Maine coast and the clouds all round the horizon were wonderful masses of short-lived rainbow texture. The sea was the pink and greenish blue of floating oil.

"You get me a trifle shop-worn," she said at last, laughing uncertainly.

"Then I get you?" He had turned toward her with a flash of boyish eagerness. One look at her radiant face and shining eyes found the answer.

"Shop-worn?" he said after a while. "Well, so am I, a trifle, but not in the way you mean. If having the down knocked off one and seeing things truer and better for it is being shop-worn, then thank God for the wearing.

"It has been a roundabout way for us, little girl, but at last our paths have met, and from now on, God willing, they shall go together. Come, I want to show you something."

They walked through the woods until they found the place where the surveyors had laid out the foundation plan for the little house. There they found an interested couple gravely discussing a near-by excavation with the aid of a blue-print.

Presently the couple turned around, and the lovers clutched each other in amazement.

"Bless me," gasped Code, "if it isn't ma and Pete Ellinwood!"

THE END.

Had Palpitation

OF THE HEART

ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Don't use soaps and prepared shampoos that contain too much alkali, fr this is very injurious as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt, and dandruff.

ENGINEER FACTOR IN PREPAREDNESS

His Genius Must be Largely Depended Upon in Any Scheme of National Defence.

In all the defence preparedness this country is meditating, says the Boston Globe, engineering looms as a very important factor. Everywhere on land and water the products of engineering skill and daring are in evidence. Railroads, bridges, dams, waterways, forts, canals and every conceivable defensive apparatus emphasize the activity being shown by engineers in all parts of the United States.

The most remarkable successes have been made in half a century by engineering forces. The older generation can recall when electricity, steel, iron, labour saving machines and tall buildings were not the powerful agents they are to-day in advancing the progress of our States and cities. Much of this progress is due to the services of engineers.

Engineers are different from many other classes of workers. They must not make miscalculations, for they they do there is loss of money and disasters of an appalling nature. An engineer never meets the same conditions twice. The climate, the process of manufacture of the materials he uses, or the elements of weather may injure his work, even though his calculations are flawless. No excuses offered by him are considered satisfactory in view of the claims he made before the beginning of a great public improvement.

In these modern days there are few groups of business men who do not come more or less in touch with engineering matters. Many of the various enterprises of State or municipality call for the highest type of engineering. The cost of these undertakings has added very materially to the debts of communities, yet when satisfactorily executed there is never public complaint. Engineers, like architects, have accomplished much toward beautifying our communities, and they deserve much more credit than they usually receive for the excellence of their performances.

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach, others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

He—"There was a time when you wouldn't pass me by without speaking. She—"Yes there was a time when I wouldn't pass any old thing."

Damage Done By Lightning

Barn of Mr. M. Fitzpatrick, Asphodel Was Hit on Sunday

HASTINGS, June 6. — A very severe electrical storm passed over this district on Friday last, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain.

Another storm visited us on Sunday afternoon, during which the barn of Mr. M. Fitzpatrick, of Asphodel, was struck by lightning and two hogs killed. We learn, however, that no further damage was done, the building being protected by lightning rods.

Our citizens turned out almost "en masse" on Tuesday morning last to give the 83rd Battalion a parting salute as the trains halted for a short time at the G.T.R. Station here. A number of our people had friends on board, and were anxious to get a glimpse of them, leaving as they were for Barriefield for a limited stay before leaving for service overseas.

Rev. Isaac Snell is in Peterborough attending the different sessions of the Conference. His pulpit was filled on Sunday by Mr. Winter, of Campbellford.

Rev. G. Andrews, of Pontypool, in company with his sister, Miss Mable, of Norwood, called on friends here during the week.

The special services held in the R.C. Church during the week were well attended. Rev. Father McCarthy, a one-time resident of Hastings, assisted, and was welcomed by his old friends here.

The local banks were closed on Saturday in honour of His Majesty's birthday, and some of the clerks spent the day out of town visiting with their parents.

Pte. John King, of Barriefield, spent the week-end in town.

During the severe storm on Friday night the electric lights were put out of commission, and consequently the lecture, "That Boy," which was to have been given by Mr. Harry Scriver, of Portland, had to be postponed.

Thursday last was "Ascension Day," and services in keeping with the event were observed in some of the churches.

Corp. H. Hicks, of Barriefield, spent the week-end at his home here.

Mrs. (Rev.) Snell is in Peterborough with friends.

Mr. Allan Greenley, of St. Catharines, was home for Saturday and Sunday.

Capt. Walter Thomson, of Barriefield, spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. J. Pringle, of Westwood, paid us a short visit during the week.

Mr. J. Smith, of Belleville, spent a short time in Hastings on Tuesday.

Miss Mulhern, of Campbellford, is visiting friends in town.

Word is to hand of the marriage of Mr. Harold Burns, son of Rev. Burns, formerly of Hastings, to Miss Margaret Foster, youngest daughter of the late David Foster, of Norwood. Their friends here extend heartiest congratulations. We learn that the young couple will take up residence in Toronto.

Miss Ashley, of Stirling, was a week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Barrigan.

Miss Carrie Doysee spent Sunday in Peterborough.

Several June weddings are anticipated in this section.

Congratulations are extended to Miss M. Drope, well known here, on the occasion of her graduation from the Nichols Hospital, Peterborough.

The I.C.D.E. is, according to request, having the concert, "What Would a Gentleman Do?" repeated on Wednesday of the present week. This was given a short time ago, and met with great success.

The water wagon will do duty during the summer season, operated by Mr. J. Gould.

Mr. Walter Scott, son of Mr. R. Scott, Norwood Road, who has been attending college at Guelph, we understand, has enlisted for service at the front.

LORD KITCHENER IN MANY ACTIVITIES AND CRUISER ON WHICH HE MET HIS FATE

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Successful Hiding Place

By JOHN L. LARNED

Talking about hiding things in places no one would suspect, the way to do it is to put them in such plain view that the seeker can look right at them. A good way is to give them to him.

I never felt so much doubt as to my being fitted for detective work as once when I was fooled by an old woman crook whom I knew to be guilty of what I was trying to prove on her. My chief told me one day that a number of banknotes had been stolen from a cashier's drawer, and he wanted me to get on to the thief. I interviewed the cashier, who told me that a certain man had been in the store when he placed the bills in the drawer and saw him do it. The cashier was called to the rear for a few minutes, leaving the man where he was outside the counter. When he returned the man was gone and so were the notes.

Fortunately the cashier could give a pretty accurate description of the bills. They were all fives, all new and all on the same bank. The suspected man was arrested, but nothing was found on him but a little silver change. It was evident that he had got rid of the bills. I nosed around among his haunts for awhile, hoping to learn something. At several stores in the neighborhood I left a description of the bills and asked the proprietors to let me know if any of their customers presented one of them.

Happening in at one of these stores later on I was shown a bill answering a description of those stolen. It had been paid for groceries by an old woman who lived near, she receiving $2 or $3 in change. I gave the grocer another bill for it and took it to the cashier from whom the money had been stolen. He identified it as one of the lost notes.

Investigation showed me that the old woman and the man suspected of stealing the money were known to be cronies. She was a notorious receiver of stolen goods, and there could be no doubt that she was spending the stolen money. Doubtless she had the whole or what was left of it in her possession, for the man who had been arrested for stealing it would not dare carry or pass any of it himself and would not be likely to have more than one confederate in the matter. Added to this, I was told by one of her neighbors that she knew the old woman had the money in her possession.

I preferred not to take the chances of making a slip by getting out a search warrant, so I suddenly appeared at the woman's house, locked the door on the inside and went to work. Beginning in the garret, I found it pretty dark and called on the occupant for a light. She gave me a candle, making no comment on my proceedings whatever, taking the trouble to light it herself. Having finished the garret, ripping up loose boards in the floor and tearing away plastering, I descended to the second story, where I ransacked every nook and cranny. Being an old hand at the business, I looked especially in shoes, in crockery, in stoves—indeed, in any receptacle where one would ordinarily not expect a hiding place because it was in such plain view. I stretched an arm up a chimney and pulled a lot of soot down on me, but no bills. Coming on down to the main floor, I looked in closets, under carpets, in everything hollow. Having finished this I soon went through the cellar, extending my candle between the joists where they rested on the brick walls and turning over everything it contained. From the peak of the roof to the cellar floor nothing was found.

Going to the main floor, I found the old woman peeling potatoes as unconcernedly as if she were not under the slightest suspicion. Placing the candle on the table, I sat down on a chair to rest and think over what I had better do. I did not think to blow out the candle, which had burned low. Indeed, it had reached some folded paper that had been wrapped around its bottom to keep it steady in the socket, which was too large for it.

"Are you through with the light?" asked the old woman.

"Yes. I confess you've beaten me. I know there are some stolen banknotes in your possession, but I can't find them."

She blew out the candle and resumed her work of peeling potatoes.

"Tell me where the stuff is, mother," I added after some thought, "and I'll get you off."

"Oh, you'd better go over the house again. You might find it next time, and you may do enough damage to make it pay me to collect from you."

She gave me a knowing look when she said this. I knew it meant something, but I was a trifle slow in interpreting it.

"Oh, yes," I said presently. "You should be paid for the damage I've done. How would one of the bills suit you?"

"It's worth two of 'em."

"All right. Tell me where you've got the bills hidden and I'll give you $10 for the damage and no prosecution."

"No questions asked?"

I knew the loser of the money wished to get all of it that remained unspent, so I agreed that she needn't tell from whom she received the swag, whereupon she pointed to the candle she had given me and said:

"They're there."

They were wrapped around it.

He was Embarassed.—Senor Enrique Creel, as Mexican Ambassador said at a dinner in Washington, apropos of unpleasant truths: "Why should we ever tell them? They are always unnecessary and how" they would! I have heard of an American [illegible] whose wife said to her rather husband fondly: "You were embarrassed when you proposed to me, Percival, were you not?" "Yes," the man answered, "I owed $60,000."

PUT OFF TEIPER TRIAL TILL FALL TERM OF COURT

BUFFALO, June 6.—John Edward Teiper, accused of the murders of his mother and brother on the Orchard Park highway last January, will not be tried until the September term of Supreme court. That was definitely decided by Justice Emery in Supreme court when he granted the application of Attorney Edward R O'Malley, of counsel for the accused young man, for a lengthy adjournment of the case.

In his application for the adjournment Attorney O'Malley contended the present low physical condition of Grace J. Teiper, precluded the possibility of her taking the witness stand at this time, and as she might prove a very material witness for the defence, the omission of her testimony would tend to impair Teiper's chances of proving his innocence.

Resists Adjournment.

District Attorney Guy B. Moore vigorously resisted the effort to obtain the adjournment, presenting affidavits from two physicians in which it was held the taking of testimony from Grace Teiper in her home would in no way injure her. In fact, the physicians agreed that to remove from her mind the worry incident to her knowledge of the fact that she was to be summoned as a witness might even tend to help her toward a more rapid recovery.

The affidavits were obtained from Dr. Francis J. McGuire and Dr. James W. Putnam. Both told in much detail of their examinations of the injured girl and of the conclusions reached.

Oppose Immediate Trial.

It was apparent from the first, however, Justice Emery did not care to assume the responsibility of forcing the case to an immediate trial, in view of the strong affidavits presented several days ago by Attorney O'Malley.

"We must do nothing here that would in any way impair Miss Teiper's chances of recovery," said he. "Also we must guard the legal rights of the defendant, and as he is now in prison facing a most serious charge, he must be given every opportunity to establish his innocence.

"There is a grave question just now as to the effect that might be produced on Miss Teiper's physical condition by bringing her into court. To take her testimony at her home might not prove entirely satisfactory, and as I can see no way in which the interests of the people will suffer by an adjournment of this case, I direct that it be put over."

The next term of the Supreme court at which criminal cases may be heard convenes the first Monday in September. Teiper's trial will in all likelihood be called at that time, Justice Harry L. Taylor is scheduled to preside at that term of court.

Teiper was not in court this morning to hear the final arguments for an adjournment of the case.

The Krupp firm, which recently purchased land in Munich on which to build an artillery factory, has just purchased a factory at Dessau for the manufacture of shells.

Bertha Krupp was married in 1906 to Lieut. Dr. Gustav von Bohlen und Halbach, who is now at the head of the Krupp works. Emperor William acted as godfather to their first son, born on August 13, 1907.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Why Demanded

"Gin Pills did for my husband and me what no other remedy could. I have advised two other parties to use them, one of them being my mother who has been a great sufferer for upwards of 20 years, and one that cured her, so as to enable her to sleep on her left side, something she could not do for many a year. The doctors said her they could not cure her, but could relieve her by an operation for a floating kidney, but on account of her age they did not think it advisable for her to go. Upon my advice she tried Gin Pills which cured her and for which she is ever ready to speak in terms of praise."

LABOUR IS SCARCE AND WAGES GO UP

Wages of common labor have gone up indicating growing scarcity, over an area which represents sixty-one per cent of the total population of the United States on the basis of the 1910 census, according to an analysis in the current issue of the Engineering Record. Still more acute conditions, it is said, are already being felt over an area in which twenty-seven per cent. of the total population of the country is concentrated. This has occurred at the very beginning of the construction season and before the annual demand for farm labor has made itself felt.

Several contracting firms with work at present going on in most sections of this country and in Canada say that there is difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply of good labor on all their work except for that on the Pacific coast and in the Southwest. Less than ten per cent. of the total population of the country resides in these sections. The contractors referred to, who have a view of the entire country, are without exception anxious about the outcome of the labor situation.

Exclusive of Texas, which has been included with the Southwest, the Southern States contain about twenty-two per cent. of the country's population. Negro labor usually considered much less efficient than foreign labour will probably come north from these States. That the remaining Western States, which contain but seven per cent. of our population, can supply much labour for work outside their boundaries is considered doubtful. Wages in these States and on the Pacific coast are also normally higher than in other sections.

It is further significant that in the sections in which plenty of labor has been reported construction work has not yet really become active. On the whole, the prediction seems justified that labor is going to be difficult to procure this summer and difficult to hold without advancing wages.

A feature of the situation is to be found in the crop reports. A materially smaller acreage of wheat and other crops has been planted. Fewer men will be required to harvest them, and it is expected that the country will avoid producing too great a surplus, which would force prices down and might have serious consequences.

Although the demands for financing our foreign commerce are apt to be heavy, there is an unprecedented supply of money in this country. Bank deposits in all sections have increased from ten to twenty-three per cent., and practically the whole country is in a position to buy. This means that there will be no slowing down of industrial production and that the industries will be strong bidders for labour. It may be significant that the heaviest gains in bank deposits correspond with the shaded areas of the labor map.

PARIS HAILS SEA VICTORY.

Latest Reports Convince the French Press That the British Won.

PARIS, June 6. — The evening newspapers Sunday hailed the North Sea battle as a British victory, the headlines contrasting strikingly with Saturday's apologetic attitude, which was due to insufficient information.

The editorial comment shows evident surprise at the frankness of the British naval authorities. One newspaper says this is the first time any belligerent has been exactly truthful.

Forced To Leave School, Had St. Vitus' Dance

Astonishing Cure of a This Nervous Trouble Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Here is a case where life-long gratitude will be felt for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As a school girl and in later life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to the rescue when the nerves gave out. Now a healthy, robust woman happily gives the credit to this great food cure for restoring her to health and strength.

Miss Sadie M. White, 38 Waterloo street, Fredericton, N.B. writes:—

"When ten years of age a friend of mine had St. Vitus' Dance and she had to leave school and go under a doctor's care. Instead of benefiting by the treatment she appeared to get worse. Her mouth and tongue became so swelled that she could scarcely take any nourishment. For two weeks she was this way and then took convulsions and nearly choked to death. She was ordered to the hospital, but soon got worse again. I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to her and she used nine boxes, steadily growing better. Three years later a severe fright brought on the nervous trouble again, and she suffered everything a human being could endure. Her mother bought a dozen boxes of Nerve Food, and with this treatment she was fully restored. I wish you could see her now, a strong, healthy, robust woman with two lovely babies. She still uses the Nerve Food when she feels out of sorts, but has had no return of the old nervous trouble."

For weak, puny, nervous children there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood, restores the starved nerves and start them on the way to health. When they fail to get proper nourishment from the food they eat, this food cure presents the necessary ingredients in condensed and easily assimilated form, and strength and vigor is restored. 50 cents a box, 5 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

Living Germans Envy Dead, Declare Swiss Travellers

Milan, Italy, June 7.—Travellers who have returned to Switzerland from Germany just before the frontier was again closed confirm the reports that the failure of the German army to capture Verdun has produced a pessimistic effect on the German public. Contrary to the official statements the situation in Germany is fast becoming strained and a feeling of great uneasiness is abroad.

The German chancellor openly endeavored to prevent the meeting of the Bundesrat, the different federal States having decided to put questions unpleasant to the Imperial government. Among these was a positive demand to discuss the scope of peace terms, and the submarine warfare, which resulted in the "diplomatic illness" of Admiral Tirpits, and an announcement of his resignation.

NECESSARIES LACKING.

A further concern was the attitude of the political parties, who openly decided to renounce their pact and to challenge the government to make a declaration for or against the annexationist policy. Finally, the feeling among the people is growing, owing to the distress. In many places articles of prime necessity are lacking. The authorities usually throw the blame on the wholesale dealers or speculators but the people are beginning to realize that the true cause is the dearth of necessary products, which is felt most keenly by the working classes.

Swiss travellers are painfully impressed by evidences of this distress on all sides. Financial men and manufacturers are showing deep concern. They are gradually losing hope of winning a complete victory, and only dare expect honorable terms of peace. The losses sustained by the German army are appalling. The lists are freely circulated and commented upon in private and public. When talking with the head of a manufacturing firm one traveller had a list shown him of 800,000 killed, and 1,000,000 more disabled for life. "How can we stand these continuous losses?" asked the manufacturer, and at that moment the battle of Verdun was at height. He shook his head ominously.

MEETINGS DISPERSED.

Other travellers witnessed demonstrations in Berlin, Leipsig, Chemnitz, Halle and Nuremberg, where the police had to disperse women and children by force of arms. All discussion of the annexation of new territory is loathed by the once free citizens of Hamburg, Lubeck, and Bremen. Commerce in these towns has suffered more from the war than anywhere else, and the inhabitants freely attribute their misfortunes to Pan-German megalomania.

The inhabitants of the Rhine districts have been shocked within the last few weeks by the endless trains of wounded soldiers coming from the front. It seemed as if the railways were unable to cope with all the traffic necessary for bringing back the wounded from the battlefields. The Swiss frontier was closed, partly to prevent travellers from bringing across the border reports of the harrowing things they have seen. Many of the wounded had only been summarily treated at the front and were still bleeding.

Whether these reports are exaggerated or not, they are evidence of the horrors which the inhabitants of the Rhine district are daily hearing and seeing. At some of the ammunition factories along the Rhine the workers are in a state of panic at the frequent incursions of French aeroplanes dropping bombs. They complain, saying it the government sent them to the trenches. The workers have made this declaration openly.

Wounded soldiers further talk freely of the sufferings they have endured at the front, and especially of the frequent want of rations and the iron discipline enforced, so that the living envy the dead.

Canadian Pacific at Lyons

An exhibition is taking place at Lyons, in France, and the pride of place in the Canadian section must be given to the Canadian Pacific Railway exhibit, comprising three stalls, and the painting, covering the back wall of the stalls, showing in a pictorial form the principal agricultural, mineral and industrial products of every Canadian Province and of Newfoundland, has attracted much attention. The officials of the French Colonial Office have paid two special visits to study this picture, and the French Government will adopt a somewhat similar method to educate the public in France as to the resources of the French Colonial possessions. On the right of this design is a large painting of the steamship "Empress of Russia," and underneath a panel of lettering in French, pointing out that the Dominion Express Company places the French manufacturer and exporter in touch with the Canadian importer. On the left of the design is a large painting of a C. P. R. train, and underneath a panel of lettering in French giving statistics about the Canadian Pacific. Underneath the whole is a huge map of the C. P. R. system, showing its steamboat connections with Europe, Asia and Australia, and paintings of all Canadian Pacific hotels.

* * * * * * *

The right side of the stall is taken up with an exhibit from the Province of Ontario, comprising numerous specimens of metals, canned goods, oils, marble slabs, honey, woods, and—what rather amused the French visitors—bottles of wine produced in Ontario. On the wall three British Columbia pictures showing big trees and salmon were prominent. The right section of the stall is devoted to a Quebec Government exhibit, and comprises two large cases of asbestos manufactures, a case of mica manufactures, mineral specimens, a display of wood samples mounted on a large stand, specimens of wood pulp and other interesting products. On the wall two large Nova Scotian pictures show the industrial development of that Province. At the bottom of both sides of the stall large photographic pictures depict scenes in every Province of Canada and the various activities of the C. P. R. Three special brochures have been prepared by the C. P. R. in French, one dealing with the industrial development of Canada; the second, entitled "La Nouvelle French" dealing with the French settlement of Canada and the cementing of friendly relations between Canada and France in the present war; and the third deals with interesting points along the C. P. R. The various Provinces also lent a plentiful supply of literature for which there was a great demand.

In the course of a conversation as to the practical result of the exhibition, Mr. Geo. McLaren Brown, European Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, showed confidence that there is a good opening for Canadian manufactured goods in France. The feeling of the French towards Canadians is most friendly. This has not only been produced by the bravery of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces fighting in France, but also by the fact that several thousands of French-Canadians are fighting actually in the ranks of the French army itself, and they have done much to tell their French comrades all about Canada.

PROPERTY DAMAGE HEAVY.

Town of Judsonia, Near Little Rock, Is Scene of Heaviest Loss.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 6.—At least fifty persons are believed to be dead and 250 injured to-day as the result of a series of tornadoes that swept through ten or more counties in Arkansas late yesterday.

All means of communication were cut off or crippled and early to-day, details of the tragedy were far from complete. It was feared the list of dead and injured would be greatly increased with later reports.

The greatest destruction was reported at Judsonia, a town of about 800 inhabitants about 50 miles northeast of Little Rock on the Iron Mountain Railroad. One-third of the town was destroyed. Twenty-five bodies and fifty injured were recovered from the debris last night. Rescuers, toiling in the darkness, kept up their work all night.

A message received early in the night said that 18 persons had been killed and many injured at Heber Springs, on the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad in Northern Kansas. Wires failed and no further information came through the night. Three white persons and two negroes were killed in Dalles County in the south central part of the state. At Hot Springs four were killed and eight injured. Three are known to be dead near Cabot, between Little Rock and Judsonia.

A white woman was killed and 15 were injured at Greenland in Washington County, in the northwestern part of the state.

At Morrilton, forty miles northwest of Little Rock, two negroes were killed, a negress was blown away and a white woman and several children were injured.

Only the extreme eastern and southern portions of the state appear to have escaped.

The property damage is believed to be very heavy.

ROLL OF HONOR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the majority of them are now in Europe, bravely battling for Canada and the Empire.

As particulars of Army Reservists are not available, these lists of those who have given up their lives for their country or been wounded in action are necessarily incomplete, and do not therefore indicate fully the extent to which the Company's officers and employees have participated in the great struggle.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESSING SACK AND CAP.

By Anabel Worthington.

Particularly as the spring season advances and foreshadows a delightful summer, most indispensable for wear with a good skirt or fancy petticoat. The boudoir cap is of course, to be desired in harmony with the sack.

In the model pictured, the dressing sack is in one piece; it is cut very full, allowing the figure to create its own folds. Style requirements are fully met by the cut of the sack and the ribbon introduced for trimming feature, but we know that the broad and embroidered collar with a frill following its outline, makes the charm of the garment; this trimming is repeated on the cuff of the short sleeve, but long sleeves may be used with only a band cuff. Ribbon fastens the sack and finishes the neck and at the waist it outlines the panel effect as well as adjusts the fullness of the sack. The cap has a gathered crown and the round is embraced with a ruffle gathered and cuff.

This pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. To make the design in size 36 you need 3¼ yards 44 inch material, 4½ yards ribbon and 6¾ yards edging for collar and cuffs.

To obtain the pattern send only 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Russian Offensive Continues On A Tremendous Scale

Austrians Driven Back Twenty-five Miles in Places---Lutsk is Reported Evacuated and Russians Have Captured 50,000 Prisoners, 120 Guns, 86 Machine Guns and Tons of Food Stuff and Equipment---Austrians Say Russians Are Using Shell in Unbelievably Large Numbers.

FIGHTING ON A FRONT OF 240 MILES

LONDON, June 8.—Confirmation of the Russian successes in the Czar's gigantic offensive on the Austrian front is contained in the report of the Austrian-Hungarian army headquarters which admits a retreat of three miles near Ofina in Northeast Bukowina.

The artillery attacks of the Russians are destribed as "tremendous."

The attack is going on all along the line from the Pripet marshes to the extreme southern end of the line, with the greatest concentration on the section between Brody and the Pruth. "The Russians," says the Austrian report, "are using shells in unbelievably large numbers."

The present fighting front is 240 miles in length.

To-day's official despatches make the total Austrians taken in the present advance fifty thousand, with 120 guns, 86 machine guns, and tons of food stuffs and equipment. It is estimated that the total Austrian casualties in this advance cannot be less than two hundred thousand.

LONDON, June 8.—A Central News despatch from Petrograd says the Austrians have evacuated Lutsk, in the face of the Russian advance, which has now driven the Austrians back about twenty-five miles at some points. Vast quantities of stores and many men and guns were captured.

RUSSIANS DRIVING ALL BEFORE THEM

Editor, Examiner:

LONDON, June 8.—Petrograd advices late this afternoon say that in addition to the capture of Lutsk, Russians have taken several other large towns on the Volhynia-Galician-Bukowina frontiers, and are still driving all before them, giving the fleeing Austrians no time to construct new defensive works.

It is expected that within a few days the Russians will be again clamouring at the gates of Lemberg and Warsaw.

SUCCESSFUL RAID BY ALLIED AIR MEN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 8.—An Allied air squadron has successfully bombarded the wharves at Hoboken, near Antwerp. The Germans are said to have been building destroyers at Hoboken.

Loss of Fort Vaux Admitted By French

Examiner Special:

PARIS (French Official), June 8.—The French War Office in its official statement at noon to-day admitted the occupation of Fort Vaux on the east bank of the Meuse by the Germans. The statement said: "After seven days of the fiercest of fighting the garrison at Fort Vaux was absolutely exhausted and could not prevent the occupation of the ruined fort by the Germans. The French hold the positions on the outskirts of the fort, and trenches on the swells to the right and left. All German attacks against these positions have been repulsed.

MONTREAL, June 8.—Special cables published here to-day say that owing to the fact that the British naval situation is secure, a large number of freight vessels recently commandeered by the British naval authorities will shortly be released, and it is expected much trade now going to neutral countries will return to Canada. It is also thought that freight rates between Canadian and British ports will drop thirty per cent.

LONDON, June 8.—There is some talk of Winston Churchill being chosen as the new head of the War Office, but newspapers point out that his genius and energy are, according to public opinion, discounted lately by the outstanding examples of bad judgment, and he has for the time being lost public confidence. It is stated to-day that Lloyd George had arranged to go to Russia with Kitchener, but was stopped by the call for his services in the Irish crisis.

FORCED OUT SALE

Beginning to-morrow, (Friday), the 9th day of June, the whole stock of general goods in the store, No. 424 George Street, nearly opposite the Examiner Office, is to be sacrificed regardless of cost or loss. The case of the premises expiring with the end of the month makes it obligatory that the landlord gets possession of the building for the purpose of making extensive repairs. "Necessity knows no law," and the liquidator has no alternative—no other store being available. The stock is doomed to slaughter, and the prices have to be split to splinters to make a swift clearance within the short time. Read the announcement on another page; watch for the opening, Friday morning, and bring your spare cash for sale bargains.

INTERNATIONAL ASSO'N AT THE CONVENTION

The convention of the Ontario Typographical Association, which opens here to-morrow, will likely be attended by either President Marsden G. To-morrow night the Printers are running a moonlight excursion in connection with the convention, and it is expected that there will be a large attendance of the general public.

HAS APPOINTED FOUR CATHOLIC CHAPLAINS

LONDON, Ont., June 7.—Bishop M. F. Fallon, of the Roman Catholic diocese of London, at the request of Sir Sam Hughes, has appointed four additional Catholic chaplains for overseas service. They are Rev. Father Costello, of St. Mary's church, London; Rev. Frank Powell, of the Basilian Order, a former member of the faculty of Sandwich College, who is a Londoner; Rev. Father Pickett, also of the Basilian Order; and Rev. Father Lowry, of Dublin, Ont. They will have a captain's rank and will don the uniform immediately.

COL. SHAW SHOT THROUGH THE HEAD LEADING HIS MEN

Former Peterboro' Officer of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons Held German Infantry at Bay With Only One Hundred and Fifty Men

TERRIBLE BOMBARDMENT

LONDON, June 7.—Several more Canadian officers who were wounded fighting after the first violent German onslaught have arrived in England. Hospital trains in all parts of the country are busy taking the rank and file, the less seriously hurt, whose wounds, being comparatively alight, have permitted of their being removed from the base hospitals in France. The story of the fighting in broad outlines has already been given.

Those who have come back are naturally only able to give personal impressions of what happened in their immediate vicinity. Rather than speak of what these impressions are they are more eager by far to ply the intending questioner with interrogations as to the present condition of matters on the Canadian front. Nevertheless what questions have been answered give some realistic particulars as to what it was like to bear the fury of the drive in earnest from the hordes of the Hun.

Seated in a verandah in a west end mansion which for many months had done duty as an officers' hospital, a captain from the West gave an account of a brilliant counter-attack in which some of General Hill's men also participated.

"You have some idea what a front trench is like. When fixed all square" he said "you know how the walls are as firm as if cut out of granite and of how the sandbags are about like a parapet of concrete, and to most eyes just as immovable. Well, we saw all this melt away. Down came tons of earth and big baulks of timber on some of our poor chaps, while others just held on while the internal business got hotter. The very ground at times seemed to be in one upheaval You can imagine what our front line was like when the enemy artillery lifted and their infantry came. Of course, there was precious little left in the way of man power to stop them. Col. Shaw, with no more than 150 men left, rallied these few to a certain point in the line. After keeping the enemy there at bay some time he succeeded in drawing off his own men the support trenches. A few minutes after he was shot through the head. If further proof is needed that the enemy had made great preparation for last week's attack it may be found in the fact that the regiments employed against the Canadians were the 101st, 103rd, and 104th Wurtembergers, who took part in the fighting round Douaumont and Vimy Ridge. They had been at the rear resting for a few weeks, and came up against the Canadians thoroughly fresh and fit, with new uniforms and officers. They were a splendid looking set. On Saturday the Canadians united with the French artillery, playing veritable havoc among the Germans, who were glad to evacuate several sectors of the captured trenches before ever the

LUTZOW'S LOSS NOW ADMITTED

Germans Confess That Huge 28,000 Ton Battle Cruiser Went to the Bottom After Skagerack Battle—Another Smaller Cruiser Was Also Sunk

THE NEWS WAS WITHHELD

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, June 8.—German official statement received in Amsterdam today, admits the sinking of the large battlecruiser Lutzow and the small cruiser Rostock in the Skagerak naval engagement. These boats sank on their way to harbour after the battle. Earlier mention of their losses was not made, say the despatches, because of "military considerations." The admission of the loss of the Lutzow and Rostock brings the total admitted to date German loss to twelve ships, with a total tonnage of 66,000 tons. The Lutzow was a battle cruiser of the Derfflinger type of 28,000 tons displacement, length 716 feet and a speed of thirty knots. She carried one thousand of a crew, her armament was eight 12-inch guns and twelve 5.9 inch guns. The Rostock was a small cruiser of the type of the famous Karlsruhe, 5,000 tons. Her chief armament was twelve 4.1 inch guns. She carried 373 officers and men. It is presumed many of the crew of both vessels were saved.

Roosevelt Outspoken

Flays German-Americans in Address Read to Convention

Examiner Special:

CHICAGO, June 8.—In a characteristic message to the Progressive Convention, read here to-day, Roosevelt said; 'Professional German Americans are at this moment serving notice on the members of your convention that your action must be taken with a view to the interes, not of the United States, but of Germany, and of that German-American vote which is anti-American to the core. I believe with all my heart that the action of these sinster professional German-Americans will be repudiated with angry contempt by the great mass of their fellow-citizens. Professional German-Americans are seeking to terrorize your convention; they wish to elect next November a man who shall not be in good faith, an American President but a viceroy of a foreign government." In conclusion, Roosevelt called on the convention for unity for Americanism and American preparedness.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., June 8.—With the Progressive nomination absolutely assured him and the Republican nomination seeming to be veering in his direction, ex-President Col. Roosevelt here to-day kept his ear on the Chicago wires, carefully waiting developments. He said this morning he would wait till this afternoon before replying to the invitation of the Republican convention to go to Chicago to address them.

Public Service of Intercession on Sat.

The churches of the city will unite on Saturday afternon for an hour of public prayer and intercession in Murray Street Baptist church, from 3 until 4 o'clock. This action arises out of a realization of the extremely critical condition of affairs in the war zone and will be a prayer for divine assistance. It is expected that this meeting will be largely attended. Rev. E. G. Peever, President of the Ministerial Association, will preside.

PROTECT THE BOULEVARDS

The City is grading and seeding with lawn grass the space between the curb and the sidewalk on the streets on which pavements have been laid.

The Council desires to improve the appearance of the City streets, and to do this the co-operation of the citizens is requested in order to make this new work a success. If the residents along these streets will water this new seeding until it has a good root growth, and when it is about three inches high begin cutting it with a mower set so that it will cut not less than an inch and a half from the ground they will be helping the work along. The citizens of the City generally can also help by respecting the work done on these streets and by preventing its destruction and mutilation either carelessly or wantonly. By order,

R. H. PARSONS,
City Engineer.

LIEUT. FIFE AND PTE. ANDERSON OF THE PRINCESS PATS ARE KILLED

Gunner Alex. Butcher on the Wounded List—Well Known Peterborough Boys Killed or Wounded in the Heavy Fighting on the Western Front.

THE HONOUR ROLL TO-DAY

KILLED IN ACTION.

Pte. Chas. Laidlaw Anderson, Princess Pats, and son of T. L. Anderson, 816 Water street, on June 1st.

Lieut. G. Stanley Fife, Princess Pats, son of Jas. A. Fife, formerly of the staff of the local Collegiate Institute.

WOUNDED.

Gunner Alex. Butcher, Canadian Field Artillery, son of Mr. John Butcher, Ashburnham.

DANGEROUSLY ILL.

Corp. Jos. Kelly, Mounted Rifles, formerly of Peterborough.

Once more is Peterborough bereaved as a result of the world war. Three of her native born sons are officially reported to have fallen in the recent heavy fighting around Ypres, and it is feared that the bad news already received is only a forerunner to a longer list of casualties. The lengthening of the honour roll is a convincing proof of the part Peterborough is playing in the great struggle. For weeks hardly a day has passed without a Peterborough name on the casualty list.

PTE. C. LAIDLAW ANDERSON.

Mr. T. L. Anderson, 816 Water street, received the tragic news this morning that his son, Pte. Chas. Laidlaw Anderson, machine gun section of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, was killed in action on June 1st. The message came officially from the Adjutant-General's Department, Ottawa, and naturally Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are overcome with grief. Their son, only nineteen years of age, with a fine scholastic record behind him and a brilliant future in front, has paid the price of empire, and the sorrow of his parents will be shared by a very wide circle of friends.

Pte. Laidlaw Anderson was born in Port Hope in September, 1896, and came to Peterborough with his parents sixteen years ago. He was educated in the local Public schools and Collegiate Institute. Afterwards he attended Toronto University for a year, studying medicine. Last summer, however, the call of the country for men proved stronger than the appeal of education and he answered the request from Kingston for students to attend the Royal School of Artillery for qualification as non-coms in the Canadian Field Artillery. He was one of a squad sent to Kingston by Major W. C. Ackerman of the 24th Battery and after qualifying was attached to the 33rd Battery at Kingston. Afterwards an injury to his leg made riding impossible and he was transferred to the Fourth Universities Company, Princess Pats' reinforcements at Montreal, going overseas with that unit in November last. He had been at the front since March last with the fighting Princess. Pats as a member of the machine gun section and met death in the glorious stand of the Pats at Zillebeke, where the famous regiment lost so heavily.

Pte. Anderson was a genial and very popular young man and the news of his death will come as a severe shock to a host of friends.

His father, Mr. T. L. Anderson, is a merchant tailor at 313 George street.

LIEUT. G. S. FIFE

Lieut. Gordon Stanley Fife, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Fife of Edmonton, formerly of Peterborough, was killed in action east of Ypres on Monday, June 5. Although his home has been in Edmonton during the past ten years, Lieut. Fife was a Peterborough boy. He was born here and for many years his father was colorsergeant of the Local Collegiate Institute staff.

Lieut. Fife received his early education at the Central School and at the old Collegiate Institute had in many respects a language career. Mod. Monday, June 5. Although his home and in English literature he also distinguished himself. As president of

Sir Sam Hughes Is Satisfied With Recruiting

TORONTO, une 8.—Sir Sam Hughes is greatly pleased with voluntary enlistment in Canada to date. The possibility of conscription here, or even national registration, is not being considered by the military council. This is the news brought back from Ottawa to-day by Major Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for this district, who laid before Sir Sam the views of the Toronto regimental commanders recommending registration. Sir Sam said the matter of registration was one of public policy, for the Dominion Cabinet to decide if it was necessary. Sir Sam says Canada is the only part of the Empire raising soldiers purely by voluntary enlistment, and she will live in history as a result of it. Of the half million soldiers asked for by Premier Borden, the Toronto military district has raised 75,000 of its 86,000 quota, the London military district 29,000 of 46,000, the Kingston-Ottawa district 35,000 of 53,000. In Ontario altogether 139,000 of the 185,000 called. The Maritime Provinces have raised half their quota. All the Western provinces have exceeded their share.

NEWS OF PETERBORO'S SOLDIER BOYS AT THE BARRIEFIELD CAMP

Sergt.-Major T. Miller of the 93rd is Brigade Sergeant-Major at the Big Camp---Recreation Tent For the Men to Be Erected---Many Local Applicants For the Canadian Army Service Corps---To-day's Military News.

Barriefield War Camp, June 6.—If the weather of to-day prevails for a short while it will please both officers and men in more ways than one as it will be possible to get more work done in all departments, the majority of the men to-day put in a hard day's drill while a large fatigue party were putting the ground into shape in the way of building drains and getting rid of the surface water.

The Pioneer staff under the capable charge of Sergt. Baumer are doing very efficient work they being very much in demand at all times, at present Sergt. Baumer has a number of men building guard houses and dinner tables for the men which when finished will prove a great benefit to all as up to the present when it rained the guards had no protection whatever and at meal hour the men instead of eating at tables in most cases came back to their tents which, of course, meant that there was a certain amount of refuse scattered around, but withal the medical officers have already commented the battalion on the cleanliness of the grounds.

Sergt. Watson and his men are busy building cookinerators and also a proper drainage system, which when finished will prove very benedcial to the health of the men in general as in future all refuse will be burnt and all surface water will be drained away very quickly.

At two o'clock to-day No's. 1 and 5 platoons paraded to the army Dental Corps at the East end of the grounds for teeth inspection and all men are given unbiased attention by a most efficient staff of Dentists of whom the men speak very highly.

It has been brought to our notice that the 93rd is still upholding their usual standard of good conduct as in conversation with the main guard at the bridge he informed me that he had 70 men up for orders in one night of duty and not one of those men were members of the 93rd which speaks well for all and no doubt Col. Johnston and his officers are proud of the record so far.

The members of the 93rd were very pleased to see a Peterborough boy attached to the camp post office, in the person of Pte. Harry White, formerly a member of Postmaster Edgar's staff for the past 3 years.

The scribes of the B.O.R. have been holding secret sessions of late and at last the mystery is devulged in the form of a camp magazine which made its first appearance this a.m. but unfortunately the editors of same, Pte. G. H. W. Field and his able assistant Pte. H. J. Browne were unable to supply us with an issue for publication owing to the demand and most likely they will have installed more improved machinery for printing the call has been so heavy.

The many friends of Sergt. Major, Thos. Miller will be very glad to hear of his promotion to Brigade Sergt-Major and no doubt he will prove the right man for the position. With his past active service experience and his genial disposition he is a general favourite with all in camp.

The large marquee purchased by the Sergt's mess of the 93rd arrived on the scene to-day and will be erected shortly to be used as a recreation room for the non-coms.

THE CONQUERING FORCE.

Crowned heads, wise heads, warrior heads are all paying high tributes to Kitchener. We might expect this from [illegible], but the most significant tribute comes from South Africa, where the Dutch-British premier, Botha, and the Dutch members of the Legislature united in paying homage to the memory of the man who a dozen years ago was their enemy; who conquered them in the field as British magnanimity of diplomacy conquered them in heart, by bestowing upon them the highest trust in the form of the gift of British freedom and the boon of self government. Conquest by guns left the Boers enemies still; but the higher conquest of soul made friends of foes. If the Boers had had to deal with Germany as a conqueror, they would by this time be all dead or still worse, slaves to German militarism and misrule.

WAIT AND HOPE.

It is a pleasure to be told, and we try hard to believe it, that Major Hamilton Gault, of Montreal, the "recruiting sergeant" of the "Princess Pats," is not dead as reported. The fact that the "Pats" themselves can muster few of the original enrolment, is proof that they have suffered more than decimation by getting into the thick of the fight. We are apt to accept the worst news as true in regard to the loss of our friends, but we can in most cases hope that the worst is not true. When we consider the conditions on the fighting lines; the great numbers of men engaged; the confusion amidst the roar of bursting shells and thundering guns; battalions riddled with shot and shell; the deafened, blinded and stunned survivors; the ground ploughed by shells or covered with wounded; the necessity of ceaseless vigilance in face of the enemy—when we consider all these conditions we can see how unfavourable things are for getting accurate information as to the fate of individuals. There is no intention to mislead, but it is evident that persons interested send the best or worst they think they know, which must in thousands of cases be mere assumption. While we may naturally expect the worst in regard to those we are interested in, we still can hope that the worst may not be true and that out of the welter of carnage our [illegible] ones may, as thousands have done, come through sound and [illegible]thless. We must school ourselves to hope and wait.

HUGHES AND HUGHES.

It is said as a capital objection to Ex-Governor Hughes as a "runner up" for the Republican nomination in the United States, that he "talks" talk enough. We have it said of our own Hughes—Sir Sam—that he talks—enough, anyway. If we could fuse these two and compound the taciturn and the loquacious, into a composite man he would be about right in regard to the matter of mouth. As a rule great talkers are not great doers; but in the case of our own talkative Sir Sam the exception proves the rule. He can work as well as talk.

By the way, what has become of Sir Sam? We haven't seen his name in the headlines for a long time. Can it be that he is suffering from "shell shock" or as is more probable, is he busy at his knitting, lying low and working hard? Very probably. A former principal of the Collegiate Institute, when he told newspaper reporters that he had no news, added the remark that "when the school was running on all right, doing its appointed business properly—there was no news." On this principle we may conclude that when Sir Sam is lying low and keeping mum he is doing business, buckling down to work.

Let us now speed all the work that we can, especially if we get together the rest of the 500,000 army. Canada is to provide. Sir Sam in his [illegible] and less restrained comments [illegible] commanding, made nothing of Canada raising half a million men. But [illegible] has shown that armies do not altogether raise themselves; that there must be organization and—registration; there must be systematic exercise of authority in the work of reaching, and fetching, recruits. Canada has done well. She has raised nearly a quarter of a million of spanking good soldiers. But the spirit of Canadians has been a big help and the energetic and organized work of patriotic private citizens have given the chief lift. Unfortunately we have too little to thank the government for in the matter of recruiting. The government thankfully takes the recruits the Patriotic Leagues got together and equipped them and is drilling them. But the government does not seem to take enough official, vital and effective interest in recruiting. The National Service League, with, perhaps, conscription in its eye, nevertheless pertinently suggests a useful manner in which the government can take an interest in and help recruiting. Te essence of the proposal is a military census of the men of Canada from eighteen years and upward, specifying whether married or unmarried, and classifying the men according to occupation and the need of their services at home in the matter of industrial and munitions production. We should then know better what military material we have available and thus more practically and successfully direct appeals for recruiting. Talk may be trumpet-tongued, but unless organized action is joined to it it becomes as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

THE GERMAN CHANT OF "VICTORY."

Germany in her delusion as to the advantage of a policy of lying and deceit, thinking she would get great advantage from the prompt and lying report of a great naval victory off Jutland, has met another of the continuous procession of failures of her favourite policy. Germany, with her usual unfortunate enterprise, got out to the world first her story of the battle. She impudently claimed that she had crushed the whole British Grand Fleet and that her own losses could be counted on the fingers of a hand and the dupes at home believed it and dupes at home, celebrated the great "victory." The Examiner at the time counselled calmness under the reported calamity, and pointed out that when the truth came out from British sources it would be found that the German claims were exaggerated if not directly opposed to the truth. It needed little prophetic vision to forecast this result, if one only remembered, that the German policy had been to feed their people on lies to conceal the truth and allay the growing home discontent over continuous failures.

We all know what the result of Jutland really was—a staggering blow to the Germans and a tremendous loss of ships. Germans, which had at the first stage of the lying, no losses worth mentioning, is compelled gradually to let the truth out. A despatch received this morning states that Germany admits the additional loss of a large battle cruiser, the Lutzow, of 28,000 tons, and a speed of thirty knots, and another cruiser of smaller tonnage.

What good has this lying done? It has less deceived than disgusted the outside world, and if it has, for the moment, deceived the German people, the latter will expect the "victorious" German navy to make another successful raid, and this time capture London. The German people don't realise that they cannot expect this from a battered fleet, now knocked out and laid up for repairs in the naval base of Wilhelmstrasse, which is so jealously guarded that nobody is allowed to get a peep at the "victorious" navy under the ship surgeons' hands.

The net result of the German lying over its moonshine "victory" is that the Germans have, if possible, additionally lost prestige abroad, and when the truth filters in upon the minds of the German people, they will lose a great deal of the little confidence they have yet left in their sea lords and war lords, and will additionally realise that the circle of doom that rings the central empires round is growing smaller and becoming tighter every day.

A sequel result will be that the Russian drive in the East need not fear disturbance at the northern end of the line by a German naval raid by way of the Gulf of Riga. Before the German fleet is patched up, Russia will have a chance to give her drive the maximum of force and decisive blows may be struck on all battle fronts. The more the German "victory" of Jutland is studied and considered the more it is found to be a great and important victory for the British fleet and an important help to the allies of the Entente. The chief regret is that the victorious German fleet did not, instead of running away, stay to put the coup de grace to Britain's sea power. The German chant of victory is as idiotic and impotent as the German "Chant of Hate."

Futility of the Terrorizing Tactics of the Teutons

Ever since the naval battle off Jutland the British Admiralty has been forced to make continued denials of German official allegations of British losses. German's attempt to conceal her own losses have failed. The German government evidently realises the world now understands that the German navy received more than it gave. The latest claim of the German government, despite the emphatic British denial, that the Warspite, the Princess Royal, the Turbulent, the Nestor, and the Acasta were sunk is palpably made with a view to offsetting the knowledge of the grievous loss of German battleships. That loss is leaking out in Germany, hence the depression following the premature cheers over victory.

But there is a deeper purpose in these claims of Germany. It is the same purpose that is moving her to such desperate attempts on land and sea just now. The German government hopes to terrorize her adversaries into a belief that they cannot win. In hopes to make them accept peace in the belief that Germany is stronger than she is, that she cannot be beaten.

And why does Germany desire to force peace now? Because it is Germany that is beaten. She cannot afford to go on as long as the Allies. She knows that in the end she must succumb. The sacrifices she is making before Verdun, and before the British front in Flanders, the sacrifices of her navy, are the stakes she is risking in the gambler's effort to deceive the Allies, to bring the war to an end before she is forced to admit defeat. A few weeks ago she threw out her peace feelers. She was willing to make peace. The Allies emphatically would have none of it So the German war lords think to terrorize the British and the French into a departure from their determination. They hope to make them believe that victory is impossible.

The Kaiser's address to the navy following the Jutland battle (reported this afternoon) is part of the plan as is also the false German claims of British losses. It is meant for consumption in England. It is hoped that the British peoples who in the last analysis control the government will believe the German claims of victory. The Germans desire that the British people should think their supremacy on the sea is weakened, that they should fear what the future has in store. The whole purpose is conveyed in the words of Germany's supreme war lord: "The start which you have made WILL CAUSE FEAR TO CREEP INTO THE BONES OF THE ENEMY." The onslaught in Flanders is made with the same object.

But Kaiser William and his assisting war lords do not yet know the nature of the British people. They will not understand it till the war is over. The arrogant Prussian thinks courage is confined to his own race. With the mind of a bully, he thinks a show of force or the administration of punishment will sicken his foe of the fight. On this he is depending for the avoidance of his fate. But the Prussian idea will not serve where the British people are concerned They cannot be cowered or terrorized. Even were their punishment as great and their losses as severe as Germany is attempting to make them believe, the effect would be the reverse of what the German war lords are striving for. They would only set their jaws a little firmer. They would answer by fighting the harder. Even though they saw defeat ahead, they would not give up while the enemy had the advantage. They would fight on and repay as much as they could till they could fight no more, till there were none left to fight. A reverse to British arms has always drawn more Britishers to the colors than a victory. It is their breed—a breed the bullying Prussian will only understand when he accepts terms of peace that are dictated from London, Paris, and Petrograd

What is to follow this German attempt at terrorization? Would Germany make such sacrifices if she were not forced to stake all in the final hope? Would she have risked her fleet to an encounter with the British navy unless she were desperate? Would she continue to throw her men away by the tens of thousands at Verdun? Is there any explanation except that Germany is playing her last card, that, having announced that she is ready for peace she is making her last attempt to frighten the Allies into accepting peace? This attempt will fail. France Britain, and Russia will not be terrorized. Then, what has German behind her present bluster? If she had the [illegible] to fight to a conclusion she would not want peace. She hasn't it. When her effort at terrorization expends itself there will be failure. Germany's weakness will stand exposed. Her game is up when this present desperate move is over.

Britain and her allies will have progressed a long distance towards victory and the end of the war when they have demonstrated to Germany that they cannot be bullied and frightened. When the monetary strength that Germay is displaying in her effort to frighten them has been wiped aside, there will be only weakness behind it.

THE WEST OPTIMISTIC.

J. W. Gundy, of Wood, Gundy and Company, the Well known Toronto financial firm, has returned home highly elated over the manner in which the West is getting on its feet financially. No doubt it has surprised many eastern people. Still, westerners were confident of the outcome, for they well knew the adaptability of the people west of the Great Lakes.—Moose Jaw News.

THE GERMAN LIAR NEAR HOME.

According to a paper in Great Falls, Montana, a number of men have been giving drill exhibitions on the street there "just to keep in touch with the steps they learned recently in Canada, where they were conscripted for the army." Their story is that they were forced to join the Canadian army or pay $6 a month. One of them went into great detail for the benefit of the paper's readers.

I was a member of the 188rd battalion at Lethbridge, he declared, They are recruiting this troop again as during the early part of the war all but one of the brave Highlanders were killed in a charge against the Germans when the enemy had sounded the English bugle to charge. They were trapped in a wheat field.

The gentleman has some imagination. The fact is that the raising of the Highland regiment at Lethbridge was only authorized during the past winter and that no one has heard of any casualties in connection with it. He goes on to tell how, being of German descent, he didn't like the idea of fighting Germans and especially disliked wearing kilts, so he gave up his half-section, on which he was about to prove up, and beat it for the border, hanging his Scotch uniform on a fence at the earliest opportunity. When a paper so near the Canadian boundary will publish stuff like this, the way of the liar is bound to be very easy as he gets further south.—Edmonton Journal.

IS THIS TRUE.

Canadians on the battlefield have won laurels that will never fade. But in Canada itself the heroic spirit has not by any means prevailed over the general worldliness. Men who may be capable of rising to great heights of altruism are showing the most shameful selfishness. They seem to be untouched by the trials, sacrifices and heroisms of their splendid fellow-countrymen at the front, in whose ranks war is making such fearful havoc these days. If men were more in the habit of meditating upon life and its obligations, and less addicted to pleasure and to the reading of the most inferior fiction, their minds would have a better chance to work upon the facts of the war and to be occupied with less ignoble thoughts than those now engaging them. Many a man would then become a valorous recruit who is now a shirker.—Mail and Empire.

DUNLOP AUTOMOBILE TIRES
SPECIAL TREAD
TRACTION TREAD
1894-1916
"I was the first to make an auto tire—or any type of tire—in Canada. That's why I speak positively on the tire subject. I have always maintained that you get the same quality in a tire that you get in the maker of that tire—High Sense of Values: High Record of Results. Also, to my way of thinking, Tire-Mileage is nothing else than the ability to deliver. Notice that 'Dunlop' and 'Deliver' commence with the same letter.
"Dunlop 'Traction' and Dunlop 'Special'—and the rest of the Dunlop Tire Family—have been O.K.'d by me—the Quality Censor."

KITCHENER OF KHARTOUM WAS THE IDOL OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Greatest Soldier Leader Since Wellington Was the Secretary of State For War Who Perished Yesterday in the Sinking of the Hampshire—Work Was the Only Thing That Interested Him.

A MAN OF IRON NERVE

Britain's greatest soldier since Wellington was Kitchener of Khartoum—better known throughout the British Empire as "K. of K." Never had Britain a soldier-leader who inspired and held the confidence of the nation as did Horatio Herbert Kitchener. He now passes out in his 66th year.

He was the firs Earl Kitchener of Khartoum and Broome. His title now goes to his brother, Lieut.-Col. H. T. C. Kitchener, his heir. Kitchener never married. He had not time for women. His title was not a thing of favouritism. It was the nation's thanks for services rendered.

Thought Only of Work.

He was made a baron in 1898, and in 1902 became a viscount, with "of Khartoum" added to his name because of his signal success in the Soudan campaign. In 1909 he became field marshal. In 1914, when the world war flamed out, it was Kitchener that they called to the post of Secretary of War, where he has remained ever since. First thing he did when he went into the War Office was to have a bed brought into the building so that he would not need to leave it. Work was the only thing that interested K. of K.
